Cohen, Alfred J., ["Alan Dale," pseud.] His own image: a novel. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham Co., 1899. c. 4-810 p. D. cl., $1.50. [615]

A popular actor is the hero. His overweening conceit and self-love, his ignorance and jealousy, are depicted most graphically. He is cast into the background in a new play by his leading actress, a young girl he has befriended and feigned to love. Hatred fills his heart towards her, and leads to a startling climax.

Findlater, Jane Helen. Rachel. N. Y., Doubleday & McClure Co., 1899. c. 2-297 p. D. cl., $1.25. [619]

This story traces the development of Michael Fletcher, a modern prophet, whose wonderful mental and spiritual gifts and power over his auditors finally led him into devious paths. The scene is largely in Edinburgh and in London, and the sect of the Foreseers, whose leader Michael becomes, typifies some of the "free lance" tendencies of modern religious thought.

- An English ex-army officer who has lived many years through gambling turns respectable and retires to a London suburb with his daughter, hoping to gain for her some social standing. But his past follows him here. An old partner in vice finds him out, and through a threat of betraying a damaging secret endeavors to win the daughter for his wife. Though the man has inherited a title and a fortune the girl remembers him well in the past and detests him. A long and involved plot follows, in which murders, detectives, adventurers, and gamblers play a part.

- Joshiah Forbes had been trained in the strictest tenets of a New England education. After graduating at Harvard, and having tried life in the army, and been a tutor in a western college, he finds himself at thirty-five an insurance clerk in New York City. He drifts into an intrigue with an ignorant young girl which his conscience quickly ends. He then marries a New England woman of fine intellect and of many virtues. The author makes a subtle study out of his unsatisfied life, with its constant clash of heart and intellect, and the tragical outcome.

TRAVEL.

(See "Description.")

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MARCH 11, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament therunto."—LORD BACON.

THE SPRING OUTLOOK.

THE condition of the United States to-day is particularly favorable to the business interests of the country. Europe has strong confidence in our securities and present developments in regard to foreign trade, and the remarkable creditor position that this nation is maintaining would indicate that American financial and commercial prosperity was never more assured than now. The abundance of money is helping business generally, and unless the speculative movement is overdone there should be little reason to fear a return of such a period of depression as we have struggled through during the "seven lean years" since 1892.

Our publishers also seem imbued with the spirit of energy and confidence abroad in the land and have made ready to issue a goodly supply of books that, if handled by the booksellers in the same spirit, ought to make the coming season a profitable one for the book trade of the United States. A glance at the announcements shows that the literature of commerce and of knowledge, written by men who make a profession of writing for a livelihood and take their cue from the publishers and the questions of the hour, still holds the upper hand against the highest type of literature—the permanent and disinterested literature of art and universal truth.

The absorbing interest of foreign politics, the desire to learn more and more facts about the conquered lands at our door and those thousands of miles away, the great battle about to be fought between democracy and trusts and monopolies, the questions of church jurisdiction—to mention but a few of the many topics—all have been handled, and some by most competent hands, in the books announced for Spring publication, which may be roughly classified as the literature of commerce.

To it belong such books as "The United States of Europe on the Eve of a Parliament of Peace," "Democracy and Empire," "Theory of the Leisure Class," "Can We Disarm?" "Municipal Monopolies," "The Word Protestant in Literature," "The Ritual Crisis," "The Constitutional Authority of Bishops in the Catholic Church," and a bewildering variety of handbooks of instruction for citizens, dealing with every phase of the rights, duties, and responsibilities of citizens. The department of Arts and Sciences and of Description and Geography is full of the literature of knowledge, which, as knowledge is essentially progressive, must always be impermanent, although very valuable in its day, and always sure of a market if it is reliable and the work of experts. To insure these qualifications our publishers invest munificently.

Still among the many hundreds of books announced for the Spring of 1899, there are a sufficient number "to save the city" of true literature, books that may be read in years to come by those who are surrounded by a totally new literature of commerce, and have lived to see the hardly won learning of this year's literature of knowledge refuted by or absorbed into that of their own day. Of such are the biographies of Cardinal Newman as Anglican and Catholic, of Archbishop Benson, of Spinoza, George Borrow, Francis Turner Palgrave, William Morris, Felix S. Moscheles, the artist whose reminiscences cover so much that is musical and artistic, of Wagner and of Seidl, his greatest practical interpreter. And among works of biography that can even to-day help true Americans to appreciate their country's ideals and to solve its problems are the lives of James Russell Lowell, of Edwin M. Stanton, and of Thaddeus Stevens, and a work on "The Jacksonian Epoch."

As ever, fiction is in the lead for numbers. It will please a large constituency to know that posthumous works may be looked for from Harold Frederic and Maria Louise Pool, and that Crawford and Miss Wilkins are also to help American writers hold their own among novel-readers. Publishers have furnished books that have timely and salable qualities. Booksellers should study their environment, and buy with good commercial insight into the tastes and interests of their special constituency.

DESCRIPTIVE SUMMARY OF THE SPRING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

THE descriptive summary which here follows presents as usual, in its alphabetical arrangement by the publishers, a survey of the entire field, so far as the necessary information is at hand. Other books, not yet fully determined upon, will find mention in subsequent issues. In our announcement lists proper the books will be found arranged by classes, while the advertising pages will afford further detailed information as to prices, sizes, styles, etc.

THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCE will publish several important books in the early spring, full titles of which appear in the preceding classified list under the heading Politics, Sociology and Economics.

THE AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Philadelphia, announce "The Wind Flower," by Caroline Atwater Mason, and "For Shine and Shade," by Wayland Hoyt.

THE AMERICAN BOOK COMPANY announce their usual list of books intended for school use, full titles of which appear in the preceding list under the heading Education, Language, etc. Among the standard works with which the scholars are to be made acquainted are Heyse's "L'Arrabiata," arranged by Max Lentz; Scott's "Kenilworth," annotated by Norris; "Selections from the Goncourts," edited by A. G. Cameron, of Princeton University; and the "Crowning of Charles v.," edited by Hermann Schoenfeld, of the Columbian University, Washington, from Ranke's "Universal German History."

D. APPLETON & Co. lean strongly toward fiction in their preparations for spring and announce a full dozen of novels for the coming season of summer rest. At present writing little beyond the titles can be given of these forthcoming stories: "A Duet with an Occasional Chorus," by A. Conan Doyle; "The Mormon Prophet," by Lily Dougall, author of "Beggars All"; "Love Among the Lions," by F. Anstey; "Snow on the Headlight," a story of the great Burlington strike, by Cy Warman; "The Procession of Life," by Horace Annesley Vachell; "By Berwen Banks," by Allen Raine; "Pharos, the Egyptian," by Guy Boothby; "Paul Carah, Cornishman," by Charles Lee; "Pursued by the Law," by J. MacLaren Cobban; "Madame Izan," a tourist story, by Mrs. Campbell-Præd; "The Kingdom of Hate," by T. Gallon; "Lady Barbarity," by J. C. Snaith; and "A Cosmopolitan Comedy," by Anna Robeson Brown. An interesting contribution to biography will be the life history of John Sartain, which he will write himself under the title "The Reminiscences of a Very Old Man, 1808-1897." This English-American engraver who came to America in 1820 made his mark as an artist in mezzotint, and his autobiography will be of great interest to fellow-artists. The new volume in the Great Commanders Series will be "Admiral Porter," by J. R. Soley. Historical works in preparation include volume 5 of McMaster's "History of the People of the United States," covering the period from 1821-1837; "A History of American Privateers," by Edgar S. Maclay, to be uniform with his "History of the United States Navy"; and "Spain," by F. A. Ober, which will be added to History for Young Readers Series. The department of education holds a high place with these publishers. Among the latest books arranged for are three new volumes in the International Education Series:

"Letters to a Mother," by Susan E. Blow; "Education by Development," by Frederick Froebel; and "Montaigne's Education of Children," by Dr. L. R. Rector. The new Home-Reading Books will be "Our Navy in War Time," by Franklin Matthews; "Harold's Quest," by J. W. Troeger; "About the Weather," by Mark W. Harrington; and "The Story of the Fishes," by J. N. Baskett. A valuable descriptive work will be "The Story of Geographical Discovery," by Joseph Jacobs; and there will be some important medical works, of which full titles are given in the classified list in this issue under the heading Medicine and Hygiene.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD & Co. will publish at once a very important book on "The Cupola Furnace," a practical treatise, by Edward Kirk, on the construction and management of foundry cupolas. The author is a practical moulder and melter, and is also ranked consulting expert in melting. The work is illustrated by excellent engravings.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR Co. have in press a biography of George Müller, of Bristol, the philanthropist and "exponent of prayer," prepared with the consent of Dr. Müller's family, by Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D., who also has had the co-operation of Dr. Müller's son-in-law, who has written an introduction for the volume; "From the Child's Standpoint," a collection of studies of child nature and child life, by Florence Hull Winterburn, written with that sympathetic insight into the heart of childhood for which the author is so justly noted; a new book on "Wild Flowers," by E. M. Hardinge, with illustrations; and "Vedānta Philosophy," lectures by Swāmi Vivekānandā, on Rāya Yoga and other subjects, with a carefully revised and enlarged glossary. A new edition is also preparing of Florence Hull Winterburn's "Nursery Ethics," which is spoken of as one of the best books upon the general subject of the relations of parents and children, and the duties of the former.

A. S. BARNES & Co. will have shortly a new edition of "Barnes' Popular History of the United States," which has been brought down to date to include the history of the Spanish-American War; and a third edition of Lieutenant Ford's "An American Cruiser in the East," for which the author, who is chief engineer of Dewey's fleet, has collected additional photographs of the Philippine Islands and their inhabitants. New books which promise to be of rare interest are announced in "America in the Far East," by Dr. William E. Griffis, whose writings on Korea, Japan, China, Holland, etc., are acknowledged "standards"; "History Up to Date," by William A. Johnston, a short, crisp chronicle of the Spanish-American War; and "Miss Content Cradock," a new story of Colonial New England, by Annie Elliot Trumbull, introducing Roger Williams, and giving an accurate historic picture of the Puritans.

BENZIGER BROTHERS have just ready "A Pious Preparation for First Holy Communion," by Rev. F. X. Lasance, also giving exercises for a retreat of three days; a new revised edition of "Introduction to a Devout Life," by St. Francis de Sales; and "A Picture Prayer-Book for Children," with illustrations in color; and several other books classified in the preceding list under Religion and Philosophy.

DREXEL BIDDLE, Philadelphia, has in press "Giles Ingilby," by W. E. Norris, said to be fully up to his very best work, a romance to be illustrated by F. S. Spence; and "An Atlantic Tragedy," one of William Clark Russell's most fascinating marine stories. Both these novels will be issued in April.

P. BLAKISTON'S SON & Co. announce several important books, full titles of which appear in the preceding classified list under the heading Medicine and Hygiene.

BOERICKE & TAFEL, Philadelphia, have in press new editions of several of their standard homœopathic text-books and some new works by authors of standing in their specialties. Full titles of all these forthcoming publications appear in the preceding classified list under the heading Medicine, Hygiene, etc.

A. I. BRADLEY & Co., Boston, will issue several new books, among which the more important are "Maidens Three," by A. Fraser Robertson; "In the Heart of the Hills," by Hattie E. Colter; "The Cleverest Woman in England," by L. T. Meade; and "Face to Face With Napoleon," by O. V. Caine.

THE BURROWS BROTHERS COMPANY, Cleveland, O., have just ready a reprint, limited to 250 copies, of C. S. Rafinesque's "Ichthyologia Ohienensis," giving the natural history of the fishes inhabiting the Ohio River and its tributary streams. This reprint is verbatim et literatim, and to it is added a sketch of the life and ichthyologic work of Rafinesque, who died in 1842, and also a bibliography of his ichthyologic work, compiled by Richard Ellsworth Call.

CASSELL & Co., LIMITED, have just ready "Wild Life at Home: how to study and photograph it," by R. Kearton, with nearly 100 illustrations from photographs taken direct from nature by the author's brother, Cherry Kearton. This book has been eagerly expected for some time by all who appreciated the notable work done in "With Nature and a Camera," by the same artists in word-painting and photography. A very handsome volume will also be made of "The Royal Academy Pictures, 1899," illustrating the 131st exhibition of the Royal Academy, and giving about 250 reproductions of Academy pictures, which furnish a vivid idea of their originals. Since the date of its first issue, this annual publication has occupied a unique position on account of the beauty and excellence of its fine art pictures, the representative character of the works selected, and the adequate size of its reproductions. A work sure of appreciative reception will be found in "Sights and Scenes in Oxford City and University," described by Thomas Whitaker, of Exeter College, illustrated with 100 plates after original photographs. This work will have an introduction by George Saintsbury, who is certainly in sympathy with his great subject.

THE CHEMICAL PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Pa., will publish shortly a book by Prof. Harry Snyder, entitled "Soils and Fertilizers," which is said to be fully up to date and to contain some valuable information based upon recent discoveries, presented in practical shape.

THE ROBERT CLARKE Co., Cincinnati, hope to have ready by April 1 a volume of "Selected Essays of Rev. Dr. Isaac M. Wise," the great Jewish leader, now approaching his eightieth birthday. The editing of this volume has been entrusted to Rabbi David Philipson and Rabbi Louis Grossman, of the Alumni of the Hebrew Union College. A biography of Dr. Wise and three portraits will be included. The edition will be limited to the orders received before publication. The volume will be a very valuable addition to the history of Jewish life in America.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. announce for early issue "Between Cæsar and Jesus," eight original and remarkable lectures delivered in Chicago by George D. Herron, designed to show the relation of the Christian conscience to the economic problem and the social system. Dr. Herron holds modern civilization and conventional Christianity responsible for most of the terrible evils that crush the vast majority of men, and his book is destined to make readers think. "Municipal Monopolies," for which the text is furnished by Edward W. Bemis, John R. Commons, Frank Parsons, M. N. Baker, F. A. C. Perrine, and Max West, will be issued as volume XVI. of Crowell's Library of Economics and Politics. It will deal specially with the question, Shall we have public regulation, or public ownership and operation? If the former, What shall be the nature of the regulation? If the latter, What are the dangers to be avoided? "How Count Tolstoy Lives and Works" is translated by Isabel F. Hapgood from the Russian of P. Sergeyenko, who wrote this brochure last fall on the occasion of a demonstration planned to celebrate the seventieth birthday of Tolstoy, which was, however, forbidden in Russia. The book gives very interesting details of the daily life of one whom the author calls "one of the most remarkable men in the history of mankind." The illustrations of this book will be quite new to American readers. An important contribution to the study of literature will be "Contemporary French Novelists," by René Doumic, translated by Mary D. Frost. The authors, whose work Doumic analyzes with justice and delicacy, are Octave Feuillet, the Goncourt brothers, Emile Zola, Alphonse Daudet, Paul Bourget, Maupassant, Pierre Loti, Edouard Rod, J. H. Rosny, Paul Hervieu, J. K. Huysmans, and René Bazin. Prof. Edwin A. Grosvenor, of Amherst, will have a volume on "Contemporary History," and he has also translated Duruy's "Ancient History," which will appear almost immediately.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have several interesting books in active preparation. The two works of biography announced cover characters as far apart as the poles. "The Life of Dr. Robert William Dale," by his son, gives a sympathetic account of the author of "Christ and the Future Life." Dr. Dale was born in 1829, and in 1853 became a Congregational minister in Birmingham, England. K. Waliskewski, the brilliant author of "The Romance of an Empress" (Catherine II. of Russia), has written a biography of "Mariesienka" (or Mariesiencka), which Lady Mary Loyd has translated. "Mariesienka" was the Polish pet name of Marie d'Arquien, a French woman born in the late seventeenth century, a contemporary of Charles II., Mazarin, and Louis XIV. She went to Poland as a child, and after many intrigues became Queen of Poland as the wife of John Sobieski. An important contribution to Ruskin literature will be "Ruskin's Letters to Rossetti and Others." The fiction announced includes "Thou and the Other One," a new novel by Amelia E. Barr, who continues to have a charm all her own; "The Enchanted Stone," by Lewis Hand, a mystical romance of Oriental characters who play their parts in London; "The Silver Cross," by S. R. Keightley, author of "The Crimson Sign"; "The Garden of Swords," by Max Pemberton, which was much talked about during its serial career in Munsey's Magazine; and a collection of stories of the Civil War by Ira S. Dodd, first issued in McClure's Magazine, to be brought out as "The Song of the Rappahannock." Many works of fiction on the lists of these publishers will also be grouped and known as the Ajax and the Phoenix series. For titles consult the preceding classified list under Fiction, and also under Description and Travel. Religious books will be "The Restored Innocence," by R. J. Campbell, a new issue in the Little Books on Religion, and "The Commandments of Jesus," by R. F. Horton. Poetry will be represented by a second series of "Poems" by Paul Laurence Dunbar; and "My Lady's Slipper," a volume of verse by Dora Sigerson, now Mrs. Clement K. Shorter. Grant Allen has prepared a new and original guide-book for the principal countries of Europe, to be entitled "The European Tour"; and a comprehensive and amusing history of games of chance will be called "The Gambling World," written by an expert who figures as "Rouge et Noir"; Katherine Lyttelton has made a compilation of "Joubert's Thoughts," for which Mrs. Humphry Ward has furnished a scholarly preface; and an anonymous hand has made an ingenious book in which to jot down notes and impressions of books, which will be called "Books I Have Read."

DOUBLEDAY & MCCLURE Co. have just issued "The Fight for Santiago," by Stephen Bonsal, who has done for the American soldier before Santiago what Kinglake did for the English soldier before Sebastopol. Another authoritative account of naval operations during the late war will be "With Sampson Through the War," by W. A. M. Goode, with chapters by Sampson, Captain Robley D. Evans, and Commander C. C. Todd, who describes the fight at Cardenas. The department of history will also be enriched by "Memoirs of 1812-13," by Sergeant Bourgogne, compiled from the original manuscripts by Paul Cottin, a sergeant in a regiment of the Emperor Napoleon's Old Guard, who went through the terrible Russian campaign and endured to the full the terrific hardships of those famous soldiers who "grumbled but followed always." Specially timely books are announced in "The Real Hawaii," by Lucien Young, of the United States Navy, an authoritative work upon the history and present condition of our newly acquired possessions, with an appendix containing an elaborate array of statistical information; and in "The United States of Europe on the Eve of the Parliament of Peace," by W. T. Stead, who gives a summary of the present political situation all over the world, embodying interviews with the Czar of Russia and the leading statesmen of Europe, with special relation to American "Expansion" and the Russian Peace Rescript. A number of works of fiction are in active preparation. The masterpiece of the real Cyrano de Bergerac, entitled "A Voyage to the Moon," will be issued with introduction and notes by Curtis Hidden Page, of Columbia University. Readers of "Cyrano" will remember the ways in which M. Rostand's hero got to the moon, described in his interview with the Duke. In this book will be found the original ideas from which these fancies were drawn. "The Black Douglas," by S. R. Crockett, is a romance of the fifteenth century dealing with a William Douglas, who, as a boy of twenty-one, "held all Scotland south of the Tay in the hollow of his hand, who coined money at his own mint, and rode abroad with a more than regal train." "The Hungarian Nabob," by Maurus Jokai, has obtained the reputation of a national classic in Hungary, and is now very well translated for English readers by R. Nisbet Bain; and W. A. Fraser, a new writer of great promise, will have a collection of short stories, entitled "The Eye of God and Other Tales of East and West." The author is equally at home in India and Burmah and in Canada and the Far West of the United States, and his tales have great variety of subject and a ring of reality and life. Mrs. Caroline A. Mason's "The Minister of Carthage" is said to be equal to her highly praised "A Minister of the World"; there will be a new novel by Frank Norris, entitled "McTeague," dealing with the curse of money; "Two Men of Mendip," by Walter Raymond, will tell a pathetic story of life in Western England; and there is to be a five-volume set, in paper, of "Tales from McClure's," classifying the best short stories that have appeared in the magazine under the headings Romance, Humor, The West, Adventure and War. In "The Professor's Daughter" Anna Farquhar will tell a story of an old man of books who is forced by his daughter's failing eyesight to take her to a primitive Rhode Island seacoast village, where both father and daughter learn much from nature they had never found in books; and all will be delighted that Mary E. Wilkins will furnish a new novelette, entitled "The Jamesons," the name of reformers who come to a New England village and introduce its humdrum inhabitants to Browning, Ibsen, and Maeterlinck, as well as to æsthetics and "new dress." What Miss Wilkins can make of such material can be imagined and will be eagerly looked for. The publishers have already in press "Nature's Garden," by Neltje Blanchan, containing colored and other photographs made directly from the living wild flowers. These are classified in separate lists according to color, to their months of blooming, and to their preferred localities or habitats, and, finally, according to their proper families by that scientific classification adopted by the International Botanical Congress, which has now superseded all others. "How to Plan the Home Grounds," by S. Parsons, of the Society of Landscape Architects, will give practical directions for laying out the home grounds, selection of site, the care and making of roads and paths, lawns, woodlands, hedges, gardens, selection of plants and trees, etc. In a second section he treats of the village improvements, designed to elevate public taste as it concerns the highways, the school-houses, the stations, and the village outdoor life generally. A valuable contribution to history and art will be a very limited edition of "Life Masks of Great Americans," printed from type by De Vinne. These masks are the work of Charles Browere, and Charles Henry Hart has supplied the very valuable text. A volume of poetry by Martha Gilbert Dickinson, the niece of the gifted Abolition lecturer so familiar to patriotic audiences a generation ago, will be entitled "Within the Hedge." Edmund Clarence Stedman, Richard Burton, and other experts have pronounced Miss Dickinson's work very good. The Temple edition of Dickens has already progressed to ten volumes, and the remaining thirty are promised within the year. "The Kipling Calendar for 1900" will have 365 copyrighted selections, and Rudyard Kipling himself will supervise its compilation. Mr. Kipling, Sr., has modelled an extraordinary plaque representing a profile likeness of the author, flanked by two elephants' heads, with a figure of Mowgli and his jungle companions below. This has been reproduced exactly, in relief, making a very striking and unusually artistic calendar. There will be two editions, the regular one in heavy paper embossed, the other an édition de luxe in bronze.

THE EDITOR PUBLISHING CO., Franklin, O., will have ready during the spring "Cummings' Encyclopædia," a book of general information, compiled by Charles J. Cummings; Imperium in Imperio, a timely novel by Sutton E. Griggs; "An Odd Bequest," also a work of fiction, by Heron Fayn; and "Nonie," a juvenile story, by Lena Leoti Johnson.

R. F. FENNO & Co. will have ready shortly "Vicomte de Puyjoli," a romance of the French Revolution, by Jules Claretie, and "Brown V. C." by Mrs. Alexander, two novels which are eagerly expected. "World Politics, by 'T.," will be a volume in line with the czar's plea for peace.

HARPER & BROTHERS will have a very important biographical work in "Felix Stone Moscheles' Reminiscences," which are fragments of autobiography of the famous English portrait painter, illustrated with many photogravure portraits of notable people. The book is full of intimate, personal recollections of such men as the author's famous father, Ignaz Moscheles, the teacher of Mendelssohn, and of Joachim, Mazzini, Dupont, Rossini, Rossetti, Mendelssohn himself, who was the author's godfather, and many others who have made their mark in art and literature. And all through these stories of life-long friends are woven pictures of human life as the artist-author saw it in England, on the Continent, especially in Paris, in New York, and in Chicago. Another notable biography will be the life of the late Empress Elizabeth of Austria, written by a lady of her court, who was also an intimate personal friend of this woman who was a completely misunderstood figure in modern European politics. The book will be entitled "The Martyrdom of an Empress," and in explaining the tragedy of Mayerling, where the crown prince committed suicide, it will necessarily throw light on many strange phases of Austro-Hungarian history. Justin McCarthy's "Reminiscences," in two volumes, will be a series of descriptions and recollections of eminent men and women with whom the author has come in contact in Great Britain, Ireland, the Continent, the United States, and Canada, since he entered public life in 1852. Many notable Americans are mentioned, for the author personally met Emerson, Lowell, Wendell Phillips, Henry Ward Beecher, Horace Greeley, Charles Sumner, etc. In "A Thousand Days in the Arctic" F. G. Jackson will tell of his remarkable expedition undertaken with a view to increasing our knowledge of the fauna and flora of Franz-Josef Land and the area lying immediately north of it. Not only did Mr. Jackson find all maps and charts of this region utterly at fault, but he learned by personal observation that the long-sought path to the Pole cannot by any possibility lie that way. This overthrow of former theories will naturally be of immense value and importance to all those who are interested in the question of Polar research. Several volumes of fiction are also nearly ready. "The Capsina," by E. F. Benson, is a historical novel which, although not absolutely a sequel to "The Vintage," introduces many of the same characters, and deals with Greece during the War of Independence, 1820-1821, with which Lord Byron is so closely identified. Henry James has written "The Awkward Age," a new story of English society life, which throws a search-light upon the conduct and purposes of the mothers and daughters of the day; "The Span of Life," by William McLennan and J. N. McIlwraith, is a stirring romance of the French and Indian War. Other novels announced are "Espiritu Santo," by Henrietta Dana Skinner, and "An Incident and Other Happenings," by Sarah Barnwell Elliott. "Fur and Feather Tales," by Hamblen Sears, will contain five hunting stories, illustrated by A. B. Frost, describing sport in France, Norway, and Canada. Young people are to have "Danish Fairy and Folk Tales," translated from many authors, by J. Christian Bay.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have a long list of publications in preparation, full titles of which are given in the preceding classified list under the heading Education, Language, etc.

E. R. HERRICK & Co., New York City, will issue several volumes of attractive exterior and of varied intrinsic interest. "The Fight for Dominion," by Guy Parker, will be a tale of the first American war with Spain, in the days when the Spaniards ruled Florida and the English colonized Georgia, which is full of descriptions of battles and introduces many historical figures, including General Oglethorpe; and a realistic novelette by Garret Van Arkel, with well-executed character studies and sprightly dialogue presenting modern society life, will be entitled "And Then Came Spring." "The Quaker Colony" will be the third of the series of Colonial Monographs, by Blanche McManus, giving a short and picturesque history of the founding of the Pennsylvania Colony, embellished with characteristic illustrations, ornamentations, etc., by the author; and there will also be a prettily decorated new edition of Alfred Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," by Miss McManus, who will also decorate Grace Duffie Boylan's "Hosanna and Huzzah," a poem which gained the author the appellation of the American Kipling, given by the London Times. Of religious interest will be a volume of biographies of noted missionaries, by Rev. Dr. Thomas P. Hughes, entitled "Heroic Lives in Foreign Fields"; "Confirmation," revised from Bishop Oxenden's original and made suitable for the American Church, and a new edition of the same author's "The Earnest Communicant." A tiny book of jingling rhymes by Stafford M. Northcote, who also furnishes the pretty little accompanying pictures printed in color, will be called "Little Verses for Little People"; and there will be new editions bound in paper with the original designs of the cloth covers of Tom Hall's "An Experimental Wooling" and "The Little Lady, Some Other People and Myself"; "As Told by the Typewriter Girl," by Mabel Clare Erwin; and "If Tam O'Shanter'd Had a Wheel," by Grace Duffie Boylan.

A. J. HOLMAN & Co. make their usual seasonable additions to their already almost unlimited stock of "Holman Bibles." This great variety of family, pulpit, teachers', reference, and lodge Bibles, all with self-pronouncing text, which was an original Holman invention, are well known, popular, and salable everywhere. Prices and discounts in the Holman editions make it worth the bookseller's time to handle them energetically.

HENRY HOLT & Co.'s preliminary list of announcements includes the following in the departments of history and political science: Seignobos' remarkable "Political History of Contemporary Europe, 1814-96," which is being translated from the French under the supervision of Prof. Silas M. Macvane, of Harvard, who has carefully edited it for American needs; "The Elements of Finance," by Prof. Winthrop M. Daniels, of Princeton; "Economics," a collection of papers by the late Francis A. Walker, author of "The Wages Question," etc., edited by his friend, Prof. D. R. Dewey, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; and "Public Exposition and Argumentation," by Prof. George P. Baker, of Harvard, editor of Lyly's "Endymion," etc. In the department of literature they will bring out "Standard English Poets, from Spenser to Tennyson," edited by Henry S. Pancoast, the author of the favorably known "Introduction to English and American Literature"; and "Byron's Poems," selected and edited by Prof. F. T. Carpenter, of the Chicago University. For school use they announce "Talks to Teachers," by Prof. William James, of Harvard; "Outlines of Vertebrate Zoölogy for Colleges and Students of Medicine," by Prof. J. S. Kingsley, of Tufts College; "Flora," covering the United States and much of the British possessions in America, by Prof. N. L. Britton, of Columbia; "Elementary Astronomy," by Edward S. Holden, director of Lick Observatory; "Elementary Studies in Chemistry," by Joseph Torrey, instructor at Harvard; also a number of modern language text-books, the titles of which have not yet been fixed. The department of Education must also be consulted in the preceding classified list.

THE HOME PUBLISHING COMPANY, New York City, will have ready at once "The Adventures of a Naval Officer," by Lieutenant Warneford, a volume of short stories. For April they promise "The Epicurean," by Thomas Moore, of which the scene will be Egypt; for May, "The Gift of Bonaparte," by Robert Shortz, a romance dealing specially with Bonaparte's campaign in Italy; and in June will be issued "A Captive Princess," by Richard Henry Savage, giving descriptions of the court life of Russia, written in this well-known author's most vivid style.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have a great many books in preparation covering every department of literature. A deeply interesting book will be Dr. Edward Everett Hale's "James Russell Lowell and His Friends." Dr. Hale was a college mate of Lowell's, and spent the greater part of his life in the same surroundings, and his book is virtually a brief review of fifty years in eastern New England. Many portraits of Lowell and of Lowell's friends, and many views of places associated with brilliant lives and noble literature will brighten Dr. Hale's book. A volume of "Carlyle Letters" contains letters written by Carlyle to Mrs. Hanning, his youngest sister, who lived in Canada from 1832 until the death of Carlyle. They are most satisfactorily edited by Charles T. Copeland, lecturer on English history at Harvard University, who furnishes a biographical connection, and also an excellent introduction. Of biographical interest also is the sketch of the life of Henry Timrod, which appears in a New Memorial edition of his "Poems," the profits of which are to go towards a monument of this poet of the South, whose qualities of thought, imagination, and lyrical expression will be brought before a new generation of readers in a rich and handsome volume. George C. Gorham, who was for some time Secretary of the U. S. Senate, has written the "Life of Edwin M. Stanton," which will be issued in two volumes, will be in every sense an authentic and authorized biography of Lincoln's great war secretary, and will also be in some good degree a history of the Civil War. The same period is covered in "The Life of Thaddeus Stevens," by Samuel W. McCall, which will be added to the American Statesmen Series. The author has described the character of this valorous opponent of slavery and leader of the Radicals during the War for the Union with force and great discrimination. A just and long-needed memorial of an eminent man and officer, and a contribution of positive value to early New England history, will be "The Life and Work of Thomas Dudley, Second Governor of Massachusetts," by Augustine Jones, the successful head-master of the Friends' School in Providence, R. I., and a new Popular edition, with portraits, will be brought out of Emma Stebbins' "Charlotte Cushman: her letters and memories of her life," which will be reduced in price. A volume of distinct historic interest will be "England and America After Independence," by Edward Smith, a short examination of their international intercourse from 1783, when the Republic began, to 1872, when the Alabama claims were settled. Mr. Smith is an Englishman and his book is not wholly impartial, but although the record is by no means wholly edifying nor consistently honorable to either nation, it is timely, and it will be wholesome reading for Americans, and its review of the diplomatic relations of the countries is historically accurate throughout. John S. Wise's "The End of an Era" describes how the Confederate States came to an end with the surrender of General Johnston to General Sherman in 1865. The author was one of the leaders of Virginia. Several books of essays of great literary value are announced. Edward H. Hall has written a study of religious thought in the second century, which he has entitled "Papias and His Contemporaries." The author uses Papias, Bishop of Hierapolis in Phrygia (A.D. 130), to show the method and spirit of early Christianity. He examines the Fathers from St. Peter—Ignatius, Jerome, Marcion, Valentine, down to the third century, reviewing their works and influence. In "Psychology and Life," by Hugo Munsterberg, some of the topics treated are: The danger from experimental psychology; Psychology and the real life; Psychology and art; and Psychology and mysticism. Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the American Peace Society, in his little book, "The Federation of the World," will make a strong, reasonable appeal for a union of all civilized nations in the interest of peace—a federation of the world based on sound economic as well as humane principles; and John Fiske has written a companion volume to his little books, "The Idea of God as Affected by Modern Knowledge" and "The Destiny of Man Viewed in the Light of His Origin," which will be entitled "Through Nature to God," a work in which he seeks to solve the great mystery of evil. William Roscoe Thayer's new book treats of "The Throne-Makers," by which name he distinguishes Bismarck, Napoleon III., Kossuth, and Garibaldi. The volume also includes essays on Carlyle, Bryant, Tintoret, and Giordano Bruno. Fiction for summer reading is well under way. Mrs. Davis' "Wire-Cutters," a Texas story, and Miss Burnham's "A West Point Wooing and Other Stories," are already out. Several volumes of short stories are to be issued. "The Conjure Woman," by Charles W. Chesnut, is a collection of twelve stories dealing with negro superstitions and written in negro dialect. They are told by an Uncle Julius, a sort of distant relation to Uncle Remus in qualities of heart and humor. "Tiverton Tales," by Alice Brown, will emphasize afresh her power and skill in writing of New England rural life; and Mary Hartwell Catherwood will have a group of stories entitled "The Queen of the Swamp and Other Plain Americans," all relating to actual historic occurrences in Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois, and describing the habits and customs of pioneer life in those States. In longer novels a story quite out of the common will be offered in "A Tent of Grace," by Adeline C. Lost, dealing with the deep gulf of racial distinctions, and the impassable gulf between the Christian and the Jew. The scene is Germany in the middle of the present century, and the heroine is a Jewess who has been reared in the family of a Christian pastor. The scenes of "The Ladder of Fortune," by Frances Courtenay Baylor, shift between California and Paris, and those who have read "Claudia Hyde" know that the story is written with vivacity and skill. "The Prelude and the Play," by Rufus Mann, tells the story of a Radcliffe girl who married the captain of the Harvard eleven and finds herself unhappy for a time. This is a fine study of the different natures of man and woman which ends happily when experience has taught consideration and moderation to both. Florence Converse's successful "Diana Victrix" is to be put in the Riverside Paper Series. Milton and Keats complete are to appear in Cambridge editions; and there will be a volume of poems by Arlo Bates; a volume of newly discovered poems by Edward Rowland Sill, which will be entitled "Hermione and Other Poems"; and the "Poems of Timrod" already mentioned. Several very important works of natural science are forthcoming. The twelfth volume of Charles Sprague Sargent's "Silva of North America" is promised, which will be a delight to owners of previous volumes of this monumental work; Samuel H. Scudder has a new volume on "Everyday Butterflies"; Frederick Le Roy Sargent has prepared a volume on corn-plants (wheat, oats, barley, rice, etc.); and Olive Thorne Miller has ready a "First Book of Birds," a small encyclopædia of bird-lore, full of information put with the author's irresistible charm. "The Antigone of Sophocles" has been translated into English by George H. Palmer, of Harvard University; W. J. Rolfe has revised the "Satchel Guide for the Vacation Tourist in Europe" for 1897; and John Koran has written a companion volume to his "Liquor Problem in its Legislative Aspect," entitled "The Liquor Problem in its Economic Aspect." Several books remain unmentioned. The classified list elsewhere must be consulted in every department to find all the books the Houghtons are making ready for a busy season.

THE INTERNATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., N. Y. City, have in press for early issue "The Labor Movement," by Johann Jacoby, translated from the German by Florence Kelly; "The Pope's Socialism," by Robert Blatchford; and "What Means Socialism," by Sidney Webb.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & CO., Philadelphia, have in press for early publication "A Soul's Pilgrimage," being the autobiography of Rev. Dr. C. F. B. Miel, a man of rare gifts and culture who stands high among the most intellectual prelates of the Roman Catholic Church. He is rector of the Church of St. Sauveur in Philadelphia. The Rev. W. H. Cavanagh, of Germantown, Pa., has written a book on "The Word Protestant," defining its use in literature, history and legislation, and its introduction into the American Episcopal Church. The author advocates the simplicity of the primitive Catholic Church as the only basis to unite a divided Christendom. The argument will be supported by authorities which entitle the volume to a place among works of reference, and a chart on the "Spiritual Succession" in England will be a special feature of the book.

WILLIAM R. JENKINS will have several books intended for school use in the learning of foreign languages. For full titles consult preceding list under the heading Education, Language, etc. Later in the season this publisher will issue two books on veterinary subjects, but he is not yet ready to supply titles.

THE JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY OF AMERICA, Philadelphia, will publish this month "Chapters on Jewish Literature," by Israel Abrahams, author of "Jewish Life in the Middle Ages."

THE JOHNS HOPKINS PRESS announce their usual quota of valuable contributions to sociological and political literature, of which the separate titles are given in the preceding classified list under the heading Politics, Sociology, and Economics. It is almost certain that this year will see the completion of the work announced last spring, which was unavoidably postponed. This is "A Photographic Reproduction of the Unique Manuscript of the Kashmirian Atharva-Veda," the so-called "Paippalada-Cakha." This manuscript is written on birch bark. It consists of 287 leaves written on both sides in the Kashmirian or Sharada character (about 20 by 25 centimeters in size). Only 200 numbered copies will be issued, the work to be carefully supervised by Professor Bloomfield, of the Johns Hopkins University. This "Atharva-Veda" is the priceless and greatest treasure of the University of Tübingen.

LAIRD & LEE have added to their long list of popular books of information "A Guide to Gay 'Parce' and Every-Day French Conversation," specially compiled for American tourists intending to see the exposition in 1900, by Max Maury, of the University of Paris, full of general information and hints regarding French customs and habits, with about sixty pages of a vocabulary for shopping, ordering, and finding one's way. Under every word the pronunciation is carefully noted according to a simple system fully explained. The book has many illustrations and maps and is sure to prove very useful. A new edition in better binding is ready of "Salva-Webster Spanish-English and English-Spanish Dictionary"; and of many other of the Laird & Lee handbooks new editions are also announced. Stevens' "Mechanical Catechism" is full of practical knowledge for stationary and marine engineers, firemen, electricians, motormen, ice-machine men, and mechanics in general, and the publishers will furnish it on terms that make it worth while to push it.

JOHN LANE announces a new and profusely illustrated edition of Gilbert White's classic idyll, "The Natural History of Selborne." It will be a quarto volume of almost the same size as the original edition of 1789, the only one printed in the author's lifetime, and will form a fitting companion to "The Compleat Angler," published by Mr. Lane two years ago, and illustrated by the same artist. White's "Observations on Nature" and "Poems," added subsequently to the original edition, will be included; also some interesting and hitherto unpublished notes by Samuel Taylor Coleridge. The work is edited by Grant Allen, who supplies a biographical and critical introduction and notes. Edmund H. New has devoted nearly two years to the illustrations, of which there are 200, including drawings and maps of Selborne and the surrounding country, as it is at present and as it appeared in White's time; and of the birds, etc., more particularly described. There are also photogravure portraits of White's correspondents and fellow-naturalists, Thomas Pennant and Daines Barrington. Each letter will be headed with a decorated initial. Mr. Lane also announces an edition of Ben Jonson's celebrated comedy, "Volpone, or the Fox," embellished with a cover design, a frontispiece in line, and five initial letters, decorative and illustrative, reproduced in half-tone from pencil drawings by the late Aubrey Beardsley, together with a critical essay on the author of the play by Vincent O'Sullivan, and a eulogy of the artist by Robert Ross. The volume is intended as an édition de luxe, and will be printed on demy quarto paper of good quality, and bound in blue cloth, with an elaborate design in gold by Beardsley.

T. S. LEACH & Co., Philadelphia, announce two new works for students of social questions. "A Handbook of Labor Literature" will be compiled by Helen Marot, the founder and librarian of the Free Library of Economics and Political Science, Philadelphia. The other volume is rather sensationally entitled "Pauperizing the Rich." Its author, Alfred J. Ferris, is neither anarchistic nor socialistic. This book neither upholds the single tax, the people's party, nor the free silver propaganda. Its aim, as stated in the preface, is "to be as conservative as the Liberty and Property Defence League and as radical as the Socialists. It accepts, at least in spirit, the aspirations of the most visionary reformers, and attempts to reach their substantial fulfilment by a measure which yet respects the great underlying principles of the existing social system, and will stand the closest scrutiny of the practical intellect." Among those who have given of their time and knowledge to the preparing of this work are: Professors Richard T. Ely, Edward W. Bemis, John R. Commons, Jeremiah W. Jenks, Frederic W. Spehrs, and Henry R. Seager; and also Morrison I. Swift, Benjamin R. Tucker, Mrs. Eliza W. Twitchell, and James F. Rhodes.

LEE & SHEPARD announce "Fighting in Cuban Waters," by Edward Stratemeyer, being the third and concluding volume of the Old Glory Series, which already contains "Under Dewey at Manila," and "A Young Volunteer in Cuba; or, Fighting for the Single Star." The new volume will describe operations under Schley on the Brooklyn. Katherine H. Newcomb's "Helps to Right Living" issue to be as suggestive and uplifting as her former volumes, which were written to build up fine American characters. There will also be new editions of George Makepeace Towle's "Young People's History of England," Charles B. Newcomb's "All's Right with the World," Richard Dare's "Venture," and "Oliver Bright's Search." A long list of books for young people will be found in the classified list under the heading Juvenile Literature. Among the more important of these will be "An Undivided Union," by Oliver Optic, the sixth volume in the Blue and Grey Series; "Faneuil Hall Market," by Abram E. Brown; "Wee Lucie," by Sophie May; and "Henry in the War," by Gen. Oliver O. Howard. A new book of well-known love-songs is also to be issued, compiled by G. Herbert Westley.

LEMCKE & BUECHNER are the American publishers of the English edition of the superb series of Monographs on Artists, published in Germany by Velhagen & Klasing. The volumes are being translated by Campbell Dodgson, assistant in the Department of Prints and Drawings of the British Museum. While each separate volume is complete in itself, collectively the series will form a complete history of the great periods of art. Each part is profusely illustrated and tastefully bound. "Raphael" and "Holbein" are now ready. These will be followed during the spring and summer by the volumes on "Rubens," "Rembrandt," and "Michelangelo." The bookseller can safely recommend these monographs to the connoisseur and to the student of art.

LENTILHON & Co., New York City, have placed on the market an edition of the "Works of Mrs. Elizabeth Prentiss," a set in eight volumes, of which two are devoted to a biography of the author. Only a thousand sets have been printed. "College and University Settlements," by Prof. C. R. Henderson, and "The Bible School," by Dr. A. H. McKinney, pastor of Olivet Church, New York City, are already on sale, and they will shortly have "The Institutional Church," a new book by Rev. Dr. Edward Judson.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have in press some very excellent fiction. Wilson Barrett, the actor, and Robert Hichens, author of "The Green Carnation," have together written "The Daughters of Babylon," of which the plot is the same as that of Mr. Barrett's new play of the same name. Mrs. Burton Harrison has called her new story "A Triple Entanglement," and it is said to be along the lines of "The Anglomaniacs" and "Good Americans" and to offer an excellent study of the two widely different American boys. "The Taming of the Jungle," by Dr. C. W. Doyle, who was born in 1852 in India, is said to picture phases of Indian life that will be new even to readers of Kipling; "Mr., Miss and Mrs.," by Charles Bloomingdale, Jr., is the title of a book of short stories, thoroughly modern in tone and clever in treatment, full of pathos and passion; "The Dancing Master," by Adrien Chabot, has been translated from the original French by Mrs. Harold Montgomery Sill, and offers an idyllic romance of the French Revolution; and "The Amazing Lady," by M. Bowles; "Heart and Sword," by John Strange Winter; and "My Lady Frivol," by Miss Carey, will be added to the Lippincott Series of Select Novels. Other novels are classified elsewhere under Fiction. "History of America Before Columbus," by P. De Roo, is in press, and descriptive works of interest are promised in "Russian Hosts and English Guests in Central Asia," by J. T. Woolrych Perowne; "Our Island Empire (Philippines)," by Charles Morris; and "English Cathedrals," by Francis Bond. A. D. Burgh has written a biographical sketch of the ill-fated "Elizabeth, Empress of Austria"; Charles William Macfarlane has a learned treatise on "Value and Distribution"; and there will be a second edition of A. Brothers' "Photography," revised and enlarged. The Lippincotts make a specialty of valuable medical works and half a dozen now in preparation will be found classified in the preceding list under the heading Medicine and Hygiene. Some important new contributions are also made to the departments of Education, Language, etc., and Arts and Sciences.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co.'s spring announcements are particularly strong and promising so far as fiction is concerned. Among these we note two American novels—"Each Life Unfulfilled," by Anna Chapin Ray, author of "Teddy," the principal characters of which are a young girl studying music and an author; and "The Kinship of Souls," by Rev. Reuben Thomas, which, apart from the interest of the story for readers of fiction, contains thoughtful suggestions, especially upon the religious questions with which the Christian world of to-day is concerned. Readers of "The King's Henchman," by William Henry Johnson, who regretted its somewhat sombre conclusion, will be pleased to hear that he will have ready this spring a sequel, "King or Knave, Which Wins?" in which he gives the further adventures of Jean Fourcade. A work which will be awaited with interest is Mrs. Flach's translation of Selma Lagerlöf's "The Miracles of Antichrist," which is said to surpass the author's first book, "The Story of Gösta Berling." Other interesting announcements in this department are: "In Vain: a love-story of modern Poland," by Henryk Sienkiewicz; "The Duke's Servants," a romance by Sidney Herbert Burchell; Daudet's "Fremont and Risler," translated by George B. Ives, with an introduction by W. F. Trent, and "The Nabob," also translated by Mr. Ives, with an introduction by Brander Matthews; "Pastor Naudie's Young Wife," by Edouard Rod, from the French by Bradley Gilman, a study of French Protestantism, with La Rochelle and Montauban, the two Huguenot strongholds, as background; and a new issue of Miss Wormeley's translation of Balzac's novels, with additional matter and 100 photogravures from designs by celebrated French artists. In a more serious vein is Victor Charbonnel's "The Victory of the Will," translated from the French by Emily Whitney, with an introduction by Lillian Whiting. Charbonnel treats of spiritual realities in a simple and practical way, and with much beauty of style. Three volumes will be added to the new collected Library edition of the works of Edward Everett Hale, viz.: "In His Name," "Ten Times One, and other stories," and "The Brick Moon, and other stories." These will be followed by six other volumes. Besides these there are under way "A Boy in the Peninsular War—the services, adventures, and experiences of Robert Blakeney, a subaltern in the 28th Regiment, an autobiography," edited by Julian Sturgis, which is described as a remarkable military biography; "The '98 Campaign of the Sixth Massachusetts, U. S. V.," by Lieut. Frank E. Edwards, with numerous illustrations from original photographs; "The Private Stable, its establishment, management, and appointments," by "Jorocks"; "Stars and Telescopes, a handy book of Astronomy, founded on the 8th edition of Lynn's Celestial Motions," by Prof. David P. Todd; and new editions of Soule's "English Synonymes"; "Cathedral Days" and "Three Normandy Inns," both by Anna Bowman Dodd; "From Dreamland Sent," by Lillian Whiting; and a Popular edition, in one volume, of Captain Mahan's "Life of Nelson."

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. announce new books and new editions in bewildering profusion. Among the more important biographical works will be "The Life of Francis Turner Palgrave," by his daughter; "The Life of William Morris," by J. W. Mackail; "The Early Married Life of Maria Josepha," edited by J. H. Adeane; "Claude Bernard," by Michael Foster, a new volume in the Masters of Medicine Series; and the "History of St. Vincent de Paul," by M. Bougaud, Bishop of Laval. Many other works are classified under Biography in preceding list. New works of history include the first volume of "A History of British India," by Sir William Wilson Hunter, one of the vice-presidents of the Royal Asiatic Society. This is merely the introduction to a five-volume work based on manuscript records, and in it the author shows how the blocking of the old trade-paths by the Turks in the fifteenth century constrained Christendom to seek out a new road to India by sea. From that long search the history of modern commerce dates. Other important works are classified in the preceding list under the heading History. "A Handbook to French Art" will be the work of Rose G. Kingsley; and "Selected Examples of Decorative Art," edited by F. E. Witthaus, will be made up of selections of treasures from the South Kensington Museum, which will be published monthly to supply teachers and students in art and technical schools with copies of designs of the list subjects in the different branches the museum contains, such as wood-carving, sculpture, leather, bronze, silver, and brass work. Many countries will be described in several well-written and richly illustrated books. W. J. Ansorge in "Under the African Sun" will give an account of native races in Uganda, giving sporting adventures and other experiences; Herbert Vivian will describe "Tunisia"; and Avetis Nazarbek in "Through the Storm" will give pictures of life in Armenia. Carroll D. Wright's "Outline of Practical Sociology," with special references to American conditions, will be added to the American Citizen Series; A. J. Sargeant's "The Economic Policy of Colbert" will be published in the series of Studies in Economics; and several other volumes are classified in preceding list under heading Politics, Sociology and Economics. Several works of fiction will be in time for summer satchels. "Swallow," a story of the Great Trek, by H. Rider Haggard, and "The Heart of Denise and Other Tales," by S. Levett Yeats, are just ready, and will soon be followed by "One Poor Scruple," a novel by Mrs. Wilfred Ward, and "Ignigene," a tale of the fire-worshippers, by Emily E. Reade. The Longmans make a specialty of religious works, many of them of great importance in the theological world. A timely book is "The Ritual Crisis: how it may be turned to account," by Herbert Mortimer Luckock, Dean of Lichfield; "The Constitutional Authority of Bishops in the Catholic Church," by the Rev. A. Theodore Wirgman, will explain the history and canon law of the undivided Church from the Apostolic Age to the Council of Chalcedon, A.D. 451; "The Roman Primacy," A.D. 430-451, is by the Rev. Luke Rivington; and Rt. Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee, Bishop of Washington, has prepared an eagerly expected book on "New Testament Churchmanship." Many little books intended for the instruction of religious people, individually and in societies and Sunday-schools, will be found in the preceding list classified under the heading Religion and Philosophy. A long list of text-books will be found under the caption Education, Language, etc. A book on "Golf and Golfers," by Horace G. Hutchinson, is in the press; and several very important books are added to the departments of Arts and Sciences, and Nature and Science.

THE LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY announce in preparation "Tales of the Malayan Coast," by Rounseville Wildman, U. S. Consul at Hong Kong, whose connection with the stirring affairs in the far East, his association with Aguinaldo, the Filipino chief, and his intimate connection with Dewey's victories and the progress of the war in the Philippines, will give to his stories a special interest. Of equal interest will be the history of the War of 1898, prepared by Elbridge S. Brooks, under the title of "The Story of Our War with Spain," which will give a comprehensive and consecutive story of the war, its causes and its progress, told for young people in the attractive manner that has made all Mr. Brooks's "stories" of history prime favorites with young readers, and with their elders as well. Besides these, they announce a new "Pepper" book by Margaret Sidney (Mrs. Lothrop), entitled "The Stories Polly Pepper Told," which will introduce all the old friends of the Pepper family in a new field—and yet the old field, for it takes place in the famous "little brown house"; "A Modern Sacrifice, the story of Kissie Gordon's experiment," by Pansy (Mrs. G. R. Alden); "The Despatch Boat of the Whistle," a sea and land story of Santiago, which is incidentally a story of the Spanish-American War from the news of the destruction of the Maine to the fall of Santiago, by that veteran story-teller, William O. Stoddard; "Germany, her people and their story," a popular history of Germany, from its discovery by the Romans to the present day, by Augusta Hale Gifford, wife of Hon. George Gifford, U. S. Consul at Basle, and sister to Senator Eugene Hale, of Maine; also "Yesterday Framed in To-day, a story of the Christ and how to-day received him," by Pansy (Mrs. G. R. Alden).

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY, as usual, are preparing some very important volumes of biography. In the light of the intense excitement now prevailing in England on the subject of Anglicans and Catholics, "Cardinal Newman as Anglican and Catholic," written by Edmund Sheridan Purcell, with the same trenchant ability and care he gave to his epoch-making biography of "Cardinal Manning," is sure of a wide reading. Cardinal Newman's struggles of reason and conscience which led to his leaving the English church and going into the Roman fold will indeed be full of valuable lessons to many situated almost as he was half a century ago. "The Life and Letters of Archbishop Benson," edited by his son, will give a fine description of the conservative, ecclesiastical statesmanship which raised this prelate to such high position in the councils of the nation and of the church, and will be specially interesting owing to his close relations for half a century with the most brilliant men who have guided the destiny of England. "The Life of Henry A. Wise," by his grandson, Barton H. Wise, of Richmond, Va., covers the period of Governor Wise's service in the American Congress from 1833-1844, his career as United States Minister to Brazil, 1844-1847, his services in the Virginia Convention of 1861, which passed the ordinance of secession, the John Brown Raid, and his career as Brigadier-General in the Confederate Army, and is full of information of use to all students of the history of Virginia during a most important period of United States history. Other works of biography include "Spinoza," by Sir Frederick Pollock, of Trinity College, Cambridge; "The Life and Remains of Rev. R. H. Quick," author of "Essays on Educational Reformers," to be edited by F. Storr, editor of The English Journal of Education; and five new volumes in the Foreign Statesmen Series, full titles of which appear in the preceding classified list under the heading Biography, Correspondence, etc. In the closely allied field of history the announcements include "The Roman History of Appian of Alexandria," translated from the Greek by Horace White, who has aimed to popularize a neglected portion of ancient literature by putting it into idiomatic English, and by adding historical notes sufficient to explain obscurities and correct inaccuracies; "European History: an outline of its development," by George B. Adams, of Yale University; "The Welsh People: their origin, language, and history," by John Rhys and David Brynmor Jones; and several other histories and new editions of standard histories intended for textbooks, of which full titles appear in the preceding classified list under the heading Education, Language, etc. Among the books intended for educational purposes, special attention should be called to Macmillan's Pocket English Classics, a new series of English text-books, edited for use in secondary schools, most careful work being put into the introductions, notes, and aids in the interpretation of such books as "Silas Marner," "Last of the Mohicans," "Vicar of Wakefield," "Childe Harold," etc.; and Macmillan's Pocket American Classics, in which the same careful editorial work is put into the explanation of the best-known works of Washington Irving, Poe, Emerson, Bayard Taylor, Lowell, Walt Whitman, etc. Hiram Corson has written "An Introduction to the Poetical and Prose Works of John Milton"; Clifton Johnson has edited "Don Quixote" for use in home and schools; and Mark H. Liddell, of the University of Texas, has edited "Chaucer's Prologue and the Knight's Tale." There will be an edition in five volumes of "Representative English Comedies," gotten out under the editorship of Charles Mills Gayley, of the University of California. About forty plays will be treated in the five volumes, and if demand warrants these will later all be issued in separate volumes. There will be the usual number of new volumes added to the Eversley "Shakespeare," the Temple Classics and the Temple Dramatists; and many other works of kindred nature will be found in classified list under the heading Literary History, Miscellany and Collected Works. New art works to be issued during the spring include "Angels' Wings," by Edward Carpenter, who makes special chapters on the changes through which art is passing by reason of the growth of democratic ideas, and sustains his arguments by the reproduction of many plates from famous drawings and sculptures; and other illustrated books will be "Letters from Japan," by Mrs. Hugh Fraser, with several hundred pictures; and a new edition of "Development and Character of Gothic Architecture," by Charles Herbert Moore, who has added much new material. The department of Fiction is always well represented on the Macmillan list of announcements. "My Lady and Allan Darke," by Charles Donnel Gibson, is a romance of the end of the last century, of which the scene is an island off the coast of Virginia; "Hugh Gwyeth," by Beulah Marie Dix, tells the story of a Roundhead Cavalier; F. Marion Crawford has written "Via Crucis," a story of the second Crusade; Egerton Castle has followed up his wonderfully successful "The Pride of Jennico" by a new novel, entitled "Young April," dealing with the life of a young nobleman who by his uncle's death comes into a vast inheritance; and a very remarkable story is announced in "Jesus Delaney," by Joseph Gordon Donnelly, formerly United States Consul in Mexico, of which the hero is a descendant of Spanish, Indian, and Irish blood, who has been educated in a northern college, and incidentally is mixed up in the relations of the Catholic and Methodist Missionaries in Mexico. "Ben Comee," a tale of Rogers' Rangers, 1758-9, is intended for boys, and is said to be a healthy, stirring book. Philosophy is to be enriched by "The Development of English Thought," by Simon N. Patten, of the University of Pennsylvania; "A Brief Introduction to Modern Philosophy," by Arthur Kenyon Rogers, of the University of Chicago; and "Naturalism and Agnosticism," by James Ward, comprising the Gifford lectures for 1895 and 1896. To law and politics and economics many new books will be added, of which the titles are all given in full in the preceding classified list under the headings Law, and Political and Social Economy. Among their authors are Franklin H. Giddings, John B. Clark, Edwin R. A. Seligman, Dorman B. Eaton, Carroll D. Wright, and others whose names stand for accurate knowledge and excellent methods of presentation. Almost every department of the classified list must be read to get even an approximate idea of the Macmillan announcements. Specially valuable publications are classified under the headings Medicine and Hygiene, Religion and Philosophy, Nature and Science, and Education.

JOHN JOSEPH McVEY, Philadelphia, will issue during March the seventh edition of Brother Azarius's "Philosophy of Literature"; and the second volume of the "Exposition of Christian Doctrine," which covers the subject of morals. The latter is by a seminary professor, and is intended for the intermediate course in the Institute of the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

M. F. MANSFIELD & A. WESSLES, New York City, have in preparation several works appealing to collectors and to lovers of pretty books. Among these will be a facsimile edition of Kipling's "Departmental Ditties," a typographical facsimile by the De Vinne Press of the first (Lahore "Public Document" edition) restricted to 250 copies, and the same author's "The Betrothed," with ten full-page illustrations in tint from drawings by Blanche McManus, to be issued uniform with "Mandalay"; a limited Japan edition of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Some College Memories," giving recollections of life at St. Andrews; "Teachings of Tennyson," by John Oates; "God's Gentlemen" and "Mad Humanity," by Dr. Forbes Winslow. Uniform with their artistic brochure on "Aubrey Beardsley" will be issued a "Book of Giants," with illustrations by William Strang, the famous painter and etcher; and "A Book of Woodcuts," by Gordon Craig.

THE MERSHON COMPANY, New York City, have just ready "When Santiago Fell," by Captain Ralph Bonehill, telling of the adventures of two boys, an American and his Cuban chum, which introduces a good pen picture of General Garcia. The same author is preparing two more volumes, and all three will be known as the Flag of Freedom Series. "A Sailor Boy with Dewey" will tell again of the great victory in Manila Bay and describe the natural characteristics of Manila and how American eyes see the different customs and habits of the Filipinos; and "Off for Hawaii" describes how several boys start on a tour of the Hawaii Islands to find a treasure supposed to be located in the vicinity of Kilauea, the largest active volcano in the world. These books are all illustrated and attractively bound, and great inducements will be offered the trade to sell them while their subjects are uppermost in the thoughts of young and old.

THOMAS B. MOSHER, Portland, Me., will add to his celebrated publications "William Blake : xvii Designs to Thornton's Virgil, Reproduced From the Original Woodcuts MDCCCXXI." These woodcuts have been known and admired for years by collectors of Blake, but this is the first attempt to reproduce them entire. Such an artist as Samuel Palmer and such critics as A. C. Swinburne and Alexander Gilchrist have recorded their opinions of Blake's little landscape cuts, and these opinions printed in the introduction to this reproduction add greatly to the value of the work. There will be 450 copies of the work ready on March 15, gotten up with the appropriateness and finish with which the name of Mosher is identified.

THE NEW AMSTERDAM BOOK COMPANY, with characteristic enterprise, have already issued the greater portion of their spring budget. Prominent among these are Will M. Clemens's biographical sketch of Rudyard Kipling, entitled "A Ken of Kipling," containing an account of his career, an appreciation of his work, a bibliography of his writings, etc.; "The Downfall of the Dervishes," by E. N. Bennett, special correspondent of the Westminster Gazette, who gives a vivid account of the last expedition to the Soudan under General Kitchener, and graphically describes the battle of Omdurman and the capture of Khartoum; and "Dickens and His Illustrators," by Frederic G. Kitton, with 22 portraits and over 70 original drawings by Cruikshank, "Phiz," and others, now reproduced for the first time. Among this firm's forthcoming books a prominent place is given to Edgar Allan Poe's "Arthur Gordon Pym," "The Gold Bug," and the "Murderers of the Rue Morgue," all to be illustrated by A. D. McCormack. Among their other announcements we notice "Dinkinbar," a novel of the Australian bush, by Herbert C. Macilwaine; "Aarbert, a drama, without change of scenery, wrought out through song in many metres, mostly lyric," by William Marshall; also "Memoirs of Admiral the Right Hon. Sir Astley Cooper Key," by Vice-Admiral P. H. Colomb.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS have just published a Large-Type edition of "The Revised Bible with References," probably containing more references than have ever before been published in a single volume; and in the fall they will issue "The Original American Revised Bible," with the readings and renderings preferred by the American Revision Companies of 1870-1884 incorporated in the text, and with copyright marginal references. New editions are now ready of "Oxford" Long Primer "Prayers and Hymnals." They announce "Horæ Synopticæ," contributions to the studies of the Synoptic problem, by Rev. Sir John C. Hawkins; "The Palæography of Greek Papyri," by Frederic G. Kenyon, with twenty facsimiles and a table of alphabets; "Demonstrations in Latin Elegiac Verse," by W. H. D. Rous; Part iv. of W. H. Woolcombe's "Practical Work in Physics," treating specially of Magnetism and Electricity; "A Grammar of the Bohemian or Czech Language," by Prof. W. R. Morfill; "German Passages for Unprepared Translation," for use of candidates for army, civil service, and other examinations, selected and arranged by Eduard Ehrke; also a manual for daily use throughout Lent, entitled "The Vision of Righteousness," by the Hon. Mrs. Lyttelton Gell, author of "The Cloud of Witnesses."

L. C. PAGE & Co. have in preparation the following novels: "A Gentleman Player, his adventures on a secret mission for Queen Elizabeth," by Robert Neilson Stephens, author of "The Continental Dragoon," etc., with illustrations by Frank T. Merrill; "Deficient Saluts," by Marshall Saunders, author of "Beautiful Joe," etc., illustrated by J. W. Kennedy; "The Paths of the Prudent," by J. S. Fletcher, author of "The Builders," etc.; "Gerald Fitzgerald," by Charles Lever, which is announced as "previously unpublished in book form," but which nevertheless was published in the 70's by Harper & Brothers, and later by George Munro in the Seaside Library, a fact which does not detract an iota from its freshness and present interest; also, "Rough Rider Stories," by Edwin Emerson, Jr., one of the Rough Riders, with an introduction by Theodore Roosevelt. They will publish next month a volume entitled "Yale, her campus, class-rooms, and athletics," by Walter Camp and Lewis S. Welch, which will form the first of The American University Series, to be devoted to a comprehensive yet popular account of the great American universities and colleges. They have also in preparation a new edition of Fitzgerald's "Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám," the standard edition of the five versions of 1859, 1868, 1872, 1879, and 1889, with twelve designs by E. H. Garrett and Gilbert James reproduced in photogravure.

THE PILGRIM PRESS (CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND PUB. SOC.) will soon issue a new revised edition of Frederica Beard's "The Kindergarten Sunday-School."

THE PUBLIC SCHOOL PUBLISHING CO., Bloomington, Ill., will add to their list of publications "Songs of Tree-Top and Meadow," a selection of poems for little folks, by Lida M. McMurry and Agnes Spofford Coot; and "Suggestions on Teaching Geography," by Henry McCormick.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have in preparation the second volume of the "History of the Netherlands," by Prof. P. J. Blok, of the University of Leyden, translated by Ruth Putnam; and the second part of "The Civil War on the Border," by Wiley J. Britton. The following will be added to the series of Writings of the Fathers of the Republic: the continuation of "The Writings of James Monroe," edited by S. M. Hamilton; "The Writings of James Madison," edited by Gaillard Hunt, of the Department of State; the sixth and concluding volume of "The Writings of Rufus King," edited by Dr. Charles R. King; and the tenth and concluding volume of "The Writings of Thomas Jefferson," edited by Paul Leicester Ford. To the Heroes of the Nations series they will add "Bismarck and the New German Empire," by J. W. Headlam, and "Oliver Cromwell and the Rule of the English Puritan," by Charles Firth. They will add to their Heroes of the Reformation series a volume on "Thomas Cranmer (1489-1556)," and one on "John Knox (1505-1572)," of which the authors have not yet been made known; and the volume entitled "Huldreich Zwingli (1484-1531)," the reformer of German Switzerland, is to be by Dr. Samuel Macaulay Jackson, the editor of the series. Other volumes announced are: "Desiderius Erasmus (1467-1536), the Humanist in the service of the Reformation," by Prof. Ephraim Emerton, of Harvard; "John Calvin (1509-1564)," the founder of Reformed Protestantism, by Williston Walker; also, "Theodore Beza (1519-1605)," the counsellor of the French Reformation, by Henry Martyn Baird, Professor of the Greek Language and Literature in New York University and author of "The Huguenots." For the Story of the Nations series they will have a volume on "The West Indies," by Amos Kidder Fiske, whose purpose is to compress within the compass of one moderate volume the information about the islands—their history and physical aspects, their natural resources and material conditions, their political relations and apparent destiny, which would meet the needs of the "general reader"; Justin McCarthy's "The Story of the People of England in the 19th Century," which is said to be a picture, rather than a record, of England's development in all the arts of peace since the close of the great war with Napoleon; "The Story of China," by Robert K. Douglas, of the British Museum; and "The Story of Austria, the home of the Hapsburg dynasty, from 1282 to the present day," by Sidney Whitman. Other works of historical interest will be "Historic Towns of the Middle States," including Albany, Kingston, Newburgh, Saratoga, Pittsburgh, Tarrytown, Philadelphia, Princeton, Wilmington, Schenectady, Brooklyn, and New York City, to be issued uniform with "Historic Towns of New England"; "History of the Territorial Expansion of the United States," by Charles Henry Butler; "Industrial Cuba," by Robert P. Porter; and "The New Far East," a study of present political conditions and prospects, by Arthur Diósy. Their other announcements include "The Life of George Borrow," the author of "The Bible in Spain," etc., by William I. Knapp; "A Life of Paul Jones," by James Barnes; "A Life for Liberty," anti-slavery and other letters of Sallie Holley, edited by John W. Chadwick; "Two Women in the Klondike," a record of a journey undertaken in the summer of 1898 by Mrs. Roswell D. Hitchcock, the widow of the late Commander Hitchcock, U. S. N., and Miss Van Buren, a grandniece of President Van Buren; "Israel Putnam," by W. F. Livingston, a direct descendant of the General, in the American Men of Energy series; "Roman Africa: archaeological walks in Algiers and Tunis," by Gaston Boissier; "Proportion and Harmony in Line and in Color," by George L. Raymond; an important text-book by Charles G. Wheeler, entitled "Woodworking for Beginners," which is both for the industrial school and for home use, and tells how to construct tables, boxes, shelves, cases, sleds, and simple gymnastic apparatus; "Duality of Voice," an outline of original research by Emil Sutro; the fifth edition, revised and enlarged, of "A Junior Course in Practical Zoology," by Marshall and Hurst; a volume on "Volcanoes," by Prof. T. G. Bonney, which will form No. 5 in their Science Series; "Our Insect Friends and Foes," by Belle S. Cragin; "Nature Studies in Berkshire," illustrated by reproductions in photogravure of nature photographs, by the Rev. W. Coleman Adams; and "Ornamental Shrubs," by Lucius D. Davis. "The Children of the Mist" is the title of a novel by Eden Phillpotts; and other fiction includes "Miss Cayley's Adventures," by Grant Allen; a new and cheaper edition of "John Marmaduke," a romance of the time of Cromwell, by S. H. Church; and "Lone Pine," a story of adventure on the Prairies of the Southwest, by R. B. Townshend. In poetry are announced "For the King," a volume of verse, by Robert Cameron Rogers; and "The Poems of Therese," translated from the German by Ellen Frothingham. Other announcements cover "A Study of Wagner," by Ernest Newman; "Dante Interpreted for Students," by E. Wilson, with original translations from "The Inferno"; "Shakespeare in France," by J. Jusserand; "Islam in Africa," by the Rev. Anson P. Atterbury, D.D.; "The Religion of the Hebrews in Pre-Exile Days," by Karl Budde; also "The Epistles of Paul the Apostle to the Corinthians, Thessalonians, Galatians, Romans and Philippians," by Dr. James Drummond, which will be the first volume of the series of International Handbooks to the New Testament; also, "Methods and Problems of Spiritual Healing," by Horatio W. Dresser, author of "The Power of Silence," etc., which is expected to prove of interest to all who are investigating the problem of mental cure, or cure by suggestion, as it makes a careful study of the phenomena of metaphysical healing, and is the result of a long series of careful investigations of the subject. In connection with the publication of this new volume, Messrs. Putnam have arranged to take over from George H. Ellis, of Boston, the publication of the entire series of the works of Mr. Dresser, of which new editions will shortly be in readiness. This series comprises the following titles: "The Power of Silence," "The Perfect Whole," "The Heart of It," "In Search of a Soul," and "The Voices of Hope." They are also to publish a series of books to be known as Literary Hearthstones, to be edited by Marion Harland (Mrs. Terhune). Each volume will contain two subjects. As far as arranged they will be "Charlotte Brontë and Cooper"; "Hannah More and John Knox"; "John Bunyan and Sir Thomas More"; and "The Gurneys and the Wesleys."

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY has upwards of fifty books under way. Among the more important of those announced we note the following: "The Redemption of Africa, a story of civilization," by Frederic Perry Noble, secretary of the Chicago Congress on Africa, 1893, which will treat fully of the many agencies, Protestant and Roman Catholic, that have contributed to the upbuilding of that vast continent, with a bibliography, illustrations, maps, and statistical tables; the second volume of "Christian Missions and Social Progress," a sociological study of foreign missions by the Rev. James S. Dennis, D.D.; the fifth volume of the Rev. F. B. Meyer's work, "Our Daily Homily"; "Border Lines in the Field of Doubtful Practices," by Dr. H. Clay Trumbull, the editor of The Sunday-School Times, who treats of such topics as smoking, drinking, card-playing, the theatre, and dancing; "Christ our Creditor, or the title Terumoth, its philosophy, history, and perpetuity," by Rev. N. L. Rigby, and "The Profit of the Many, the biblical doctrine and ethics of wealth," by Rev. Edward T. Root, two volumes in the series of The Christian Relation to Wealth; "Bible Manners and Customs," by Rev. G. M. Mackie, twenty years missionary at Beyrout; and "The School of Obedience," addresses by Andrew Murray. For the titles of their other books we must refer chiefly to the department of Religion and Philosophy in the classified list elsewhere in this issue.

R. H. RUSSELL has in preparation "The Story of the Princess des Ursins in Spain," by Constance Hill, which will present a picture of a brilliant French woman of the early eighteenth century during the turmoil and chaos of the Spanish succession, and be illustrated with twelve authentic portraits of historical characters. He also announces "Mr. Isolate of Lonelyville," sketches of suburban commuters, by C. C. Converse; "Cissie Loftus," an illustrated souvenir by Justin Huntly McCarthy; "Treasures of the Metropolitan Museum of Art," by Arthur Hoeber; and the following plays, uniform in style with "Cyrano de Bergerac": "The Weavers" and "Lonely Lives," both by Gerhart Hauptmann, and both translated by Mary Morison; Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" and "The Master Builder," the former translated by Edmund Gosse and the latter by Gosse and William Archer; also, "Alabama," by Augustus Thomas. He has just issued several artistic publications sure of success throughout the land. Among the more important are Pinero's "Trelawny of the Wells," profusely illustrated by pictures from the play; "Trelawny Color Prints," by Pamela Colman Smith, four unique designs illustrating some of the most picturesque characters in the play; "The Olga Nethersole Souvenir," a collection of photographs and drawings by C. Allen Gilbert, presenting Miss Nethersole in some of her most notable impersonations; and "Frederic Remington," a series of platinum prints from the artist's celebrated oil paintings, including the "Charge of the Rough Riders at San Juan"; "A Questionable Companionship" (Western scene); "Missing," and "The Scream of the Shrapnel." R. H. Russell has also new and improved editions of Richard Harding Davis' "Cuba in War Time"; of Maude Adams' edition of "The Little Minister"; of the authorized translation of "Cyrano de Bergerac," illustrated by Ernest Haskell; and of Phil May's "Sketch-Book." Other books announced will be found under the heading Arts, and also under Poetry and Drama.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will have a generous supply of new fiction for the coming season, including four new volumes of short stories. Under the title "Strong Hearts" will be gathered George W. Cable's stories "The Entomologist," "The Taxidermist," and "The Solitary," all dealing with New Orleans and its mingled races. Seven stories by Jesse Lynch Williams, author of the very popular "Princeton Stories," will appear as "The Stolen Story, and other newspaper stories," and will cover incidents in the life of the reporter as it exists at present under the conditions which high-pressure journalism have made imperative; "Sweethearts and Wives," by Anna A. Rogers, will be added to the Ivory Series, and will contain stories of life in the navy; and Mrs. Edith Wharton, a new writer, will also furnish a volume of short stories full of humorous cynicism, made palatable by the essential charity which mellows it. "The Amateur Cracksmen," by E. W. Hornung, will introduce a hero worthy to rank with Sherlock Holmes, and the adventures of this fascinating artist in crime are told with spirit and delicious humor. Descriptive works will also be numerous. "In Cuba with Shafter," by Lieut.-Col. J. D. Miley, General Shafter's chief of staff during the Santiago campaign, is based upon official documents, and on the testimony of those well posted as to what went on behind the scenes, and the book bids fair to be accepted as the authorized presentation of the campaign. It is neither critical nor controversial, but accurate description, made clear by many excellent maps, and made interesting by many portraits. "On the South African Frontier," by William H. Brown, is a story of Mashonaland and Matabeleland during the critical years of those colonies, full of vivid descriptions of big-game hunting, gold-mining, farming, and other occupations, supplemented by thirty-two pictures from photographs by the author; "A Texas Ranger," by N. A. Jennings, is the true account of surprising adventures on the Mexican border by a young man who enlisted, early in 1880, in a company of Texas Rangers, a body of troops who were the prototypes of the Rough Riders; and "In the Klondyke," by Frederick Palmer, will give a most intelligent and satisfactory account, written by a man of affairs and journalistic training in observation, of a region about which curiosity is still keen and unsatisfied. New volumes of biography cover the "Life of Danton," by Hilaire Belloc, which will give a complete narrative of the most dramatic phases of the second period of the French Revolution, and incidentally offer a brilliant and original picture of France in her various aspects of political and social revolution; "Rāmākrishna," by Max Müller, who is in his element in describing the life of one of those Indian ascetics and sages (1833-1886) who are known under the names of Sannyasins, Mahātmās or Yogis, and in formulating his special system of philosophy; and an edition, limited to 1000 copies, of "Anton Seidl, a Memorial," for which Mr. Finck has written a biographical sketch, and in which will be collected "personal literature" concerning the great orchestral leader, which will be furnished by Lehmann, Brandt, Nordica, Eames, Niemann, Jean de Reszke, and many others who estimate Seidl both as man and musician, while critical appreciations are included by Krehbiel, Huneker, Steinberg, and Finck. The publishers have also begun The Music Lover's Library, of which the first volume will be "The Orchestra and Orchestral Music," by James Huneker, while volumes soon to follow will include "The Pianoforte and its Music," by H. E. Krehbiel; "Songs and Song-Writers," by Henry T. Finck; "The Opera, Past and Present," by W. F. Apthorp; and "Choirs and Choral Singing," by Arthur Mees. "Mezzotint in Modern Music," by James Huneker, will treat of Brahms, Chopin, Strauss, Liszt, Wagner, and other modern masters of instrumental music in the vigorous and individual style for which Mr. Huneker is known, which, however, is generally justified by accurate knowledge of his subject. A very important work is announced in "The History of Yiddish Literature in the Nineteenth Century," by Leo Wiener, instructor in the Slavic languages in Harvard University. Yiddish, Jüdisch, or Judeo-German, the language, though in a baser form, of the New York Ghetto, grew up originally among the Jews who, driven out of Germany in the middle ages, settled in Russia, Poland, and Lithuania, and it is still the speech of a great population in the Slavic countries and of nearly half a million in the United States, most of these in New York City alone. From the scattered repositories of Yiddish in this century Mr. Wiener has collected examples of a genuine literature, especially strong in poetry and the drama. The third volume in Periods of European Literature, the excellent series so ably edited by Professor Saintsbury, will be "The Fourteenth Century," by F. J. Snell; a new volume of descriptive and literary essays, compiled from the papers of the late Sidney Lanier, will be entitled "Retrospects and Prospects"; and there will be editions uniform with Froude's other works of "The Life and Letters of Erasmus," "Lectures on the Council of Trent," and "The Divorce of Catherine of Aragon." To the International Theological Library will be added George B. Stevens's "Theology of the New Testament"; and "Samuel," by Henry Preserved Smith, of Amherst College; and to the Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers "Hilary of Poitiers," by William Sanday, and "John of Damascus," by S. D. F. Several other theological announcements will be found under the heading Religion and Philosophy. The departments of Education and Mental and Moral Philosophy must also be consulted for many titles of very important books. Special attention is called to the fact that the Scribners will now become the publishers of Stimson's "King Noanett," and also to the cheering news that a piece of work as good as Page's "Red Rock" has been already appreciated to the extent of the twenty-fifth thousand. A companion volume to "How to Know the Wild Flowers," by Mrs. Frances Theodora Parsons, will be "How to Know the Ferns."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' IMPORTATIONS.—Foremost among the imported books are the beautiful editions of standards now in course of publication, among them the Centenary edition of Carlyle, the Temple edition of Scott, the Thornton edition of the Sisters Brontë, "The Poetical and Prose Works" of Byron, etc. "Alphabets Old and New," by Lewis F. Day, will be a handy and useful work for all users of practical lettering with its 150 complete examples, thirty series of numerals, facsimiles of ancient dates, etc.; and "An Alphabet of Animals," by Carton Moore Park, will have twenty-six full pages of large, bold, accurate drawings. Col. Edward Vibart will describe "The Sepoy Mutiny" as seen by a subaltern from Delhi to Lucknow; and there is coming a cheaper edition of Edmond Demolins' "Anglo-Saxon Superiority." A new work by the author of "Deeds That Won the Empire" (W. H. Fitchett, pseud. "Vedette") will be entitled "Fights for the Flag." To the Contemporary Science Series will be added "The Natural History of Digestion," by A. Lockhart Gillespie, and "Degeneracy," by Prof. Eugene S. Talbot. New and cheaper editions will be brought over of John Addington Symonds' art works, "Sketches and Studies in Italy and Greece" in three volumes, "Life of Michelangelo" in two volumes, and "The Renaissance in Italy" in seven volumes. A descriptive work on Gloucestershire will be "A Cotswold Village," by J. Arthur Gibbs, who delightfully describes country life and pursuits in that region.

SILVER, BURDETT & Co., Boston, announce several new publications, chiefly intended for text-books. "The Old Northwest," by Dr. B. A. Hinsdale, treats of the beginnings of our colonial system; "The Rescue of Cuba," by Andrew S. Draper, covers an episode in the growth of free government; "Spirit and Life" is a volume of religious readings by Mrs. Knowles; Mrs. S. E. Dawes will furnish a volume of "Stories of the Old Bay State"; and the second and third books will be ready of "The Land of Song," poetry readers compiled by Katharine H. Shute and Larkin Dunton. A new and pleasing gift-book for a child's library is "First Steps in the History of Our Country," by William A. and Arthur May Mowry, a fair book, giving both sides of disputed questions, and up-to-date in its recognition of the Spanish war and the fine work of the Red Cross Society. This is also intended as a school text-book for supplementary reading in primary grades.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY put their trust chiefly in fiction in making preparations for the summer-reading season. They have been fortunate in securing the last work of Harold Frederic, which will be entitled "The Market Place." "The Sturgis Wager," by Edgar Morrette, will be a detective story in which a New York newspaper man displays great ingenuity in getting at the facts of a case that happens between two New York clubmen; Fred Whishaw has written a companion story to his successful "The Son of the Czar," which he will call "At the Court of Catherine the Great"; and Sara Jeannette Duncan has in "Hilda" written a story of Calcutta in which an actress and a Salvation Army girl are the leading characters. There will be a new edition of Robert Barr's ever-popular "In a Steamer Chair"; Josephine B. Steffens will have a novel entitled "Letitia Bunwell"; and Robert W. Chambers will bring out a new story entitled "Out-Riders." "Tales By Tom Hall" are humorous, pathetic, and thrilling stories of burglars, newsboys, Indian-fighters, etc., put up in a chic cover by F. Berkeley Smith; and the same author has a volume of society verse to be called "Where Love is Lord." Stephen Crane also has a volume of poetry called "War Is King," said by competent critics to be of great literary value, which will have the great advantage of being illustrated by Will Bradley, who himself has said that he found the poems suggestive and did his work on them with enthusiasm. The publishers intend making this book a wonderful example of artistic printing and binding. "From Reefer to Rear-Admiral" will be the title under which the autobiography of Admiral Benjamin F. Sands will appear. It contains the recollections of a busy naval life from 1828 to 1883. The narrative includes incidents never before told in the lives of Farragut, Porter, Rodgers, Rowan, Ammen, Jenkins, and Worden; anecdotes of Generals Jackson, Grant, French, and others; reminiscences of Garibaldi and Dom Pedro I. of Brazil; also some account of the Revolutions in South America, the slave trade on the West Coast of Africa, the Mexican War, and the War of the Rebellion. A very handsome and very useful book will be "A Guide to the Wild Flowers," by Alice Lounsberry, arranged according to the kind of soil in which plants grow and illustrated by Mrs. Ellis Rowan, who ranks among the greatest painters of wild flowers in the whole world. She has won more medals than are possessed by any other woman, and she recently refused $75,000 offered by the German Government for her collection. Her drawings are from the fresh flowers in or near their homes. While artistic and beautiful, they are technically correct. Dr. Nathaniel L. Britton, Emeritus Professor of Botany at Columbia College, has written the introduction and made suggestions for the scientific part of the text. The indexes of common names, scientific names, and colors are very well made, and in themselves very valuable.

HERBERT S. STONE & Co., Chicago, will furnish lots of fiction for the coming summer. Kate Chopin, author of "A Night in Acadie," has written "The Awakening," a story essentially for women, which studies the mental, emotional, and moral development of one woman in smallest detail; Harriet Prescott Spofford deals more simply with another woman in her new story of "The Maid He Married"; the love of a prominent beauty in New York society is the motive in "A Heaven-Kissing Hill," by Julia Magruder, author of that great success, "Miss Ayr of Virgilia"; and Miss Ann Devoore, a new writer, has written a wholly original and very ingenious story under the title "Oliver Iverson: his adventures during four days and nights in the City of New York in April of 1890." A story treating of the short struggle between Greece and Turkey in 1897 is written by George Horton, late United States Consul at Athens, and is entitled "A Fair Brigand"; a rollicking, cheerful story, with an Irish hero and an American heroine, with sceneshifting between London and Philadelphia in colonial times, will be found in "D'Arcy of the Guards," by Louis Evan Shipman; and there will be a new novel by Henry Seton Merriman, called "Dross," the only book the author of "The Sowers" has promised for this year. Volumes of short stories, that distinctively American product, are expected from Mrs. L. B. Walford, who will add "A Little Legacy, and other stories" to the Blue Cloth Books; from Robert Herrick, who will furnish six stories under the title "Love's Dilemmas," all but one of which appear for the first time; from Stanley Waterloo, of "The Story of Ab" fame, whose book will be called "The Wolf's Long Howl"; and from Frank Welles Calkins, who has a book made up of fifteen stories that have been widely read in the Youths' Companion, which will be called "The Cougar-Tamer, and other stories of adventure." The publishers have been so wholly fortunate as to secure one novel more from among the writings left by Maria Louise Pool, and this will bear the title "Sand 'n' Bushes," and is said to have all the keenness of description that made Miss Pool's work so fascinating. Norman Gale's pretty story, entitled "A June Romance," will be again set up especially for the Blue Cloth Books, a series of 16mos bound in blue cloth, with a design in white ink and lining papers from drawings by Frank H. Hazenplug. Of historical and political interest will be "A Short History of the United States," by Justin Huntly McCarthy, who tells in a manner very interesting at this time of possible Anglo-American alliance, an impartial plain story of America's development as seen from the standpoint of an Englishman; "The Vengeance of the Female," by Marriion Wilcox, observations of life in Spain and Italy; and "Can We Disarm?" written by Joseph McCabe in collaboration with George Darien, who have brought together all the arguments on both sides of the question and have formulated a plan that might be generally satisfactory to the powers. Of artistic value will be "The Perfect Wagnerite," by G. Bernard Shaw, a commentary on the "Ring of the Nibelungen," offered to enthusiastic admirers of Wagner's music who are unable to follow his ideas and do not understand the deep meaning of the dilemma of Wotan; "Robert, Earl Nugent," by Claud Nugent, with many reproductions in photogravure and half-tone from family portraits by Godfrey Kneller, Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, and others; and "Successful Homes," by Oliver Coleman, made up of articles from The House Beautiful, offering a practical treatise on interior decoration, made useful by many excellent illustrations. Children's pleasure is considered in the announcements of "After-Supper Songs," by Elizabeth Coolidge, with twenty-four medallions in colors; "Ickery Ann and Other Boys and Girls," short stories by Ella W. Peattie; and "Stories from the Old Testament for Children," by Harriet S. B. Beale. A theological tragedy by George Santayana will be entitled "Lucifer"; and John Ashton's "History of Gambling in England" will make a handsome book, full of authentic and rare information on different games of chance and the people whose names are inseparably connected with gambling.

E. B. TREAT & Co. have now in press the seventeenth yearly issue of "The International Medical Annual," a work of reference for medical practitioners brought down to 1899; "Surgery of the Chest," by Stephen Paget; and "The Treatment of Disease by Physical Methods," by Thomas Stretch Dowse, which deals chiefly with the subject of massage.

D. VAN NOSTRAND COMPANY'S forthcoming publications include some very important works of applied science. For electricians there will be a second edition, revised and much enlarged, of Arthur V. Abbott's "The Electrical Transmission of Energy"; "The Electrical Engineer's Pocket-Book," by Horatio A. Foster; "Conductors for Electrical Distribution," by Professor F. A. C. Perrine, of Leland Stanford University; and "Standard Polyphase Apparatus and Systems," by M. A. Oudin. To Van Nostrand's Science Series will be added a "Manual of the Slide Rule," by F. A. Halsey, of the American Machinist; and other volumes in press for immediate publication are "Theory and Design of Chimneys," by W. Wallace Christie; "The Purification of Sewage," by Dr. Sidney Barwise; and "A Treatise on Photographic Optics," by R. S. Cole.

BRADLEE WHIDDEN, Boston, will have ready shortly "Birds," written and illustrated by Edward Knobel, an entirely new method and the simplest of ways to enable the students to tell all our land birds. The plates in color number about 150. The same author also will have ready a companion volume devoted to "Grasses, Sedges, and Rushes of the Northern United States." The sixth section of S. F. Denton's notable book on "Moths and Butterflies of the United States East of the Rocky Mountains" will be issued in April at advanced price. This work will have hundreds of plates, plain and colored, of insects just as nature shows them.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish immediately "The Battles of Peace," a new series of practical sermons, by George Hodges, Dean of the Episcopal Theological Seminary, Cambridge, Mass.; "Annals of an Old Parish," by Edmund Guilbert, giving historical sketches of Trinity Church, Southport, Conn., 1725-1895; and "Four Keywords of Religion," by Dr. Huntington. Of English origin will be "Lessons from the Cross," addresses delivered in Holy week, 1898, by Mandell Creighton, Bishop of London, in St. Paul's Cathedral, and several other works of which titles are given in list under heading Religion and Philosophy.

W. A. WILDE & Co. have under way for immediate publication three stories of special interest to young people: "When Boston Braved the King" is a colonial story of Boston in "Tea Party" times, by William E. Barton, author of "A Hero in Homespun"; "Cadet Standish of the St. Louis," by William Drysdale, is a story of the recent fierce, decisive naval campaign in Cuban waters; and "A Daughter of the West," by Evelyn Raymond, is the story of an American princess, full of thoughts helpful to American girls. The house has just issued the second part of Mrs. M. G. Kennedy's "Special Songs and Services," a collection of motion songs and services specially suitable for the primary departments of Sunday-schools.

E. & J. B. YOUNG & Co. have nearly ready "Eighteen Centuries of the Orthodox Greek Church," by the Rev. A. H. Hore, of Trinity College, Oxford, author of "Eighteen Centuries of the Church in England."

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING.

THE fourth annual meeting of the Booksellers' League, held on the evening of the 3d inst. at the French Restaurant at 111 West 25th Street, New York, was well attended. After dinner the president, Charles A. Burkhardt, briefly referred to the growth of the association, and concluded by saying that the League had every reason to congratulate itself on its work and on its standing. He then called upon the secretary, S. F. McLean, to read the following annual report:

To the Members of the Booksellers' League:

Your Board takes pleasure in presenting for your consideration its Fourth annual report.

Since the last annual meeting the Board has held nine meetings. We now number about 150 members in good standing, and there have been added during the year twenty-two new members.

There have been no special entertainments other than the programs furnished at the monthly dinners, but some of the latter have been particularly enjoyable. This was the case with the dinner held April 13, which aroused the members' patriotism not a little, at which we were addressed most interestingly by Rear-Admiral Gherardi, Rossiter Johnson, Thos. Dunn English and Mr. Marvin of Scribner's. Between the speeches the League joined in patriotic songs. Following other dinners were discussions pertinent to the booksellers' profession, euchre parties, etc., all of which were most enjoyable.

We believe the consensus of opinion is that the change from a Smoker or other such entertainment to a Monthly Dinner, with its after-dinner discussions, has been beneficial to the League.

Though the annual dues were necessarily raised to $5 per annum, the League has not suffered thereby, as is witnessed by the addition of new members.

Our treasurer, Mr. J. B. Brigham, reports:

C. E. BONNELL, chairman of the committee on securing employment, reports applications from the trade for clerks to fill various positions, 33; applications for positions, 52; situations secured through the League, 36.

As is generally known, the fourth annual dinner of the League will take place March 15, at the rooms of the Uptown Association, 111 Fifth Avenue. Interesting speakers have been secured, and an enjoyable occasion is assured. Tickets for this annual dinner are $2.

The League is in a financially prosperous condition, and is growing. We believe that the coming year will show further growth and prosperity, but your Board suggests that every member should have constantly in mind its interests, and do what he can to further the same. The success of the organization depends very largely upon the interest and efforts of its individual members.

Respectfully submitted,

S. F. McLEAN, Secretary.

New York, March 3, 1899.

The report was unanimously adopted.

On motion, W. H. Parker, of E. P. Dutton & Co., who has done so much efficient work for the League during the last two or three years, was unanimously chosen president for the ensuing year. The following were elected to serve in the Board of Managers for three years: A. Growoll, Charles A. Burkhardt, W. W. Howe.

An interesting episode of the evening was the sale by auction of the three designs made by H. T. Carpenter for the dinner card and programme to be used at the dinner of the League to be held on the 15th inst. Frank Appell acted as auctioneer and succeeded in disposing of them at good prices to James Macdonald, the bookbinder.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers held on the 7th inst., the following officers were elected: First Vice-President, J. N. Wing; Second Vice-President, John A. Holden; Secretary, S. F. McLean; Treasurer, James B. Brigham. The Executive Committee for the ensuing year is J. N. Wing, H. T. Carpenter, and Cass Richardson. The Finance Committee, John Briggs, C. E. Butler, and E. F. Treat. The Membership Committee, Desmond Fitzgerald, F. D. Lacy, and Frank Appell. The Employment Bureau remains under the efficient management of C. E. Bonnell. James MacDonald was elected to fill the unexpired term of W. H. Parker, the new President, and S. Edgar Briggs to fill the unexpired term of W. R. Spinney, who resigned.

OBITUARY NOTES.

THE REV. DR. ANDREW KENNEDY BOYD, the author of that charming book, "The Recollections of a Country Parson," died at St. Andrews, Scotland, on the 2d inst. He was born at Auchinleck, Scotland, November 3, 1825. He first won recognition as an author by his essays signed "A. K. H. B.," in Fraser's. Besides the one mentioned he wrote many volumes of sermons and other works.

MICHAEL ANGELO WOOLF, the father of the modern comic picture—the man who woke the laughter of a generation over the almost illegible signature of "M. Woolf"—died on the 4th inst. at the home of his sister, Mrs. Heinus, 437 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. He was born in London in 1837, and came to this country in 1849. In his youth he was an actor; then he studied in an art school and embarked in his life-work. His favorite type was the little street child, and he was known as the artist of the waifs. One of his brothers is the editor of the Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

PROF. PAUL BERCY died at his residence, 561 Fifth Avenue, New York, on the 5th inst. He was born in France in 1839, in a small village which has since become a part of Paris. He studied first at the College de France, where he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and afterward at the Ecole des Lois, obtaining the degree of Doctor of Laws. He was then admitted to the bar, and practiced law until 1883, when he came to the United States. For several years he was associated with the Stern School of Languages in this city, and in 1888 he started the School of Modern Languages jointly with Hermann Schulze. He was the author of a number of educational text-books.

HENRY R. HAYDEN, one of the most widely known insurance editors of the United States, died in East Hartford, Conn., on the 2d inst. He was born at Seneca Falls, N. Y., November 23, 1836. At the age of sixteen he entered a Western printing office, where he learned the trade. He was editor of The Sparta (Wis.) Democrat, until in 1865 he became city editor of The Milwaukee Daily Sentinel. Later he founded The American Churchman, which he removed to Hartford, and in 1871 sold to the proprietors of The Churchman, the most important organ of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States. In January, 1873, he established The Hartford Insurance Journal, and in 1880 became part owner of The Weekly Underwriter, of New York City. He was the editor of both until his death. He was also the author and publisher of several standard insurance works.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

"THE FLOWING BOWL" is the title of a curious volume on drinks of all kinds and of all periods, which Grant Richards, of London, has just published. The author is Edward Spencer, better known by his pen-name of "Nathaniel Gubbins," under which he has written a number of entertaining books. The new volume is interspersed with sundry anecdotes and reminiscences, and has a cover designed by Phil May.

CORSICA is not a hackneyed subject. Most English-speaking persons are ignorant of its history, regarding it mainly as the home of Napoleon and vendetta. Students will therefore be glad to learn that L. H. Caird has, after a study of the principal authorities on the island, written "The History of Corsica" in one portable volume, which T. Fisher Unwin will publish at once. Corsica has no doubt improved since the time when Seneca wrote of the Corsicans: "Their first law is to revenge themselves; their second, to live by plunder; their third, to lie; and their fourth, to deny the gods."

WILLIAM BEVERLEY HARISON has brought suit in the Supreme Court against Edward J. Wessels for $50,000 damages for alleged malicious libel. Mr. Wessels is president and treasurer of the Universe Publishing Company, which has been recently incorporated to publish The Great Round World. Mr. Harrison's suit was brought on account of certain alleged libellous statements printed in The Great Round World on March 2, of which Mr. Harrison was formerly president and treasurer. That periodical was started by him in November, 1896. The Universe was started in March, 1898, by Mr. Wessels. According to Mr. Harrison's statement, a large creditor of The Great Round World brought a suit against it last January, and as a result it was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy, and a receiver was appointed. Mr. Wessels purchased the publication from the receiver. Mr. Harrison says that on the day of the sale he wrote to his former subscribers, telling them that the publication was in financial difficulty, had been placed in the hands of a receiver, and by him sold to Mr. Wessels. He said he intended to continue in the publishing business. In the issue of The Great Round World of March 2 Mr. Harrison alleges that Mr. Wessels reprinted his letter, and, in commenting upon it, said the letter contained statements which were not true.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ATHENS, GA.—D. W. McGregor, bookseller and stationer, has made an assignment.

GREEN BAY, WIS.—G. Kustermann, book, stationery, and music dealer, has sold his book and stationery departments.

NEW YORK CITY.—Dodd, Mead & Co. have leased the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, 37 feet on Fifth Avenue by 125 feet on Thirty-fifth Street, with an "L" in the rear. The building, which was formerly occupied by the City Club, will be reconstructed and an addition built to the "L" 25 feet by half the block. All the first floor will be occupied by the firm's business. The upper stories will be sub-let. Dodd, Mead & Co. expect to be in their new quarters by October 1. It is but a short time ago that the trade hesitated to settle so far uptown as Astor Place. When Henry Holt & Co. led the way to Twenty-third Street there were enough to predict the speedy ruin of the firm. Now the Waldorf-Astoria seems to be the rallying point for the book trade; in another decade, we venture to predict, the book and art trades will be located in the neighborhood of Forty-second Street, under the wing of the great Public Library building on Reservoir Square and convenient to the Grand Central R.R. station.

NEW YORK CITY.—A meeting of the creditors of William Beverley Harrison, bookseller and publisher, 5 West Eighteenth Street, New York, was held on the 3d inst. before George C. Holt, referee in bankruptcy. The schedules showed liabilities of $29,382, and assets of $17,783. The Court has granted permission to dispose of the stock at private sale, in order that as much may be realized for the creditors as possible. The sale will begin on the 25th inst.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—M. D. Ancker, for many years with the J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia, has severed his connection with that house, and will in the future represent the leather goods and holiday specialties house of H. M. Rosenblatt & Co., Philadelphia and New York.

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, enclosures of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amounts should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

STACPOOLE'S THE RAPIN. A Novel. 12mo, $1.25.

Rapin is Parisian studio slang for a professed student of art who has neither the talent nor energy to succeed. There were exceptional reasons to make this Rapin more interesting than Rapins in general. The story is, on the part of one of the chief actors, an idyll; on the part of the other, something else. The characters range from the Bohemians of the Latin Quarter to the nobles of the Faubourg and the Élysées, are all bold types, and drawn with exquisite clearness and finish.

BIOGRAPHY AND HISTORY

Edward Everett Hale.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL AND HIS FRIENDS. By EDWARD EVERETT HALE, D. D. Profusely illustrated with portraits, facsimiles, etc. 1 vol. 8vo

One of the most entertaining books of the season, and to a host of readers one of the most deeply interesting, will be Dr. Hale's reminiscences of Mr. Lowell and the persons with whom he was most closely associated. Dr. Hale was in college with Mr. Lowell, and they were intimate friends. Their lives were very different, but Dr. Hale lived in the same surroundings in which Mr. Lowell spent most of his life, so that he has personal recollections of the people, the places, and the affairs in which Lowell was himself largely engaged. The book might fitly have been called "Lowell and his Surroundings," or "Lowell and the Circumstances of his Life." Lowell is, of course, the hero of the book, which contains a brief review of the last fifty years in Eastern New England, from a point of view not unlike that which Lowell himself would have taken. It is a remarkably interesting group which is brought before us, and there is something peculiarly engaging in being present, so to speak, when the noble literature and the brilliant lives which we now regard with affection and reverence were illuminating a world that did not always appreciate them. The illustrations are numerous and uncommonly interesting. They include many portraits of Lowell, portraits of his friends, views of places associated with his life, and facsimiles of letters, etc.

George C. Gorham.

THE LIFE OF EDWIN M. STANTON. By GEORGE C. GORHAM. With portraits, maps, and facsimiles of important documents. 2 vols. 8vo.

Mr. Stanton, the great War Secretary in President Lincoln's administration, is here described by an intimate friend and ardent admirer. Mr. Gorham, who has seen much of public life and was for a time secretary of the senate, has written this work with the fullest sanction and assistance of Stanton's family, and has had the privilege of examining Stanton's personal correspondence. It may, therefore, be regarded as in every sense an authentic and authorized biography of Mr. Stanton. Of course the work is chiefly concerned with Stanton's administration of his very important department during the war for the Union. It is in some good degree a history of the war, since Mr. Stanton was so immediately connected with the creation of the army, its movements, its maintenance, its occasional defeat, and its final triumph.

It assumes, necessarily, more or less the form of defense or vindication, for Mr. Stanton excited a degree and intenseness of animosity beyond that of any other man concerned in the war. Mr. Gorham tells the dramatic story effectively, and his book will be of great value as a contribution to the history of the years of the war, and as a deserved tribute to Mr. Stanton's great public services.

Carlyle Letters.

LETTERS OF CARLYLE TO HIS YOUNGEST SISTER. Edited, with an Introduction, by CHARLES T. COPELAND, Lecturer on English Literature at Harvard University. With portraits and other illustrations. 1 vol. crown 8vo, $2.00.

This volume contains letters from Thomas Carlyle to his youngest sister, Mrs. Hanning, who lived in Canada, extending from 1832 to the death of Carlyle. They furnish a welcome addition to our knowledge of him, not so much for any information of special importance as for the revelation of his affection for, and his unflinching interest in, the members of his family.

Mr. Copeland has taken an uncommonly judicious view of his function as editor, not merely giving such explanations as may be needed for understanding allusions in the letters, but furnishing a biographical connection for them. In his own words:—

"All the letters that follow are strung on a slender thread of biography. Even readers who know their Carlyle thoroughly may like to see, from year to year and from page to page, the contrast between his life in the world and his life with the peasant kindred who were so far from everything that men call the world. And although nothing in these letters will add to our knowledge of Carlyle, they cannot—taken together—fail to touch us freshly with the sense of what he was to his people, and what they were to him."

Professor Barrett Wendell says, very felicitously: "The precise thing the letters add to one's impression of Carlyle is an element of human commonplaceness. The very triviality, did it not concern him and his, which pervades these letters—letters which mostly any affectionate, manly brother might have written,—makes them singularly welcome." And he concludes by stating that Mr. Copeland, by his tact and skill in editing these letters, gives "true pleasure to whoever reads them, and does true affectionate service to a great, tender memory."

Samuel W. McCall.

THADDEUS STEVENS. In American Statesmen Series. By SAMUEL W. MCCALL. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

Mr. McCall has a striking and picturesque subject, and his book shows how fitly Thaddeus Stevens is included among famous American statesmen. Before entering Congress Mr. Stevens did yeoman service in the cause of popular education and for various other measures in the legislature of Pennsylvania. But his greatest distinction was won in the House of Representatives, where his unflinching opposition to slavery and his valorous leadership as a radical during the war for the Union won for him the title of "the Great Commoner," a title not exactly appropriate, but indicating emphatic admiration for his qualities as a political leader.

Mr. McCall has described the career and character of Mr. Stevens with force and discrimination, and has produced one of the most interesting volumes in the series of American statesmen. His own honorable and successful experience in Congress has enabled him to make this account of Stevens more vivid and effective.

Augustine Jones.

THE LIFE AND WORK OF THOMAS DUDLEY, SECOND GOVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETTS. By AUGUSTINE JONES. With twelve illustrations. 1 vol. 8vo, $5.00, net.

Thomas Dudley was one of the leading factors in the making of New England. He was a man of unquestioned ability and integrity, but on rather meagre evidence he has borne the reputation of being bigoted. Mr. Augustine Jones, the successful head-master of the Friends' School in Providence, admiring Dudley's many excellent qualities, and feeling that injustice has been done him by some writers on the early history of Massachusetts, has prepared a full, impartial, and comprehensive account of the man and of his work. In doing this he necessarily gives much of the history of the beginnings of the Commonwealth. His work has a positive value as a contribution to early New England history, and as a just and long-needed memorial of an eminent man and officer, who here finds adequate recognition.

The illustrations represent Dudley Castle, the Church at Scrooby, and other places with which Governor Dudley was associated.

Emma Stebbins.

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN: HER LETTERS AND MEMORIES OF HER LIFE. By EMMA STEBBINS. New Popular Edition, with portraits. 1 vol. 8vo, $1.50.

A new impression of a biography of uncommon value. Mr. George Ripley, the eminent literary critic of the New York Tribune, when this book was first published, said: "The point of view in which the present work assumes an exceeding interest is that of the portraiture of a rare and noble woman rather than of a critical estimate of an illustrious dramatic artist."

Edward Smith.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA AFTER INDEPENDENCE. A Short Examination of their International Intercourse, 1783-1872. By EDWARD SMITH. 1 vol. 8vo.

This book is intended to aid to a clear understanding of the diplomatic relations of England and the United States from the beginning of the republic until the settlement of the Alabama claims. At a time when a friendlier attitude is apparently desired on both sides, it may be well to see what sort of relations have hitherto existed and been cultivated. The record is by no means wholly edifying or consistently honorable to either nation.

Mr. Smith has produced a work of much importance, covering a field mostly untraversed heretofore. He has investigated the diplomatic archives of both countries, and told the story in a lucid and effective style, fortifying his statements by quotations from official documents, and giving full references. Although his book cannot be pronounced entirely judicial and impartial, and the British point of view is easier for him to gain than the American, it will be a wholesome exercise for Americans to see how some things which they have always taken for granted look quite different when viewed by British eyes. The book is a valuable addition to historical literature, and its appearance now is altogether timely.

John S. Wise.

THE END OF AN ERA. By JOHN S. WISE. 1 vol. crown 8vo.

The era here described is that which for the Southern States came to an end with the surrender of General Johnston to General Sherman in 1865. The author is the son of Henry A. Wise, who was one of the leaders of Virginia, and his acquaintance with what was best in Southern society was intimate. His story describes ante-bellum life in Virginia, its social charm and its peculiar characteristics; the excitement of the John Brown invasion, and the interior political and social life of Richmond when his father was governor. It recounts his years in the Virginia Military Institute, his participation in battles before he was seventeen, his experience and observations in Petersburg during its siege and in Richmond before the city was taken, his hunt for Lee's army by direction of Jefferson Davis, and his presence at the surrender of Johnston. It gives a remarkably vivid and accurate inside view of the Confederate States, and is at once very valuable and interesting.

FICTION

Mrs. M. E. M. Davis.

THE WIRE-CUTTERS. By Mrs. M. E. M. DAVIS, author of "Under the Man-Fig," etc. 1 vol. crown 8vo, $1.50.

Mrs. Davis understands Southern characters very thoroughly, and has the dramatic skill to pose and move them very effectively. The life and people of a country village in Texas are cleverly seized and skillfully depicted. Part of the history of this settlement, and the most absorbing part, relates to the shutting of cattle from the springs by wire fences, and the consequent raids on the fences by men who must have water for their stock. The story includes some sensational incidents in this local warfare, and also embraces characters and events in the vaster struggle of the Civil War. Beautiful women figure in it, also masterful men and men who need to be mastered, and the deeply interesting novel is written with force, knowledge, observation, and literary skill.

Clara Louise Burnham.

A WEST POINT WOOING, AND OTHER STORIES. By CLARA LOUISE BURNHAM, author of "A Great Love," "Miss Bagg's Secretary," etc. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

Mrs. Burnham's West Point stories are so well told, and represent so delightfully the spirit of the romantic features of the Military Academy, that she wisely gathers several of her successful tales relating to it and gives them the attractive title of one of them. The book contains, besides the story which gives its name: Pursuer or Pursued? A Cadet Camp Episode, A Franco-American, The Cadet Captain's Experiment, The New Organ, A Thanksgiving Revival, The Subjugation of Miss Blaine, A Mistake in Consonants, A Neutral Thanksgiving, Mary Annie, By a Minute, and At Crest View. Some of these stories are not connected with West Point, but all have the charm which wins for Mrs. Burnham's novels so many thousand readers. This ought to be a popular book for reading aloud next summer, unless everybody shall have read it before then.

THE CONJURE WOMAN. By CHARLES W. CHESNUTT. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

Mr. Chesnutt, who seems perfectly acquainted with negro superstitions and dialect, here groups a dozen stories of peculiar interest and from an unworked literary field. He has caught that indescribable Ethiopian, mystic quality in the negro mind which is like nothing else in the world, and has embodied this quality in stories at once vigorous, vivid, and of striking dramatic force. A weird and tragic note in them suggests the superstitions of the negro's African ancestors, and yet they abound in humorous situations and sayings. The leading figure in the book, the story-teller, is Uncle Julius, a cousin — once removed — of Uncle Remus, with a vein of adroit management more conspicuous than in that delightful, world-famous Uncle; and Aunt Peggy is hardly less effective and interesting. The negro dialect is absolutely flawless, and not only is it admissible, — in such stories it is demanded, and forms an integral part of their nature and their charm.

Alice Brown.

TIVERTON TALES. By ALICE BROWN, author of "By Oak and Thorn," "The Day of His Youth," etc. 1 vol. 16mo.

"Meadowgrass" revealed Miss Brown as a writer of thoroughly good New England stories, and these "Tiverton Tales" emphasize afresh her power and skill in this charming field of literature. The twelve stories of rural life are equally satisfactory in their appreciation and description of the country, and in their clear discrimination and revelation of character in the men and women who figure in them. Aside from the narrative interest of the stories, and adding a crowning charm to them, are the tone of kindly sympathy which pervades them, the habit of looking for the most attractive phase of country life and character, and a delicacy and a refinement which cause the reader to feel a heartier respect for all good, wholesome people as well as for a writer who treats them with such courtesy.

Mary Hartwell Catherwood.

THE QUEEN OF THE SWAMP AND OTHER PLAIN AMERICANS.

By MARY HARTWELL CATHERWOOD, author of "The Lady of Fort St. John," "Old Kaskaskia," etc. 1 vol. 16mo.

Mrs. Catherwood in this group of stories follows the course which seems best to suit her genius, by giving them an historical setting and the charm of an historical atmosphere. They relate to Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois, and include in the narratives descriptions of life in those States during successive stages of the present century. The date of each story is given, by which chronological distinctness and relation are secured; and the stories are told with the clearness and dramatic force with which Mrs. Catherwood's readers are familiar.

Adelina C. Lust.

A TENT OF GRACE. By ADELINA C. LUST. 1 vol. crown 8vo, $1.50.

A story quite out of the common course, and distinctly above the ordinary novel in power and interest. The scene is laid in Germany, and the time is about the middle of this century. The motif of the story is the deep gulf of racial distinctions, the impassable gulf between the Christian and the Jew. The heroine is a beautiful Jewess, rescued when a child from a mob of children, and attaining a noble womanhood under the fostering care of the pastor of the German village and his wife. She is loved by Christian and Jew, and the struggle in her mind between the commanding force of her religious tradition and the intense force of her affection is described with perfect understanding and remarkable power. Without telling more of the story, it is safe to say that few novels possess elements of stronger interest, few are written with a keener sense of the tragic possibilities involved, and few leave the reader more impressed with "all that human hearts endure." There is much grasp in the conception, much dignity in the author's relation to the story, and much grace and charm as well as force in the narration. If good stories well told are popular, this is sure of a wide popularity.

Frances Courtenay Baylor.

THE LADDER OF FORTUNE. By FRANCES COURTENAY BAYLOR, author of "Claudia Hyde," "Juan and Juanita," etc. 1 vol. crown 8vo, $1.50.

The son of a California miner climbs the ladder of fortune, and marries a woman who has the skill to spend a sufficient part of what he wins. She is ambitious to gain a footing in showy society, which she esteems as good society. Her husband is indifferent to social position, but performs what many regard as the first duty of man, by being "a good provider" of money for his family. The scene of the story is partly in Western America, partly in Paris. Those who have read "Claudia Hyde" will not need to be told that this new story has abundant incident and is told with vivacity and skill.

Rufus Mann.

THE PRELUDE AND THE PLAY. By RUFUS MANN. 1 vol. 16mo.

A Radcliffe girl marries the captain of the Harvard eleven, and they go to Chicago to live. Absorption in business and politics causes the husband to give less than due heed to his wife and his home. She goes to Europe, and he follows later to bring her home and use practically the wisdom experience has taught him. This is a meagre outline of an uncommon story. In its course prominent Harvard professors are introduced, and the author shows great familiarity with Cambridge people and university life. Much skill and subtle discrimination are shown in picturing the gradual alienation of husband and wife, and in reuniting them when each better understands and appreciates the other. The story is evidently written by one who has thought and observed much, and is likely to cause no little discussion.

Florence Converse.

DIANA VICTRIX. By FLORENCE CONVERSE. In Riverside Paper Series. 16mo, 50 cents.

This delightful story has enjoyed a good degree of popular favor, and it is now to be brought out in a cheaper form to give it a far wider reading. The Outlook said of it: "The plot is well constructed, and the characters stand out sharply and distinctly. Miss Converse's style is smooth, simple, and natural, and one turns over page after page of her book with restful pleasure and interest. The scene of her story is laid in New Orleans, and there is just enough of local color, just enough French lightness and charm, to give an enviable distinction to the book."

POETRY.

John Milton.

COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS OF JOHN MILTON. Cambridge Edition. With a Biographical Sketch, Introductions, and Notes by WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, Indexes to Titles and First Lines, a portrait, and an engraving of Milton's home. 1 vol. large crown 8vo, $2.00.

This edition of Milton's Complete Poetical Works has been prepared on the plan pursued in previous volumes of the Cambridge Edition, — Longfellow, Whittier, Holmes, Lowell, Browning, Burns, and Tennyson. It has been edited with scrupulous care to furnish a perfectly accurate text, contains some highly important Introductions, supplies Notes wherever needed, states the circumstances or conditions under which the more important poems were written, gives in an adequate translation Milton's Latin poems, and prefixes a full and carefully prepared Biographical Sketch. The volume will have Indexes to Titles and First Lines of all the poems; the lines will be numbered; and a fine portrait and an engraved title-page with a vignette of the poet's home will be given. It is believed that this will be the most complete, the most carefully edited, and the best equipped single-volume edition ever published of Milton's Poetical Works.

The Cambridge Keats.

THE COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS OF JOHN KEATS. Cambridge Edition. With Biographical Sketch, Notes, Indexes, a portrait, and an engraved title-page with a vignette. 1 vol. large crown 8vo, $2.00.

The Poems of Keats, which belong to the world's permanent and delightful literature, will be brought out in the same form and with the same editorial treatment which have proved so satisfactory in the volumes already issued in the Cambridge Edition. The editorial equipment will include accuracy of Text, a Biographical Sketch, Notes, and Indexes to Titles and First Lines; and the lines will be numbered. It is believed that it will be the best volume in which Keats's Poems have ever been brought out.

Henry Timrod.

POEMS. By HENRY TIMROD. New Memorial Edition. With a portrait and Biographical Sketch. 1 vol. 12mo, $1.50, net.

Timrod was beyond question one of the foremost poets of the South, and his qualities of thought, imagination, and lyrical expression will secure for him an enviable rank among American poets. The circumstances of his life prevented his gaining while he lived the audience he deserved; but now his friends and admirers are resolved to raise a monument in his honor, and offer this rich and handsome volume, worthy both in form and contents, to insure to Timrod his proper place in American literature.

Arlo Bates.

UNDER THE BEECH-TREE. Poems by ARLO BATES, author of "The Puritans," etc. 1 vol. 16mo.

Those who have enjoyed Mr. Bates's previous books of poetry will welcome this tasteful volume, which is doubtless the best he has yet produced, the one which shows most fully his imaginative power and the lyrical utterance of which he is master.

HERMIONE AND OTHER POEMS. By EDWARD ROWLAND SILL. 1 vol. small 16mo, $1.00.

The two small volumes heretofore published of Mr. Sill's poems have had the good fortune to enlist in an uncommon degree the interest of lovers of verse. They have been the sufficient witness to the genuine, permanent, and crowning poetic quality of Mr. Sill's genius. The books have been held very precious by those who could appreciate their sterling character and their literary charm. They have been accounted "infinite riches in a little room."

Lovers of Sill will be glad to learn that enough more of his poems have been gathered, poems not known about when his previous volumes were published, to make a book like the two others, and this will be brought out at an early day.

ESSAYS.

Edward H. Hall.

PAPIAS AND HIS CONTEMPORARIES: A Study of Religious Thought in the Second Century. By REV. EDWARD H. HALL. 1 vol. 12mo, $1.25.

This is a chivalrous attempt to extricate Truth from the dark depths of the second century of the Christian era. Very little, indeed, is known of that century, and all who appreciate the importance of the time and the extraordinary interest which it possesses for the student of Christian history will heartily welcome Mr. Hall's attempt to shed some light on it. So many phases of faith have been credited to that dim century that only Omniscience could state the facts, and probably only Omnipotence could secure their acceptance. Mr. Hall is a thorough scholar and has devoted the study of years to ecclesiastical history, with a strong predilection to attack the most difficult problems. He uses Papias to show the method and spirit of early Christianity. He examines the Fathers from St. Peter — Ignatius, Jerome, Marcion, Valentine — down to the third century, reviewing their works and influence. His treatment of the Millennium, the Divinity of Christ, and the other topics which come within his survey is careful, candid, and worthy of most respectful consideration. In a word, this is a contribution of real importance to our knowledge of an era which holds a significant and mysterious place in the history of Christianity.

Hugo Münsterberg.

PSYCHOLOGY AND LIFE. By HUGO MÜNSTERBERG, Professor of Psychology in Harvard University. 1 vol. crown 8vo.

It is a piece of good fortune to many readers that, instead of restricting the results of his studies in the field of Psychology to university students, Professor Münsterberg here offers them to the public. They are worthy of the great reputation which he bears in this department of scientific investigation, and form a book of remarkable value. He defines his object to be "to clear up the limits between the modern study of mental life on the one side and the theoretical and practical interests of civilization on the other." Some of the topics treated are: The Danger from Experimental Psychology, Psychology and the Real Life, Psychology and Art, and Psychology and Mysticism. In the hands of a master like Professor Münsterberg these subjects are full of suggestion, and his treatment prophesies vast benefits in the domains of education, social life, practical life, and religion. Teachers, thoughtful clergymen, and students of society and life will find this book well worth their careful study.

William Roscoe Thayer.

THE THRONE-MAKERS. By WILLIAM ROSCOE THAYER, author of "The Dawn of Italian Independence," "Pœms New and Old," etc. 1 vol. 12mo.

The "throne-makers" are Bismarck, Napoleon III., Kossuth, and Garibaldi. To these are added papers on Carlyle, Tintoret, Giordano Bruno, and Bryant. All of these papers are marked by a fine historic and critical sense, which lifts them quite above the average of their class. The research and uncommon power of statement which make Mr. Thayer's volumes on "The Dawn of Italian Independence" so noteworthy a contribution to modern historical literature lend to the first four papers in this book unusual value; and the broad intelligence and independent judgment of Mr. Thayer give to the last four papers a high and permanent quality.

Benjamin F. Trueblood.

THE FEDERATION OF THE WORLD. By BENJAMIN F. TRUEBLOOD, LL.D., Secretary of the American Peace Society. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.00.

Dr. Trueblood in this little book makes a strong, reasonable appeal for a union of all civilized nations in the interest of peace, — a federation of the world based on sound economic as well as humane principles. It is not a sentimental appeal, nor is it an official document such as the active officer of a peace society might put forth, but it challenges respect by its breadth of spirit, its wide survey of the condition of the nations, its recognition of the obstacles to union, and its emphatic plea for the larger interests of mankind. It should be read by all intelligent men who easily satisfy themselves that as war has always been it must always be. It is a fine clarion note for a wiser and humaner world.

John Fiske.

THROUGH NATURE TO GOD. By JOHN FISKE. 1. vol. 6mo, $1.00.

CONTENTS: The Mystery of Evil; The Cosmic Roots of Love and Self-Sacrifice; The Everlasting Reality of Religion.

Many of Mr. Fiske's readers attach special importance to his two small volumes, The Idea of God as affected by Modern Knowledge, and The Destiny of Man, viewed in the Light of his Origin. These have, for many, a remarkable value either as resolving doubts, answering the most serious questionings, or as indicating the large and reasonable view which gives dignity to life and trust to the spirit. His present book is the natural sequel to the other two. It seeks to solve the tremendous mystery of evil so as to give man a fuller sense of his high calling and a firmer assurance of the Infinite wisdom and benignity. It shows the range and power of love and self-sacrifice, and emphasizes the religious lesson which Nature teaches.

SCIENCE

Charles Sprague Sargent.

THE SILVA OF NORTH AMERICA. A Description of the Trees which grow naturally in North America, exclusive of Mexico. By CHARLES SPRAGUE SARGENT, Director of the Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University. Illustrated with Figures and Analyses drawn from Nature by CHARLES EDWARD FAXON, and engraved by PHILIBERT and EUGENE PICART. In quarto volumes, each containing fifty plates. Price $25.00 each, net. Vol. XII. now ready.

Each new volume of this work has deepened the impression of its great and permanent value, and of the remarkable artistic features as well. Speaking of Volume XI. the New York Tribune remarks: "Professor Sargent's descriptions are marked not only by erudition, but by many happy touches which give them a character more than scientific. They are clear and vivid, and this volume is really a collection of living portraits. Imbedded in the notes are countless interesting bits of lore, sometimes scientific, sometimes historical or personal. To the high artistic value as well as to the instructive quality of Mr. Faxon's plates we have also borne frequent testimony. The present volume deepens, in short, the gratitude to its author, which will endure so long as there remain lovers as well as students of our trees."

The New York Nation remarks: "It is impossible to praise too highly the excellence of Mr. Faxon's drawings. . . . The whole work is highly creditable to the author and artist, and to American botany."

Samuel H. Scudder.

EVERY-DAY BUTTERFLIES. By SAMUEL H. SCUDDER, author of "The Butterflies of the Eastern States and Canada," "Frail Children of the Air," etc. Fully illustrated. 1 vol. crown 8vo.

Dr. Scudder is well and widely known as an authority on butterflies, and the books he has published on this subject have taken very high rank for their scientific character and their attractive presentation. The book here announced is not written for the scientific student, but for popular reading. It includes familiar accounts of sixty or more of the commonest butterflies taken in the order of the season. The stories of the butterflies are written in a pleasing manner, and the descriptions of them and of their habits have the clearness and easy grace which come from the fullest knowledge. The popular names are given, also the scientific. The descriptions and illustrations make this a capital book and thoroughly interesting.

Frederick LeRoy Sargent.

CORN PLANTS. By FREDERICK LEROY SARGENT. With illustrations. 1 vol. 12mo.

In compact form and in readable style Mr. Sargent gives a clear account of the six important grain plants of the world, — wheat, oats, rye, barley, rice, and maize. He explains what corn plants are, indicates their importance to mankind, and narrates the myths and religious customs which have grown up about them. Then he describes, in a way to enlist the hearty interest of the reader, how the plants are formed, and how their growth and perfection are insured by their various organs. He shows how well they are adapted for ideal food products for mankind, and gives the history, distribution, and uses of each of the six plants. The fullness of Mr. Sargent's knowledge and the clearness and skill with which he writes make his little book valuable and interesting in a high degree, — perhaps quite as much so for adults as for the young readers for whom it was written.

Olive Thorne Miller.

A FIRST BOOK OF BIRDS. By OLIVE THORNE MILLER, author of "Bird-Ways," "In Nesting Time," "Little Brothers of the Air," "A Bird-Lover in the West," "Four-Handed Folk," and "Upon the Tree-Tops." Illustrated.

Mrs. Miller, to whom lovers of birds are so much indebted for her books which describe so many birds and tell of their habits so sympathetically, now adds to our obligation by a bird book intended for children. It describes birds' nests, the young birds, — their growth and how they are fed, how they get their feathers and are taught to fly and to do various other things. Then it tells of the language of birds, their food, their migrations, their mental and moral development, their structure, their economic value to mankind. It instructs how to attract them to visit about our houses and how to study their ways. In short, it may be called a small encyclopædia of birds, full of information and exceedingly interesting. Its value and interest are greatly increased by many pictures of birds.

MISCELLANEOUS

George H. Palmer.

THE ANTIGONE OF SOPHOCLES. Translated into English by GEORGE H. PALMER, professor in Harvard University. With an Introduction. 1 vol. 12mo.

Those who have read Professor Palmer's singularly excellent translation of the Odyssey of Homer will rejoice that he has undertaken a translation of the Antigone. Ample knowledge of Greek literature is supplemented in him by an uncommon mastery of English, and his comprehensive appreciation of Greek character and life, of Greek thought and dramatic genius, enables him to give to his translation the force, the freedom, and the fluency of an original work. To the translation he prefixes an Introduction of considerable length, treating of the Greek drama, of the place of the Antigone in Greek tragedy, and comments of remarkable value and attractiveness. Altogether this book is one in which the fruits of the finest scholarship and of the noblest literary skill are admirably blended into a work of true art.

A SATCHEL GUIDE FOR THE VACATION TOURIST IN EUROPE.

By W. J. ROLFE, Litt. D. Edition for 1899, carefully revised to date, both the text and maps. A compact Itinerary of the British Isles, Belgium and Holland, Germany and the Rhine, Switzerland, France, Austria, and Italy. With Maps of the British Isles, Continental Europe, Switzerland, Street Plans of London and Paris, Tables of the Comparative Values of the United States and European Moneys, a Traveler's Calendar of Ecclesiastical and Popular Festivals, Fairs, etc. 18mo, roan, flexible, $1.50, net.

This guide-book covers the portions of Europe commonly visited by vacation tourists. It has grown steadily in popular favor, as it has been tested and proved to contain just the information that tourists desire, and to be thoroughly reliable.

College Requirements in English.

For "Careful Study," for 1900, 1901, 1902. 1 vol. crown 8vo, 666 pages, $1.00, net.

This book brings together all the Essays and Poetry required for admission to American colleges in the years 1900, 1901, and 1902. It comprises Macaulay's Essay on Milton, Milton's Paradise Lost, Milton's L'Allegro, Il Penseroso, and Other Poems, Shakespeare's Macbeth, Macaulay's Life and Writings of Addison, Burke's On Conciliation with the Colonies.

Judah P. Benjamin.

BENJAMIN ON SALES. A Treatise on the Law of Sale of Personal Property.

With References to the American Decisions and to the French Code and Civil Law. By JUDAH P. BENJAMIN. Seventh American Edition, reprinted from the latest English edition, edited by Messrs. ARTHUR BEILBY PEARSON-GEE and HUGH FENWICK BOYD, of the Inner Temple, London, and newly edited and revised, with American Notes, by the late Hon. EDMUND H. BENNETT, Dean of the Boston University Law School, and SAMUEL C. BENNETT. 1 vol. 8vo, sheep, $6.00, net.

Benjamin's Treatise on Sales has for many years been recognized as the authority in its department. Its statement of the law and its citations of decisions are so full and accurate that it has no rival.

Important additions have been made to this edition, bringing it up to date, and rendering it indispensable to the equipment of every attorney who wishes the latest knowledge in this branch of the law.

John Koren.

THE LIQUOR PROBLEM IN ITS ECONOMIC ASPECT. By JOHN KOREN.

An Investigation made under the Direction of Professors W. O. Atwater, Henry W. Farnam, J. F. Jones, Doctors Z. R. Brockway, John Graham Brooks, E. R. L. Gould, and Hon. Carroll D. Wright, a Sub-Committee of the Committee of Fifty to investigate the Liquor Problem. With an Introduction by Professor HENRY W. FARNAM. 1 vol. 12mo.

The volume which appeared two years ago on the Liquor Problem in its Legislative Aspect attracted much attention, but necessarily appealed to a much smaller audience than the volume here announced. The economic aspect of the liquor problem is one of immense practical interest. Indeed, the present investigation shows its practical interest to be even greater than had been claimed by the most earnest advocates of temperance. The investigation covers (1) Poverty and Liquor; (2) Pauperism and Liquor; (3) Destitution of Children and Liquor; (4) Crime and Liquor; (5) The Negroes and the Liquor Problem; (6) The Indians and the Liquor Problem; (7) Social Aspects of the Saloon in Great Britain. The results of this investigation as here recorded by Mr. Koren are startling in their revelation of the enormous waste and loss entailed by the "drink habit." The economic injury to individuals and to society is something appalling. Many tables of statistics in an Appendix summarize results of various investigations. Every good citizen should read this book, to gain from it guidance in his duties as a member of the community which has so much at stake.

"If an admirer of Mr. Kipling's prose work wanted to place in the hands of a person who was unacquainted with his writing a volume which would give, as it were, at a glance some general idea of his craftsmanship, he could not do better than procure 'The Day's Work.'"

THE DAY'S WORK

(10,000 COPIES SOLD DURING JANUARY AND FEBRUARY)

BY

RUDYARD KIPLING

"It is, in fact, impossible to turn over a volume of his collected stories without being impressed with the fact that they not only stand re-reading, but that they improve at the second reading—and of how few recent short stories can this be said! This particular volume contains a more than average proportion of Mr. Kipling's best work."—The Outlook.

"The twelve tales in 'The Day's Work' are such as no man living, and few dead, can match."

"This volume certainly emphasizes the fact that Mr. Kipling is master of the short story as a form of literary expression. The man who could write 'The Bridge-Builders' or 'The Tomb of His Ancestors,' and also produce 'The Ship that Found Herself' or 'My Sunday at Home' or 'Bread Upon the Waters,' is gifted with a genius whose variety will never grow stale. . . . What more can be said of this volume than that it presents the ripest things thus far of these clearer seeing years. It is a collection of tales the like of which has not been gathered together elsewhere these many moons."—Brooklyn Eagle.

"It is Mr. Kipling's way to take his readers by surprise. . . . Who had ever expected that poetry could be disclosed in a ship's rivet, that a locomotive could be personalized, that a garboard strake could be made to seem a living thing? Yet now that 'The Day's Work' is in our hands, with the uncanny realism of 'The Ship that Found Herself' jostling the almost mythical fantasy of 'The Brushwood Boy,' we find ourselves speculating as to whether we ought to be surprised at all. . . . The work is solid as a rock. Surprise fades and only deep contentment remains, the contentment of a reader who murmurs to himself as he turns the last page, 'I shall soon be reading this again.'"—New York Tribune.

Bergerac, Cyrano de A Voyage to the Moon

THE MASTERPIECE OF THE REAL CYRANO

This most interesting work could easily stand upon its own merits, even without the literary connections its author has with Swift and Molière, or with M. Rostand's famous play. It is a charmingly fanciful and poetic piece of literature, describing the strange customs and life of the dwellers in the moon, and is full of imagination and delicate conceits. Curtis Hidden Page, of Columbia University, has supplied an introduction and notes to this entertaining narrative. Readers of "Cyrano" will remember the ways in which M. Rostand's hero got to the moon, described in his interview with the Duke. In this book will be found the original ideas from which these fancies were drawn.

SPECIFICATIONS:—Size, 4x6; Pages, 220; Binding, flexible cloth; Illustrated from 17th century engravings; 50 cents net. (Uniform with "Cyrano.")

Blanchan, Neltje Nature's Garden

AN AID TO KNOWLEDGE OF OUR WILD FLOWERS

WITH MANY SUPERB COLORED PLATES AND OTHER ILLUSTRATIONS
BY THE AUTHOR OF "BIRD NEIGHBORS"

An unequalled array of colored and other photographs made directly from the living wild-flowers enables the novice to instantly name their counterparts when met afield. The flowers have been classified according to COLOR, which the colored photographs splendidly emphasize. A list classifies them according to their MONTHS OF BLOOMING; another list shows their PREFERRED LOCALITIES or habitats; and finally the division of the flowers into their PROPER FAMILIES by that scientific classification adopted by the International Botanical Congress, which

Bonsal, Stephen

The Fight for Santiago

THE TRUE STORY OF THE AMERICAN SOLDIER IN THE CUBAN CAMPAIGN
FROM TAMPA TO THE FALL OF SANTIAGO

This narrative is a careful, dispassionate, and able summing up of the whole campaign by a writer who went all through it, and who is an authority upon Cuban affairs; and the picture of the heroism and fortitude of our soldiers, who in nine weeks freed Cuba and ended the war, is one to stir the blood of every American. The volume gives perhaps the most unbiased and reliable history obtainable of the whole course of military operations, and special emphasis is laid upon the experience of the soldier in the ranks. Indeed, Mr. Bonsal has done for the American soldier before Santiago, what Kinglake did for the English soldier before Sebastopol.

SPECIFICATIONS:—Size, 6x9¼; Pages, 543; Binding, cloth; Type, 11-point. Illustrations, 16 insets from photographs and drawings and 5 maps, two of them in a large folder. Price, $2.50.

Memoirs of 1812-1813

COMPILED FROM THE ORIGINAL MSS. BY PAUL COTTIN

This book has already run through many editions in Paris. It gives the personal adventures (compiled from his diary) of a sergeant in a regiment of the Emperor Napoleon's Old Guard. He went through the gloomy Russian campaign and endured to the full the terrific hardships of those famous soldiers, who "grumbled but followed always." It gives a new light, a new point of view upon a chapter of history which will always hold its place in the picturesque annals of the world.

SPECIFICATIONS:—Size, 5¼x8¼; Pages, about 400; Binding, cloth, decorated; Type, 10-point; Illustrations, 8, nearly all from drawings made by an officer of Napoleon's Army. $1.50.

Church Sociables and Entertainments

An invaluable, practical little volume, full of suggestions for entertaining mixed gatherings of people, for festivals, celebrations, harvest-homes, and the like. It tells not only how to entertain, but how to raise money. It is based on actual experience and is full of original and telling ideas. Its illustrations show many tasteful decorations and arrangements for such festivities.

Crockett, S. R.

The Black Douglas

Mr. Crockett himself considers this romance of the fifteenth century in Scotland, dealing with the fall of the great House of Douglas (on which he has been working for the past ten years), his strongest work.

"Their castle of Thrieve," he says, "stands on an island in the midst of the river Dee, and to this day its great walls, over seventy feet high, defy the storms of Galloway. The backbone of the story is the culmination of the great family in the person of William Douglas, who, as a boy of twenty-one, held all Scotland south of the Tay in the hollow of his hand, who coined money at his own mint, and rode abroad with a more than regal train."

The Works of Charles Dickens

Temple Edition

TO BE COMPLETED IN FORTY VOLUMES—FIRST TEN NOW READY: "THE PICKWICK PAPERS," "SKETCHES BY BOZ," "NICHOLAS NICKLEBY" AND "OLIVER TWIST"

This charming edition is an advance on even those former issues of standard authors which have made the "Temple" sets of J. M. Dent & Co. famous. Each volume has an artistic colored frontispiece, and the limp leather binding (prepared by a secret process), the clear type and fine paper, make an ideal dress for an author who is regarded the world over with peculiar affection. The first ten volumes are ready, and the remaining thirty will be issued during 1899.

SPECIFICATIONS:—Size, 4x6; Average pages, 300; Binding, flexible leather, gilt top; colored frontispiece; Complete in 40 vols. Price, regular trade edition, 80 cents per vol.

Dickinson, Martha Gilbert

Within the Hedge

This volume of poetry is a really extraordinary collection to come as a "first book" from an author practically unknown. It contains only a small proportion of the work the author has produced, but these ninety or a hundred poems are "pure gold." Miss Dickinson's magazine contributions have received the hearty praise of such competent judges as Edmund Clarence Stedman and Richard Burton. Mr. Stedman selected several of these poems for his "American Anthology," writing the author that although that work was intended to cover only well-known writers, he felt constrained to make an exception in her case.

Findlater, Jane Helen

Rachel

This unusual story traces the development of Michael Fletcher, a modern prophet, whose wonderful mental and spiritual gifts and power over his auditors finally lead him into devious paths. The scene is laid largely in Edinburgh and London, and the sect of the "Foreseers," whose leader Michael becomes, typifies some of the "free lance" tendencies of modern religious thought.

Fraser, W. A.

The Eye of a God

AND OTHER TALES OF EAST AND WEST

Mr. Fraser is a new writer of the greatest promise. He has lived in many parts of the far East, in Burmah and India especially. He has not only had strange adventures, but he is possessed of a keen observation and a striking style of his own. He is equally familiar with the far West of our own country and Canada, and knows the Redskin as well as the Hindoo. The tales have a new flavor and the true ring of reality and life.

Goode, W. A. M. With Sampson Through the War

WITH CHAPTERS BY REAR-ADMIRAL SAMPSON, CAPTAIN ROBLEY D. EVANS AND COMMANDER C. C. TODD

This is an authoritative and striking history of the naval operations in the North Atlantic during the war with Spain. The author was on the Flagship "New York" all through the war, and his account is that of an eye-witness who saw events from headquarters. A unique interest is given by the "statements" from the Rear-Admiral and Captain Evans describing and explaining the famous Santiago victory, and by Commander Todd's chapter on the fight at Cardenas. The book may fairly be accounted the reliable history of this part of the war, settling many vexed points.

Hart, Charles H. Life Masks of Great Americans

PRINTED FROM TYPE BY DE VINNE. 397 COPIES ONLY.

These wonderful life masks of famous Americans, the work of J. H. I. Browere, whose invention died with him, were but recently discovered, and reveal to us for the first time the features and facial character of our great statesmen as they really were. This volume has been prepared to supply the demand for a book containing in permanent form these great portraits not obtainable elsewhere. Text by Charles Henry Hart.

SPECIFICATIONS:—Size, large octavo, two editions; fifty copies on large paper, with plates on Japan, $25 net; 347 copies, regular numbered edition, $6 net. The book will be printed from type by De Vinne, and no further copies will be struck off.

Jokai, MaurusA Hungarian Nabob

Mr. R. Nisbet Bain has translated this romantic story, which has attained the position of a national classic in Hungary. The character of the eccentric old Nabob and the wild life of the powerful Magyar nobles in the first quarter of the century are revelations to the American reader, while the dramatic interest of the tale never flags.

SPECIFICATIONS:—Size, 5x7 1/4; Binding, cloth, with decorative design; Pages, 358. $1.25.

Kipling, RudyardKipling Kalendar for 1900

THE MOUNT FROM A BAS-RELIEF BY MR. J. LOCKWOOD KIPLING.

The 365 selections for this calendar are from copyrighted material, and have been made under the author's supervision. Mr. Kipling, Sr., has modeled an extraordinary plaque representing a profile likeness of the author, flanked by two elephants' heads, with a figure of Mowgli and his jungle companions below. This has been reproduced exactly, in relief, making a very striking and unusually artistic calendar. There will be two editions, the regular one in heavy paper embossed; the other an édition de luxe in bronze. (In press.)

Mac Manus, Seumas ("Mac")Through the Turf Smoke

THE LOVE, LORE AND LAUGHTER OF OLD IRELAND

Mr. Mac Manus's clever stories deal with the Irish peasant of his native Donegal—his irresistibly humorous faculty and his mass of quaint folklore; and the cottage hearths beside which such tales are told must possess unusual fascinations. This is the author's first book in America, though his publications on the other side have gained much popularity.

Mason, Caroline A. The Minister of Carthage

Mrs. Mason's last novelette, "A Minister of the World," has been pronounced by enthusiastic readers the best story of ministerial life ever written, and this new tale is equally vivid and true to life. It is the romance of a "trial" sermon preached by a brilliant young clergyman as a "supply" in the pulpit of a prosperous church. It wins him a "call" and the love of a girl. But his high sense of duty leads to a battle between love and ambition.

McClure's, Tales from Paper Edition

These five volumes contain the best short stories published in McCLURE'S MAGAZINE, which has been famous for spirited, wholesome tales. The covers are unusually attractive, being of strong gray-brown paper, printed decoratively in red and black. The volumes are well illustrated and arranged as follows :

VOL. I. Romance; VOL. II. Humor; VOL. III. The West; VOL. IV. Adventure; VOL. V. War.

"Dainty little pocket volumes. Each tale is selected because of its merit, and not because it is the work of some particular author. There are a few illustrations, but the books depend upon their literary and artistic merits for their success. It is an attractive and interesting series of volumes."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Norris, Frank

McTeague

A STORY OF SAN FRANCISCO

Mr. Norris's former book, "Moran of the Lady Letty," won warm praise from some of the best critics, among them Mr. W. D. Howells. This new novel is a powerful and forceful one, being a sustained study in the development of several human lives, which certainly evinces something nearly akin to genius. The story is harsh, almost brutal at times, owing to its environment ; but never perhaps has the curse of Money been more overwhelmingly presented by an American writer.

Wilkins, Mary E.

The Jamesons

In this new novelette Miss Wilkins brings among her inimitable New England villagers Mrs. H. Boardman Jameson, the Reformer. This worthy lady sets out to improve and "widen the spheres" of the inhabitants of Linnville, introducing them to Browning, Ibsen and Maeterlinck, to Aesthetics and Rational Attire. Any one who knows the author's work can imagine the irresistible way in which these situations are handled.

Young, Lucien, U.S.N.

The Real Hawaii

ITS HISTORY AND PRESENT CONDITION, INCLUDING THE TRUE STORY OF THE REVOLUTION

This is an authoritative work upon our newly acquired possessions by an American Naval officer, who knows his subject thoroughly. It not only gives the inside history of the revolution which ended the Monarchy—Lieutenant Young was on the Boston at that time, and took an active part in the proceedings—but furnishes a reliable hand-book to the condition and resources of the island. An appendix contains an elaborate array of statistical information.

SPECIFICATIONS:—Size, 5x7 1/2; Pages, about 325; Illustrations and large maps. $1.50.

SPRING BOOKS. READY APRIL 1st.

LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

*Announce for immediate issue the following
New Books and New Editions:*

GERMANY: HER PEOPLE AND THEIR STORY.

By AUGUSTA HALE GIFFORD. One vol., 8vo, 593 pages, cloth, emblematic cover, fully illustrated, $1.50.

Mrs. Gifford has prepared herself for this book by the experiences of a long residence abroad, and by a faithful and devoted study of all phases of German life and history from the earliest times to the present day. The book she has written is the first popular story of Germany especially prepared for American readers, and studied from an American standpoint. In this light the book is unique. It stands alone as the latest and most complete, while yet a brief and condensed story of the German Empire, from its beginnings to its present proud position among the world-leaders, and is peculiarly adapted, not only to the enlightenment of the American native born, but also for the constantly increasing quota of young German-Americans who, while good Americans, also hold in reverence the memory of the Fatherland.

TALES OF THE MALAYAN COAST.

By ROUNSEVELLE WILDMAN, Consul-General of the United States at Hong Kong. One vol., 12mo. Illustrated by Henry Sandham. $1.00.

This book will easily be considered as one of the most notable of the season. Rounseville Wildman, American journalist, traveller, foreign representative, and present Consul-General at Hong Kong, has lived for years among the people neighboring to our new acquisitions in the Philippines. Indeed, for these new possessions Mr. Wildman is partly responsible. These stories are the result of his residence upon the Malayan coast and an intimate knowledge of the people. They are full of color and action, and permeated with the subtle flavor of the Orient. The book is daintily gotten up and capably illustrated, and is dedicated by permission to Admiral Dewey.

THE STORY OF OUR WAR WITH SPAIN.

Told for Young Americans. By ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS, author of the "Century Book for Young Americans," "True Story of George Washington," "Lincoln, Franklin, and others," "Historic Boys," etc. One vol., 8vo, profusely illustrated, $1.50.

In the possible multiplicity of histories of what President McKinley calls "our extraordinary war with Spain," preference in selection will naturally be given to those written by authors of established reputation and acknowledged ability. For this reason alone no story of the War of 1898 is more certain of securing a foremost place in public favor than this one prepared after a careful study of the best and latest data by Elbridge S. Brooks. It is comprehensive, graphic, and entertaining, and well sustains the reputation earned by this author's long list of interesting and successful books for young Americans.

YESTERDAY FRAMED IN TO-DAY.

A Story of the Christ and How To-Day Received Him. By "PANSY" (Mrs. G. R. ALDEN). One vol., 8vo, illustrated, $1.50.

Other writers have attempted to portray the actions of the world of to-day should Christ appear in it to labor, heal, and bless as he did in the yesterday of nineteen centuries ago. Pansy has placed him there. Her book is unlike anything else in print. Into the to-day of railroads and telegraphs, phonographs and electric lights, she brings a central figure—Jesus the Christ. The announcement of this remarkable book will create alike curiosity and desire on the part of those who have followed the marvellous development of the Pansy books—all of them ministers for good along practical, helpful, spiritual lines.

THE STORIES POLLY PEPPER TOLD.

By MARGARET SIDNEY, author of the famous "Pepper Books." One vol., 12mo. Illustrated by Jessie McDermott and Etheldred B. Barry. $1.50.

This is the initial volume of a new Pepper series, distinct and separate from the original series of the famous Five Little Peppers, and yet connected with it in character, interest, and affection. The book is unique in plan and delightful in execution. It is destined to be one of the most popular juveniles of the year, and will strengthen the hold which Margaret Sidney now has upon the affection of hundreds of thousands of American children.

A MODERN SACRIFICE.

The Story of Kissie Gordon's Experiment. By "PANSY" (Mrs. G. R. ALDEN). One vol., 12mo, illustrated, 75 cents.

A new "Pansy book" is always welcome, and this story of gentle Kissie Gordon, and how she made her life of help and value to others, will prove an incentive to right thinking and right living, which all young people may study with profit, as they will certainly read it with interest.

THE DESPATCH BOAT OF THE WHISTLE.

A Story of Santiago. By WILLIAM O. STODDARD, author of "Guert Ten Eyck," "Gid Granger," "Little Smoke," "Chuck Purdy," etc. One vol., 12mo. Illustrated by F. T. Merrill. $1.25.

No story based on the incidents of our war with Spain will more appeal to the present generation of boys and girls than this new book by that veteran story-teller, William O. Stoddard. It is a sea story and a land story; it tells of the adventures of a breezy newspaper correspondent and of the sacrifices and revenges of a Cuban patriot. It is spirited, vigorous, and absorbing, and is, incidentally, a story of the war from the news of the destruction of the Maine to the fall of Santiago. And it is told by Mr. Stoddard! What more could any boy or girl desire?

Of special timeliness this Spring are the NEW EDITIONS IN NEW BINDINGS of the following three popular historical books for young people, BROUGHT UP TO DATE by the author:

THE AMERICAN SOLDIER.

By ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS. Cloth, 4to, illustrated, $1.50.

A stirring and graphic record of the American fighting man—the soldier who has secured peace through war—from the days of Bunker Hill to El Caney and Santiago.

THE AMERICAN SAILOR.

By ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS. Cloth, 4to, illustrated, $1.50.

The only complete and comprehensive story of the American blue-jacket, merchant-man, captain and admiral. A grand book for all lovers of American sea heroism from Paul Jones to Dewey.

THE TRUE STORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

By ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS. 4to, cloth, profusely illustrated, $1.50.

The true story of the beginnings, rise, and development of the republic of the United States from 1492 to 1900. Thousands of copies are already in use, and the book is accepted as the most popular "story" of the United States.

SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Daughters of Babylon.

A New Copyright Novel. By WILSON BARRETT and ROBERT HICHENS. With frontispiece. Uniform with "The Sign of the Cross," by WILSON BARRETT. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"The Daughters of Babylon," by Wilson Barrett and Robert Hichens, is based upon Mr. Barrett's play of the same name. The combination of the author of "The Sign of the Cross," with the author of "The Green Carnation," "An Imaginative Man," and "Flames," has resulted in a powerful and imaginative story.

A Triple Entanglement.

By Mrs. BURTON HARRISON, author of "A Bachelor Maid," "Sweet Bells Out of Tune," "Good Americans," etc. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

In "A Triple Entanglement," Mrs. Burton Harrison has sketched a charming love story with the sweetest of heroines and a very manly, yet lovable hero. It is a story of well-sustained interest, written in Mrs. Harrison's best style.

A Trooper Galahad.

By Capt. CHARLES KING, U.S.A. With frontispiece. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"Captain Charles King is always entertaining, and his 'A Trooper Galahad' will be read with no small degree of interest. It is a story of the Southwest, and there are excellent character sketches and pictures of life at a frontier post. A prolonged pursuit of a band of outlaws furnishes the warlike element of the tale."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mr., Miss and Mrs.

By CHARLES BLOOMINGDALE, Jr. ("Karl"). Tall 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

Clever society stories of men and women are these of Mr. Bloomingdale's, and many curious phases of life are depicted in these tales so full of interest. To no one is the inside life of the city so well known as to the journalist, and the present writer has made remarkable use of his material.

The Wind-Jammers.

By T. JENKINS HAINS. 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

"T. Jenkins Hains is to be congratulated upon spinning a better, more natural, vigorous, and thrilling yarn than any other modern writer of this class of fiction excepting Russell.

The Taming of the Jungle.

By Dr. C. W. DOYLE. 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.00.

Mr. Kipling has still left untouched many phases of life in India, and one of the most interesting of these is the basis of a story of much power, "The Taming of the Jungle." Dr. Doyle was born at Landour, a little hill station in the Himalayas; he lived in India for a number of years, proceeding later to England, he studied medicine and graduated with honors. For several years he has practised in America and his literary work is rapidly obtaining recognition.

The Altar of Life.

By MAY BATEMAN. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

In Lippincott's Series of Select Novels for January, 1899.

Infatuation.

SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT

OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Our Island Empire.

A Handbook of Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines. By CHARLES MORRIS, author of "The Nation's Navy," "The War with Spain," "Historical Tables," etc. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, 400 pages, $1.25.

This book is a mine of information concerning these new possessions or wards of the United States, dealing with all subjects of interest, so that by its aid one can acquaint himself with the characteristics, productions, and trade possibilities of all these islands. The work in question is practically four books in one, dealing with four separate countries, and handling a series of subjects and condensing a mass of information not to be found in any other single work, if in any four works now to be had. In short all topics of importance concerning the islands will be dwelt upon. Each of them will be treated with the same breadth of handling, so as to present, in a reasonably brief space, just the information that interested persons are likely to wish to obtain.

Elizabeth, Empress of Austria.

A Memoir. By A. DE BURGH. With eighty illustrations. 8vo, cloth, $2.50.

"In A. De Burgh's memoir of 'Elizabeth, Empress of Austria,' we have a book which is sure to attract attention and have many readers. A very acceptable feature of the work is the large number of illustrative pictures it contains—pictures both of persons and of places; besides being numerous they are well chosen."—London Globe.

English Cathedrals.

By FRANCIS BOND. Illustrated. In Press.

With Peary Near the Pole.

By EIVIND ASTRUP. With illustrations from photographs and sketches by the author. Translated from the Norwegian by H. J. Bull. Crown 8vo, cloth, $3.50.

"We feel justified in recommending this little volume as the best and most interesting account of its subject that has yet been printed."—New York Evening Post.

Russian Hosts and English Guests in Central Asia.

By J. T. WOOLRYCH PEROWNE. With sixty illustrations and a map. 8vo cloth, $2.00.

From the time of the intrepid explorer, Vambéry, who in 1863 visited Khiva, Bokhara, and Samarcand disguised as a dervish until the fall of Merv, in 1881, travellers have visited these regions carrying their lives in their hands. This book is probably the last of the series that has dealt with Central Asia as a sort of terra incognita.

Letters of Walter Savage Landor, Private and Public.

Edited by STEPHEN WHEELER. With portraits. 8vo, gilt top, $3.00.

The Amazing Lady.

By M. BOWLES. In Lippincott's Series of Select Novels for March, 1899. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

HERBERT S. STONE & COMPANY, ELDRIDGE COURT, CHICAGO.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE SOWERS."

With Twenty-Eight

DROSS.

12mo, Cloth, About 400

Pages. Price, $1.75.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN,

Author of "With Edge Tools," "In Kedar's Tents," "Roden's Corner," Etc.

Mr. Merriman's success has been steadily growing since the publication of "The Sowers." This new novel has not been published serially in this country, and will, therefore, come to the public with absolute freshness. Except for "Dross"—the proofs of which he has just finished reading—there will be no other book by Mr. Merriman this year.

"After-Supper Songs." By ELIZABETH COOLIDGE. With twenty-four medallions in colors. Quarto, cloth, $2.00.

This volume of songs for children was issued the week before Christmas, and was not, therefore, sold at any except the Chicago bookstores. The entire first edition was sold during the week. No better evidence could be given of the selling qualities of the work.

"The History of Gambling in England."

By JOHN ASHTON. 8vo, cloth, $2.50.

Mr. Ashton has made an extremely interesting volume on this subject. He describes the origin of gambling in England; the different games of chance and how they are played; and tells hundreds of amusing anecdotes about celebrated gamblers.

"The Cougar-Tamer and Other Stories of Adventure." By FRANK WELLES CALKINS. 12mo, cloth, with seven full-page illustrations, $1.50.

The book is made up of fifteen stories of adventure in the West. They originally appeared in the Youth's Companion, where they were featured as one of the best series of stories of adventure that the publication had ever printed.

The illustrations by Jay Hanbridge, Emerson, and others are admirable.

"The Perfect Wagnerite." By G. BERNARD SHAW, author of "Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant." 12mo, $1.25.

The author's preface explains the work. "This is a commentary on 'The Ring of the Nibelungs.' I offer it to those enthusiastic admirers of Wagner who are unable to follow his ideas; although they are unable to follow his ideas, and do not understand in the least the dilemma of Wotan, though they are filled with indignation at the irreverence of the Philistines, who frankly aver that they find the remarks of the god too often tedious and nonsensical."

"A Short History of the United States." By JUSTIN HUNTLY MCCARTHY. With a complete index. 12mo, $1.50.

A history of the United States from the standpoint of an Englishman will prove interesting at this time, when there is so much talk of an Anglo-American alliance. The author has not attempted to defend England in her relations with this country, but tells in an impartial manner the plain story of America's development.

"Love's Dilemmas." By ROBERT HERRICK. Six short stories, only one of which has been printed before. 16mo, cloth, with a cover designed by Will Bradley, $1.25.

The stories are all significant. They mean something, they have a perceptible relation to life. Mr. Herrick is so thoughtful a student of character that his strokes count. You may dislike his ideas, you may even quarrel with it; but it makes you think. Behind it you feel a certain insight into motives and emotions, into the problem of the transmutation of character into action. It is not an infallible insight, but it is keen. And its edge is almost as sharp in dealing with these light themes as with the profound difficulties of "The Gospel of Freedom."

"Ickery Ann, and Other Girls and Boys."

By ELIA W. PEATTIE, author of "A Mountain Woman," "The Shape of Fear," etc. 12mo, cloth, with a cover design by Frank Hazenplug, $1.25.

Mrs. Peattie has collected a number of her stories for children from the Youth's Companion, St. Nicholas, etc., and they are now issued in attractive book form. The author's reputation is steadily and speedily growing, and these stories will be found not only worthy of her name, but notable as forming her first volume for children.

"D'Arcy of the Guards," or the "Fortunes of War." By LOUIS EVAN SHIPMAN, author of "Urban Dialogues." 16mo, cloth, $1.25.

A rollicking, cheerful story, with an Irish hero and an American heroine. The action takes place on the highway near London, in London, and in Philadelphia in colonial times. Mr. Shipman has written with evident enjoyment, and has given to his style much of gaiety and wit. In its climax, however, it rises to a real, dramatic situation, at which the reader cannot fail to feel a thrill of excitement. It is a quick-reading book, and one which will be difficult to lay aside without finishing.

"The Wolf's Long Howl." By STANLEY WATERLOO, author of "The Story of Ab," etc. 12mo, cloth, uniform with "A Man and a Woman," $1.50.

The great success of the "Story of Ab" has encouraged the publishers to put into book form some of the best of Mr. Waterloo's short stories. Several of them have appeared in English and American periodicals, but the majority are now printed for the first time.

"A Fair Brigand." By GEORGE HORTON, author of "Aphroessa," "Constantine," etc., late U. S. consul at Athens. 16mo, cloth, with many illustrations, $1.25.

Mr. Horton has written an amusing, and at times exciting, tale of adventure among the brigands who inhabit the country around Mt. Olympus, and he has incidentally given what is probably the only truthful picture that has been written of life in modern Greece. Takis, the celebrated Greek brigand, who was tried in Athens just before the Greek-Turkish war, on the charge of cutting off the ears of his captives, is one of the leading characters in the book. In the closing scenes in Athens, many well-known persons are introduced under a thin disguise of romance.

"Robert, Earl Nugent." By CLAUD NUGENT. With many reproductions in photogravure and half-tone from family portraits by Sir Godfrey Kneller, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, and others. 8vo, cloth, $3.50.

"Successful Houses." By OLIVER COLEMAN. 8vo, cloth, finely illustrated, $1.50.

Every room in the house is taken up in the book and methods of treatment suggested. Mr. Coleman's articles have been widely read in The House Beautiful, and it is safe to say that no book on Interior Decoration has ever been published which is so practical and so completely governed by the requirements of good taste. Many half-tone illustrations of interiors accompany the text.

"Lucifer: A Theological Tragedy." By GEORGE SANTAYANA. 16mo, cloth, $1.25.

Mr. Santayana's volume of "Sonnets and Other Poems," published in 1894, was so successful that Messrs. Herbert S. Stone & Co. have pleasure in announcing this new poem by the same author. The "Prelude" to it was included in the previous volume; it is now reprinted, together with the entire play, and should appeal largely to thoughtful readers.

"The Vengeance of the Female." By MARRION WILCOX, author of "A Short History of the War with Spain," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Mr. Wilcox has written a book for persons of leisure. It is a rambling account of experiences and characters he has had to do with in several parts of the globe. He does not seek to explain or to instruct or even to suggest insistently. His observations of the life he has shared in Spain and Italy were written down because they seemed essential, it is true; but entertainment is essential now and then.

HERBERT S. STONE & COMPANY, ELDRIDGE COURT, CHICAGO.

"The Carcellini Emerald." With Other Tales by Mrs. BURTON HARRISON. 12mo, cloth, illustrated, $1.50.

Mrs. Harrison has gathered six of her best stories into a volume which is illustrated by some of our foremost artists. The book is likely to be widely popular.

"Can We Disarm?" By JOSEPH MCCABE, in collaboration with Georges Darien, author of "Biribi." 12mo, $1.25.

A very timely book on a subject of universal interest. The authors have brought together and arranged the arguments on both sides of the question, and have offered a plan that might be generally satisfactory to the powers. The arguments are carefully substantiated from the latest statistics.

"Sand 'n' Bushes." By MARIA LOUISE POOL. 12mo, cloth, uniform with "A Golden Sorrow," $1.50.

Messrs. Herbert S. Stone & Co. have been so fortunate as to secure another novel by Miss Pool, and to all the readers of "In Buncombe County" and "In a Dyke Shanty" the announcement will be of especial interest. The new book is characterized by all the humor and keenness of description that have made Miss Pool's previous work famous.

"The Spanish-American War." By eye witnesses. 8vo, cloth, fully illustrated, $1.50.

This volume represents a unique method of giving the history of the present war with Spain. Arrangements were made with correspondents at the front to furnish stories of the battles from the point of view of the non-combatant. Valuable photographs and drawings of the different battles in progress have been secured and reproduced in this volume. So far as is known, this is the only occasion upon which the history of a war has been recorded in this fashion.

"Etiquette for Americans." 16mo, cloth, second impression, $1.25.

It is probable that no woman thoroughly qualified to write upon this subject would be willing to sign her name to this book. It is written by a person who is regarded all over the country as an authority upon this subject. Matters of good form are so constantly changing that there is at present a great need for such a book.

"The Awakening." By KATE CHOPIN, author of "A Night in Acadie," "Bayou Folks," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Mrs. Chopin has written a very remarkable novel, which is likely to occasion considerable sensation. It is essentially a story for women; it tells the intimate life—the mental, emotional, and moral development—of one woman in such a way that its appeal is very large. The style is curiously analytical and feminine, and yet of such force as to make the final scene very effective.

THE VICTORIAN ERA SERIES.

The series is designed to form a record of the great movements and developments of the age, in politics, economics, religion, industry, literature, science and art, and of the life work of its typical and influential men.

The individual volumes are contributed by leading specialists in the various branches of knowledge which fall to be treated in the series.

The volumes issued to date have been accepted on all hands as authoritative on the subjects with which they deal. They are handsomely bound in cloth, with good paper and large type, suitable for the library. Price, $1.25 per volume.

The Rise of Democracy. By J. HOLLAND ROSE, M.A., late scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge (Editor of the series).

The Anglican Revival. By J. H. OVERTON, D.D., Rector of Epworth and Canon of Lincoln.

John Bright. By C. A. VINCE, M.A., late Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge.

Charles Kingsley. By the Very Rev. C. W. STUBBS, D.D., Dean of Ely.

The Free Trade Movement and Its Results. By G. ARMITAGE-SMITH, M.A., Principal of the Birbeck Institution, and for many years Lecturer on Economics for the London Society for the Extension of University Teaching.

The Growth of London, 1887-1897. By G. LAURENCE GOMME.

Recent Advances in Astronomy. By A. H. FISON, D.Sc. (Lond.).

The Science of Life. By J. ARTHUR THOMSON, M.A. (Edin.).

"Stories from the Old Testament for Children." By HARRIET S. B. BRALE. 12mo, $1.50.

Although many books have already been written upon this subject, the present volume will be read because it contains merely the story of the Old Testament without the "preaching" which is inevitably to be found in such books. The author has told the story simply and leaves the moral to be deduced by the reader.

"Some Verses." By HELEN HAY. 16mo, cloth, second impression, $1.00.

For three or four years Miss Hay's poems have been appearing in the various magazines and have attracted the attention from critical persons which their real cleverness deserves. They are now collected under an unpretentious title and offered to the public simultaneously with their author's return to America.

Blue Cloth Books.

A Series of 16mo books, bound in blue cloth with a design in white ink and lining papers from drawings by Mr. Frank H. Hazenplug.

The books are especially intended for summer reading.

"The Maid He Married." By HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, author of "Priscilla's Love Story," etc. 16mo, 75 cents.

A simple, pretty story of the kind that made Mrs. Spofford famous. It is in no sense radical, but is certain to prove interesting reading to a large public.

"A June Romance." By NORMAN GALE. 16mo, 75 cents.

For three years Mr. Gale's charming little story has been out of print; it has now been set up especially for this edition. It has the advantage, from the publisher's point of view, of selling three copies to every reader, so acceptable is it found as a gift-book.

"A Little Legacy, and Other Stories." By Mrs. L. B. WALFORD. 16mo, cloth, 75 cents.

Mrs. Walford has gathered together several of her best short stories in a little volume in the series of "Blue Cloth Books." Her popularity is well known, and, brought out in this attractive form, the volume should meet with no little success.

"A Heaven-Kissing Hill." By JULIA MAGRUDER, author of "Miss Ayr of Virginia," "A Realized Ideal," etc. 16mo, cloth, with a frontispiece by Blanche Ostertag, 75 cents.

Miss Magruder needs no introduction to the public. Her previous books have been so well received that the publishers are happy in offering a new one. This story first appeared in the Ladies' Home Journal, where it attracted a great deal of attention. It has to do with the love of a prominent beauty in New York society.

"Oliver Iverson, His Adventures During Four Days and Nights in the City of New York in April of the Year 1890." By ANN DEVOORE. 16mo, cloth, with a frontispiece by Cecil Clark, 75 cents.

Miss Devoore is a new writer, and one destined to become well known. This novellette is written with great charm of style and no little force; it constantly reminds one of Stevenson's "New Arabian Nights," and yet is wholly original and ingenious.

Spring Announcements.

Between Caesar and Jesus

By GEORGE D. HERRON, D.D. 16mo, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

[Just published.]

This volume contains a series of eight remarkable lectures delivered in Chicago before crowded and enthusiastic audiences. The work is designed to show the relation of the Christian conscience to the economic problem and the social system. The titles of the lectures will give some notion of the trend of his thought; they are as follows:

- "The Ethical Tragedy of the Economic Problem."
- "The Social Sacrifice of Conscience, Public Resources, and Spiritual Liberty."
- "Christian Doctrine and Private Prosperity."
- "The Conflict of Christ with Civilization."
- "The Conflict of Christ with Christianity."
- "Industrial Facts and Social Ideals."
- "The Victory of Failure."

Dr. Herron's best work has been put into these lectures, and they represent the culmination of his thought up to the present time. The book is destined to make a vast sensation.

Contemporary French Novelists.

By RENÉ DOUMIC. Translated by MAY D. FROST. 12mo, 402 pp., portraits, $2.00. [Ready March 18.]

The authors whom M. Doumic selected as representative not only of modern French fiction but also of his own best work in criticism are Octave Feuillet, the Goncourt brothers, Emile Zola, Daudet, Bourget, De Maupassant, Pierre Loti, Edouard Rod, J. H. Rosny, Paul Hervieu, J. K. Huysmans, René Bazin.

The keenness, justice, and delicacy of M. Doumic's analyses are beyond praise. His criticisms are stimulating and instructive. They show a perfect familiarity with the subject, and place the author in the first rank of essayists and critics.

Municipal Monopolies.

By EDWARD W. BEMIS, JOHN R. COMMONS, FRANK PARSONS, M. N. BAKER, F. A. C. PERRINE, MAX WEST. 12mo, cloth, appendix, index, $2.00. (Vol. XVI. Crowell's Library of Economics and Politics.)

[Ready March 18.]

Mr. M. N. Baker, of the Engineering News of New York City, writes upon Waterworks; Prof. Commons, of Syracuse University, and Prof. F. A. C. Perrine, of the Engineering Dept. of Leland Stanford University, discuss Electric Lighting; Max West, of the Agricultural Dept. at Washington, describes New York City Franchises; and other able writers discuss the Telephone, Gas, and Street Railway questions. Immense pains have been taken to secure full and unimpeachable statistics, and this volume will not fail to add to the ever-increasing demand for a wiser and better management of our public affairs.

How Count Tolstoy Lives and Works.

Translated from the Russian of P. SERGYEENKO by ISABEL F. HAPGOOD. 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 4 photogravure illustrations, $1.25.

[Ready March 18.]

The author pictures in a simple and vivid style the way in which Count Tolstoy and his family live. He repeats interesting conversations in which light is thrown upon the Count's theories. In a word, the book gives exactly what we wanted to know about the daily existence of one whom the author calls "one of the most remarkable men in the history of mankind."

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

FROM REEFER TO REAR ADMIRAL.

By BENJAMIN F. SANDS.

The recollections of a busy naval life from 1828 to 1883, told in a natural, unaffected style, not only interesting but instructive. The narrative includes incidents never before told in the lives of Farragut, Porter, Rodgers, Rowan, Ammen, Jenkins, and Worden; anecdotes of Generals Jackson, Grant, French, and others; reminiscences of Garibaldi and Dom Pedro I. of Brazil; also some account of the Revolutions in South America, the slave trade on the West Coast of Africa, the Mexican War, and the War of the Rebellion.

Admiral Sands's services in the latter ended with the raising of the Stars and Stripes over the last foothold of the Confederates at Galveston in April, 1865. The work also tells of the origin and growth of the U. S. Coast Survey and of the foundation and nucleus of the United States Naval Observatory.

12mo, deckle edges, gilt top, cloth, illustrated, . $2.00

BOOKS BY TOM HALL.

Tom Hall is one of the very few writers of light lyrical verse whose work has proved financially successful. The sales of his books, entitled "When Hearts Are Trumps" and "When Love Laughs," probably exceed those of any similar books of verse with the exception of George A. Baker's "Point Lace and Diamonds." Mr. Hall has turned his attention of late to fiction and to humor.

The same qualities that have made his verse so popular seem likely to make him successful with prose, especially as there is such a dearth of humorists at present.

Two new books by Mr. Hall will be brought out this spring as follows:

1. TALES BY TOM HALL.

Humorous, pathetic, and thrilling stories of burglars, newsboys, Indian-fighters, and other interesting people.

12mo, cloth, with a chie cover by F. Berkeley Smith, $1.25

2. WHEN LOVE IS LORD.

Sparkling "verse of society," witty, light, and gay. Uniform with "When Hearts Are Trumps."

16mo, with borders by Will Bradley. Daintily bound in blue or white cloth, stamped in gold after design by F. Berkeley Smith, $1.00

AT THE COURT OF CATHERINE THE GREAT.

By FRED. WHISHAW.

A Russian story, to be issued as a companion to the successful "The Son of the Czar."

The period of Russian history covered by Mr. Whishaw's book, while later than that of "The Son of the Czar," is no less fertile in exciting incident, and the weaknesses of the great Empress and the peculiarities of her wretched husband afford excellent opportunities for one that writes with discretion as well as ingenuity.

12mo, purple buckram stamped in white. Uniform with "The Son of the Czar," $1.25

THE STURGIS WAGER.

By EDGAR MORETTE.

A detective story of intense interest. The author is a New Yorker, and the hero and villain in his story are both New York club men. A crack New York newspaper reporter endeavors to unravel a mysterious crime. His antagonist is a man of great learning and ability, and the story of the intellectual struggle of these two men makes a plot as interesting as that of "The Leavenworth Case."

The binding of this book is a decided novelty, boards, with an attractive design on the cover, at the low price of 50 cents; cloth, $1.00

A GUIDE TO THE WILD FLOWERS.

By ALICE LOUNSBERRY.

Illustrated by MRS. ELLIS ROWAN.

64 beautiful full-page COLORED plates, showing 79 different plants, and 100 black-and-white plates, showing 103 plants, together with 54 diagrams. Better illustrated than any similar book.

Contains descriptions of nearly 500 plants—many more than any similar book.

It is complete in itself, employing no technical terms that it does not define, and requiring no other book to make it intelligible—not too large to be a handy companion in the woods, fields, and roads.

Arranged according to the kind of Soil in which plants grow—the most natural classification. Family, Color, Order, Range, and Time of Bloom are all given in each case. Indexes of Common Names, Scientific Names, and Colors aid in making identification easy.

Dr. Nathaniel L. Britton, Director of the New York Botanical Garden, Emeritus Professor of Botany, Columbia University, and author of "An Illustrated Flora," has made suggestions for the scientific part of the text and has written an introduction.

Size 5¼ x 7½ inches. Cover designed by Miss Amy Richards, Net, $2.50.

WAR IS KIND.

By STEPHEN CRANE.

Author of "The Black Riders," "The Red Badge of Courage," etc.

Mr. Crane's poems are of astonishing literary value, and this new volume will add materially to his reputation.

The book itself is a wonderful example of artistic printing and binding. Will Bradley, who had entire charge of its manufacture, wrote to the publishers:

"The book represents my best work up to now as a designer and printer. I have become greatly interested in it, and want to make it my masterpiece. . . . Stephen Crane's verse lends itself very readily to my drawings, and the combination permits something entirely out of the ordinary—as long as it remains thoroughly bookish. I am full of enthusiasm over this book and believe it will receive more criticism and praise than any book recently published."

8vo, boards, $2.50

THE STRONG ARM.

By ROBERT BARR.

A stirring book by the author of "A Woman Intervenes," "Tekla," etc.

The story is laid in Germany and is full of action. The interest is never allowed to flag for a moment.

12mo, cloth, $1.25

HILDA.

By SARA JEANETTE DUNCAN (MRS. EVERARD COTES).

Author of "A Daughter of To-Day," "A Social Departure," etc.

A story of Calcutta, in which an actress and a Salvation Army girl are the leading characters. Interesting and brilliant pictures of social life in India by one who has been most successful in this field adorn a romance of a remarkable sort with a striking dénouement.

12mo, cloth, with ornate cover design by F. Berkeley Smith, $1.25

IN A STEAMER CHAIR.

By ROBERT BARR.

Author of "Tekla," "The Mutable Many," "In the Midst of Alarms," "A Woman Intervenes," etc.

A new edition of this popular little book. Full of Mr. Barr's characteristic humor.

12mo, boards, 50 cents

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY, 27 and 29 West 23d Street, New York.

MR. JOHN LANE

HAS JUST PUBLISHED:

THE COLLECTED POEMS OF WILLIAM WATSON. Crown 8vo, 305 pp., designed cover, $2.50.

This volume includes the work contained in the author's several volumes, "Poems," "Odes and Other Poems," "The Father of the Forest and Other Poems," "The Year of Shame," "The Hope of the World and Other Poems," with the exception of a few poems excluded by the author.

The London Daily Chronicle says: "As we look through this collected edition of his work, we feel confirmed in our belief that whatever his limitations, and they are not few, it is Mr. Watson's function and his glory to hand on, in this generation, the great classical tradition of English poetry. On the threshold of the twentieth century he reconciles and brings to a common denominator, as it were, the best qualities of eighteenth-century and of nineteenth-century verse. He is the heir no less of Dryden than of Tennyson; it is hard to say whether Keats or Pope has more potently influenced him. There is significance in the fact that his favorite instrument, which he fingers with the utmost mastery, is the classic instrument of the English Muse—the iambic pentameter. Pregnant, resonant, memorable lines flow inexhaustibly from his pen; and some of them, we venture to predict, will live with the language."

THE SILENCE OF LOVE. By Edmond Holmes. Small 4to, $1.50.

A volume of sonnets.

THE RUBÁIYÁT OF OMAR KHAYYÁM. A paraphrase from several literal translations. By Richard Le Gallienne. New edition. With a cover design by WILL BRADLEY. $1.25.

A DAUGHTER OF THE VINE. By Gertrude Atherton. Crown 8vo, $1.50.
A new novel by Mrs. Atherton; a companion volume to "The Californians" and "American Wives and English Husbands."

THE ROMANCE OF A RITUALIST. By Vincent Brown, author of "My Brother" and "Ordeal by Compassion." Crown 8vo, $1.50.

THE SPIRIT OF PLACE AND OTHER ESSAYS. By Alice Meynell. Fcap. 8vo, $1.25.

Uniform with the same author's "The Rhythm of Life," "The Colour of Life," "The Children," and "Poems."

THE LAST BALLAD AND OTHER POEMS. By John Davidson. $1.50.

THE ALHAMBRA AND OTHER POEMS. By F. B. Money-Coutts. $1.25.
By the author of "The Revelation of St. Love the Divine."

YOUNG LIVES. By Richard Le Gallienne. $1.50.

Uniform with "The Romance of Zion Chapel," and "The Quest of the Golden Girl."

THE EARLY WORK OF AUBREY BEARDSLEY. Over 150 illustrations, 4to, decorative cover, $10.00, net.
Contains considerable hitherto unpublished work.

A SECOND BOOK OF FIFTY DRAWINGS. By Aubrey Beardsley. 4to, decorative cover, $2.50, net.
Contains considerable hitherto unpublished work.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF SELBORNE. By Gilbert White. Edited with an introduction by Grant Allen, illustrated by Edmund H. New. Uniform with "The Compleat Angler." To be issued in 12 monthly parts, at 50 cents each; and later on will be issued in a bound volume. (An illustrated prospectus will be sent upon application.)

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

THE NEW "GOLDEN AGE."

DREAM DAYS.

By KENNETH GRAHAME.

Third edition. Fcap. 8vo, $1.25.

The Evening Sun says: "In 'Dream Days' Mr. Kenneth Grahame continues the delightful adventures of the delightful children who were first introduced to us in the 'Golden Age.'"

BY THE AUTHOR OF THE "FOREST LOVERS."

PAN AND THE YOUNG SHEPHERD. By Maurice Hewlett. Crown 8vo, $1.25.

The Bookman says: "Like the 'Forest Lovers,' it is bathed in a woodland atmosphere and vitalized with the passion of love and youth. It has the throbbing note of life, the spirit of everlasting youth and the human impulse in it which find the universal heart."

The London Daily Chronicle says: "It is a strange piece of work thoroughly characteristic of the imaginative writer who gave us that delightful romance the 'Forest Lovers.'"

A HUNDRED FABLES OF ÆSOP. With one hundred pictures by P. J. BILLINGHURST and an introduction by KENNETH GRAHAME. Small 4to, $1.50.

Mr. Billinghurst is a new illustrator, specimens of whose work recently appeared in the International Studio, of which the Commercial Advertiser wrote: "P. J. Billinghurst is a new name among designers and illustrators, but is one that will doubtless become more familiar, for the reproductions shown after his designs for bookwork are marked by individuality."

READY SOON

Special Paper Edition of AN ARKANSAS PLANTER.

By OPIE READ.

An "Arkansas Planter" is a book teeming with incidents of a most romantic nature. It mirrors a phase of life but little known in the North, and embodies a description of employments and conditions as novel as interesting. In no former book has Mr. Read furnished as abundant proofs of his artist claim, and none is so consistent, so "convincing" as this.

"May be pronounced a decided success."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"An unusually strong piece of writing."—Denver News.

"Its humorous and pathetic aspects are everywhere visible, and many bits of quaint and homely philosophy are scattered through its chapters."—San Francisco Chronicle.

"Opie Read is to the Middle West what Bret Harte once was to the Pacific Coast."—Chicago Inter-Ocean and, as per previous notice, the price is now raised to $25.00 in half morocco binding. The type is distributed, and no more can be printed. Any library, bookseller, or collector who has not a copy should order before it is too late.

 A few copies still remain of the Subject Volume of the American Catalogue for 1876, which we will supply for $12.50 in paper and $15 in half morocco. This is of especial value in libraries and bookstores which cannot now buy the Author Volume, as, except novels, juveniles, etc., it gives the same books, rearranged by subjects. The price on this work will be raised shortly.

ANNOUNCE:

WILD LIFE AT HOME:

How to Study and Photograph It. By RICHARD KEARTON, F.V.S. With Rembrandt frontispiece and one hundred illustrations from photographs, taken direct from nature, by Cherry Kearnton. Extra crown 8vo, cloth gilt, $1.50.

In this new book Mr. Kearnton displays further signs of striking originality and ingenuity in the study and portrayal of wild birds, beasts, and insects. He and his brother have gone to great expense, labor, and pains in order to excel even themselves and still further illustrate what may be accomplished with the camera by skill and perseverance.

WITH NATURE AND A CAMERA:

Being the Adventures and Observations of a Field Naturalist and an Animal Photographer. By RICHARD KEARTON, F.Z.S. Illustrated by a special frontispiece and 180 pictures from photographs taken direct from nature by CHERRY KEARTON. Buckram gilt, $5.00.

"No such collection of pictures of British bird-life has ever been produced, and the text is worthy of the pictures."—Standard.

BRITISH BIRDS' NESTS:

How, Where, and When to Find and Identify Them. By RICHARD KEARTON, F.Z.S. With 130 illustrations of nests, eggs, young, etc., in their natural situations and surroundings, from photographs by CHERRY KEARTON. Buckram gilt, price $5.

"A book with a wealth of beauty and truth of illustration hitherto altogether unrivalled."—Sketch.

SIGHTS AND SCENES OF SCOTLAND

The work consists of about 460 pages, with 225 full-page illustrations from photographs taken specially for this work; each plate measures 9 x 6½ inches. A special feature of the work is that each illustration appears on a right-hand page, and that no matter is printed on the back. This has enabled the publishers to produce the work in such a manner as to secure the highest excellence of art reproduction. Handsomely bound, size 9½ x 12½ inches, price $7.50.

SIGHTS AND SCENES IN OXFORD CITY AND UNIVERSITY.

Described by THOMAS WHITTAKER, B.A., Exeter College, and illustrated with 100 plates after original photographs. With an introduction by GEORGE SAINTSBURY, M.A., Professor of English Literature in the University of Edinburgh. Handsomely bound, size 9½ x 12½ inches, price $4.00.

The publishers feel that by its unique character, combined with the diversity and interest of subject, genuineness of representation, and charm of execution, the work will win for itself a foremost place.

SIGHTS AND SCENES IN IRELAND:

This work consists of 200 pages and 100 full-page illustrations (9 x 6½ inches) from photographs specially taken for this work; with descriptive text to each view; beautifully printed on heavy paper; handsomely bound in cloth gilt, size 9½ x 12 inches, price $5.00.

NOW READY

WHEN SANTIAGO FELL; or, The War Adventures of Two Chums

Captain Bonehill has never penned a better tale than this stirring story of adventures in Cuba. Two boys, an American and his Cuban chum, leave New York to join their parents in the interior of Cuba. The war between Spain and the Cubans is on, and the boys are detained at Santiago de Cuba, but escape by crossing the bay at night. Many adventures between the lines follow, and a good pen picture of General Garcia is given. The American lad, with others, is captured and cast into a dungeon in Santiago; and then follows the never-to-be-forgotten campaign in Cuba under General Shafter. How the hero finally escapes makes reading no wide-awake boy will want to miss.

READY IN APRIL

A SAILOR BOY WITH DEWEY; or, Afloat in the Philippines

The story of Dewey's victory in Manila Bay will never grow old, but here we have it told in a new form—not as those in command witnessed the contest, but as it appeared to a real, live American youth who was in the navy at the time. Many adventures in Manila and in the interior follow, giving true-to-life scenes from this remote portion of the globe. A book that should be in every boy's library.

READY IN MAY

OFF FOR HAWAII; or, The Mystery of a Great Volcano

Here we have fact and romance cleverly interwoven. Several boys start on a tour of the Hawaiian Islands. They have heard that there is a treasure located in the vicinity of Kilauea, the largest active volcano in the world, and go in search of it. Their numerous adventures will be followed with much interest.

PAULINE WYMAN

By SOPHIE MAY. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.25.

In "Pauline Wyman" the interesting circumstances in a young girl's life are all told with the same originality and freshness which have drawn a multitude of young people to the author's previous work in the "Quinnbas-set Series."

SIX YOUNG HUNTERS

Or, The Adventures of the Greyhound Club. By W. GORDON PARKER. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.25.

The book is healthy in tone; the boys are manly, honest, and of good principles; and the scene is laid in a comparatively new and interesting country.

SONGS OF WAR AND PEACE

By SAM WALTER FOSS. Cloth, gilt top, boxed, $1.25.

Sam Walter Foss is fast gaining a place among the best poets of our time. Beyond question his verse contains more sweetness, inspiration, and patriotism than that of any other songmaker of the day.

JOHN HANCOCK, His Book

By ABRAHAM ENGLISH BROWN, author of "Beneath Old Rooftrees," "Beside Old Heathstones," etc. Cloth, gilt top, $2.00.

All students of the history of our country will welcome this view of the mercantile, social, and political life of the patriot presented by Mr. Brown from the letter book of John Hancock.

FROM ME TO YOU

A Volume of Verse. By LILIAN GERTRUDE SHUMAN. Cloth, gilt top, $1.00.

The fine quality of verse presented by this talented young writer is effectively aided by beauty of appearance and felicity of title in rendering this a peculiarly appropriate gift-book.

ROUNDABOUT RAMBLES IN NORTHERN EUROPE

By CHARLES F. KING. 238 engravings. Cloth, $1.25.

A beautifully illustrated volume, giving an account of the journey of a family in search of pleasure and education in Great Britain, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Russia.

THE TWIN SISTERS OF MARTIGNY

A Story of Italian Life Forty Years Ago. By the Rev. J. F. BINGHAM, D.D. 14 landscape views and 19 vignettes. Gilt top, cut edges, $1.75.

There is a sweet witchery in the story, and the style itself is a delight to such as enjoy neat and simple English.

HAWAII'S STORY

GENERAL SHERMAN.

By General M. F. FORCE. A new volume in The Great Commanders Series. Edited by General James Grant Wilson. With portrait and maps. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

The author of this volume, a practiced writer and one of Sherman's division commanders, accompanied him in the Atlanta campaign and in the march to the sea. The book contains a finely engraved steel portrait of the picture that General Sherman preferred, eight well-executed maps of his most important battlefields, and a carefully prepared index. This clear, comprehensive, and compact biography of the illustrious soldier contains, among other features, the most accurate and complete account of the battle of Shiloh, in which Sherman played such an important part, that has appeared in print.

New and Revised Edition.

THE FAIRY-LAND OF SCIENCE.

By ARABELLA B. BUCKLEY, author of "A Short History of Natural Science," "Botanical Tables for Young Students," etc. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

The publishers of "The Fairy-Land of Science," with the assistance of the talented authoress, have considerably extended the original volume. Accounts of the latest scientific discoveries in the departments treated have been added, and such portions have been amplified as have grown in importance and interest since the first publication of the work more than twenty years ago. A careful revision has, as far as practicable, eliminated all errors, and also all words which, on account of their almost exclusive use in England, are not likely to be easily understood by children in the United States. American instead of English examples are given to illustrate statements of general scientific truths, and, in fact, the whole letterpress has been carefully and thoroughly edited in the endeavor to adapt it to the use and enjoyment of children. The work has also been largely re-illustrated.

THE STORY OF GEOGRAPHICAL DISCOVERY.

By JOSEPH JACOBS. A new volume in the Library of Useful Stories. With maps and illustrations. 16mo, cloth, 40 cents.

This fascinating epitome of discovery will prove a book of universal interest. With rare tact and knowledge the author pictures the salient phases of geographical discovery in ancient and modern times. The field which he covers is a vast one, but his treatment retains the interest of the theme. His book is a remarkable and accurate summary of the subject, which will be found of general value.

LETTERS TO A MOTHER.

By SUSAN E. BLOW, author of "Symbolic Education," "The Mottoes and Commentaries of Friedrich Froebel's Mother Play," "The Songs and Music of Friedrich Froebel's Mother Play," etc. The International Education Series. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

The object of the present book is to explain in language addressed to the general public the philosophy of Froebel. Its author finds it necessary for this purpose to take up the most important doctrines one after the other as they were developed in the Mutter und Kose Lieder, and show their equivalents in the different systems of thought that prevail. In some cases these systems are in harmony with Froebel, and in other cases there is profound disagreement. It is well for all students of the kindergarten to deepen their knowledge of his principles by seeing their ultimate consequences and understanding how they apply to practical questions in the instruction of the young.

RECENT VOLUMES IN

Appletons' Town and Country Library.

Each, 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

By Berwen Banks.

By ALLEN RAINE, author of "Mifanwy, a Welsh Singer," "Torn Sails," etc.

Allen Raine has revealed a new field to novel-readers in his sensitive and vivid sketches of village life in Wales. He has never made the mistake of subordinating human interest to environment, but his characters always live and move, and their individuality is felt throughout. The sympathetic quality of the author's work has been abundantly appreciated by the many readers who have felt the quaint humor and the pathos of his earlier books. "By Berwen Banks" will be found to represent a strengthening of the author's hold upon readers and a broadening of his powers.

The Procession of Life.

By HORACE ANNESLEY VACHELL.

This strong story of modern life in California offers a series of vivid pictures of varied social conditions, ranch life, land speculations, and other aspects of the subject which are presented with singular force and skill. The author has the art of telling an interesting story, and his keen powers of observation and ability in characterization will attract attention to his work.

THE STORY OF THE ROUGH RIDERS

BY EDWARD MARSHALL

Illustrated with many excellent Photo Engravings. Endorsed by Gen. Leonard Wood, Lt. A. Alger, Secretary of War, and President Wm. McKinley. Beautifully bound in cloth. Sold everywhere, or sent POSTPAID, FREE, on receipt of price, $1.50.

G. W. DILLINGHAM CO., Publishers, New York.

The most intensely interesting book of modern times. The author, correspondent of the New York Journal, was a participant with the "Rough Riders," and was severely wounded by a Mauser bullet while at the extreme front of the firing line at Las Guasimas. His book is thrillingly interesting. It is devoted entirely to

THE ROUGH RIDERS,

The best Regiment of Volunteer Soldiers ever organized.

The first to land in Cuba, who raised the first American flag, flown by the Army, on Spanish soil, and headed one of the most desperate charges in the history of warfare. Mr. Marshall's ability as a writer is widely known. His "Story of the Rough Riders" is the best work he has ever done. It is by no means a history, although the greatest pains have been taken to make it accurate. It is full of anecdote and episode and tells the story with a breezy freedom and dashing rapidity, which is like that of the regiment itself on the battle field. The personalities of many of its members, officers and privates, are vividly portrayed. It contains a complete Roster of the Regiment.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE OFFICE OF THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has just ready "The Annual Literary Index, 1898." This volume is now not only an index to periodical literature as contained in all the important American and English magazines and journals, to essays and book chapters, etc., the bibliographies published during the year, etc., but also indexes comprehensively the principal events of the year chronologically.

G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY will publish at once Edward Marshall's "The Story of the Rough Riders," of which 5000 copies have already been sold in advance. They also announce "Andree at the North Pole," by Leon Lewis; "Helena," by H. S. Irwin; "Waters That Pass Away," by N. B. Winston; and "Hollow Bracken," by Hanson Penn Diltz. A second edition of Harold Frederic's "The Return of The O'Mahony" is in press, the first edition being sold four days after issue.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish on the 25th inst. "The Life of Edwin M. Stanton," by George C. Gorham; "Papias and His Contemporaries, a study of religious thought in the second century," by Rev. Edward H. Hall; "The Conjure Woman," by Charles W. Chesnutt, which will be issued in a plain and a de luxe edition; "A Satchel Guide for the Vacation Tourist in Europe," edition for 1899, by W. J. Rolfe; a popular edition of "Charlotte Cushman, her letters and memoirs of her life," by Emma Stebbins; and six additional numbers in the Riverside Paper Series.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just ready several contributions to their successful publications in series. "General Sherman," by Gen. M. F. Force, edited by James Grant Wilson, is added to the Great Commanders Series; Susan E. Blow's "Letters to a Mother" to the International Education Series; Joseph Jacobs' "The Story of Geographical Discovery" to the Library of Useful Stories; and the new-comers in the Town and Country Library are "By Berwen Banks," by Allen Raine, and "The Procession of Life," by Horace Annesley Vachell. A new and revised edition of Arabella B. Buckley's "The Fairy Land of Science" is also just issued.

THE OPEN COURT PUBLISHING COMPANY have in press "The Psychology of Reasoning," by Alfred Binet, translated by Adam Gowans Whyte; "The Gospel According to Darwin," a book by Dr. Woods Hutchinson, which has been pronounced daring; and a second edition of "The Ethical Problem," by Paul Carus. Three important mathematical works have just been issued: "The Study and Difficulties of Mathematics," by Augustus De Morgan; "Lectures on Elementary Mathematics," by Joseph Louis Lagrange; and "Mathematical Essays and Recreation," by Hermann Schubert. Dr. Ferdinand Hueppe's "Principles of Bacteriology" and Major J. W. Powell's "Truth and Error" are meeting with well-deserved appreciation.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just ready two works on modern music by two well-known musical critics: "The Orchestra and Orchestral Music," by W. J. Henderson, the first volume of The Music Lovers' Library, puts before the reader a description of each instrument in the orchestra, with an illustration which will enable him to identify its tone when next heard in the passage quoted, and gives historical information about orchestras, written within the comprehension of amateurs; and "Mezzotints in Modern Music," by James Huneker, contains dissertations on Brahms, Chopin, Liszt, Wagner, Strauss, and Tschalkowsky. Other books just issued are "The Fourteenth Century," by F. J. Snell, the latest volume in Periods of European Literature, edited by Saintsbury; "The Epistle to the Hebrews," an exegetical study, by Alexander Balmain Bruce; and "Samuel," by Henry Preserved Smith, in The International Critical Commentary; Max Müller's "Life of Rāmākrishna," a mysterious Indian ascetic, who lived from 1833 to 1886; and three of George Cable's short stories ("The Solitary," "The Taxidermist," and "The Entomologist,") which are published under the title "Strong Hearts."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted: if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

* In this list, the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rule of the American Library Association) from books received. Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk, and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record.

- Swinburne. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 377 p. por. 12°, cl., $1.40. [671]
- Bruce, Alex. Balmain, D.D. The Epistle to the Hebrews; the first apology for Christianity: an exegetical study. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 12+451 p. O. cl., $2.50. [672]
- The author has worked on this book for nearly thirty years, and much of it has already appeared in the pages of The Expositor. He believes the Epistle was written about 70 A.D., and was addressed to the Jews to preach to them the religion of free, unrestricted access to God without the intervention of an earthly priesthood. The best authorities are quoted and approved of or differed from in a quiet spirit of investigation, and the author's reasoning is clear and within the comprehension of the general reader. He is professor of New Testament exegesis in the Free Church College, Glasgow.
- Budd, H: St. Mary's Hall lectures, and other papers. Phil., H: T. Coates & Co., 1898. c. 8-287 p. D. cl., $1.50. [673]

- Claretie, [Arsène Arnaud called Jules.] Vi-comte De Puyjoli: a romance of the French revolution; Englished by Emma M. Phelps. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., 1899. 3-288 p. D. cl., 75 c. [688]
- The story traces some of the well-known horrors of the days of 1793-98 to private interests and personal intrigues of both aristocrats and plebeians. A prompter and actor of the Comédie Française played important parts that made for peace and clemency. The love-story is essentially French. The hero suffers all through life from his phenomenal personal beauty.

- Henderson, W. Ja. The orchestra and orchestral music. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1899. c. 8+238 p. por. D. (The music lovers' lib.) cl., net, $1.25. [706]
- The five parts describe how the orchestra is constituted, how it is used and directed, how it grew, and how orchestral music grew. The book is for music lovers, giving such facts about the modern orchestra as will help them in assuming an intelligent attitude towards the contemporaneous instrumental body and its performances.
- Herron, G. D. Between Cæsar and Jesus. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1899.] c. 2-278 p. D. cl., 75 c.; pap., 40 c. [707]
- Eight lectures are comprised under the above title.
- They are designed to show the relation of the Christian conscience to the economic problem and the social system. Dr. Herron is intensely earnest in his arraignment of modern civilization and conventional Christianity. His own creed is short, and may be almost summed up in the word "Love." He attacks trusts and monopolies, taxes and private ownership of land, and shows how helpless a single person is to resist the evil of railway tyranny, but believes the national conscience is awakening.

- In his travels through Tuscany, the home of Boccaccio, Dante, Botticelli, Della Robbia, and the Medici, the poetic, romantic soul of the author struggled to find an outlet for his emotions. He has tried to make pictures of pictures, images of images, poems of poems, to bring home to others the great thoughts which produced the treasures of Florence. He says: "You may call it criticism, you may call it art, I call it religion. It is making the best thing I can out of the best things I feel." The author of "Forest lovers" combines accurate learning of many kinds with his rare gifts of insight and imagination.

This is the initial volume of a system of philosophy based upon natural science. "The general purpose of the entire work," says the author, "is to rationally connect the scientific knowledge of the ancient spiritual schools with the proved facts of the modern school of physical science. It is to give to modern science a motive for its knowledge and to religion a reason for its faith. It is to equip every honest and earnest student with a scientific and exact knowledge of spiritual laws, principles, forces, and activities, and enable him to personally demonstrate his knowledge to others. The specific object of this volume is to present, elucidate, and illustrate the universal spiritual principle of sex in nature. The individual relation of man and woman occupies the body of the work, covering that relation in its mathematical, harmonic, and ethical development in two worlds of matter, life, and intelligence.

Johnson, Franklin. The home missionaries. Chic., privately printed by the author, Franklin Johnson, of University of Chic., 1899. 20 p. S. pap., 80 c. [721]

The author, in verse, pictures the region west of the Missouri River, where his father and mother lived and labored as home missionaries, as it was fifty years ago. They went there in 1845, appointed by the American Baptist Home Mission Society.

Jokai, Maurus. A Hungarian nabob; tr. by R. Nisbet Bain. N. Y., Doubleday & McClure Co., 1899. c. 358 p. D. cl., $1.25. [722]

This story of the wild life of the Magyar nobles in the first quarter of the century has been regarded as a national classic by the Hungarians for nearly fifty years. The plot deals with a feud between a warm-hearted but dissolute uncle, the "nabob" of the story, and an equally dissolute and wholly vicious nephew, whose hopes the uncle has frustrated by unexpectedly recovering from a stroke of apoplexy. Out of spite the old man marries and shortly dies, leaving a son to keep the estate from going to the hated nephew. Like all Jokai's books this gives a realistic picture of Hungarian life among many classes of the people.

Kelter, Mrs. Therese Kellner, ["Marie Herbert," pseud.] Poems of Therese; from the German by Ellen Frothingham; with a sketch of the poet by Anna Fuller. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 6+97 p. por. S. cl., 75 c. [723]

When Miss Frothingham, who is known by her fine translation of "Nathan the wise," first discovered the author of these poems she was living a secluded life with her parents in the little town of Hesse in the Black Forest. Her father was a councillor in the court of chancery and spent most of his time among the roses in a romantic garden. Seven years later Therese Kellner had become known as a novelist and poet under the pseudonym which she has made well known even beyond her native land. There is a tragic note in her poems that none of the known circumstances of her life would seem to account for.

- Martyrdom of an empress [Elizabeth of Austria.] N. Y., Harper, [1899.] c. 4+287 p. por. O. cl., $2.50. [743]
- A biography of the late Empress of Austria, written by a lady of the Austrian court, who was the intimate friend and confidant of the murdered empress during her entire life. Her character is painted as one of the most attractive and beautiful in modern European history, one that was too fine and pure to seem rational to the corrupt men and women of the Austrian court. A good picture is given of the social life of the court, of the personality and domestic life of Franz-Joseph and his relations to Elizabeth. A full account is included of the suicide of the crown prince at Mayerling, of the causes which led up to it, and of its effects on the empress.

- The subject of this biography was an Indian ascetic, born in 1833, who died in 1886. He was supposed to possess powers of thought-reading, predicting future events, seeing things at a distance, healing disease by simply willing, and the power of changing a man's thought by simply touching his body. He believed that all religions are true, and in explaining this side of his nature the author describes the various religions of India and their expounders. He was looked upon as half God and half man, and his influence among his people was marvellous. He spent his life in teaching his followers the realities of life.

- Norris, Frank. McTeague: a story of San Francisco. N. Y., Doubleday & McClure Co., 1899. c. 8+442 p. O. cl., $1.50. [758]
- The curse of the modern greed of money is represented in this story of the lower middle-class life of a great city, which is told with the brutal realism of a Zola. The scene is San Francisco, with its strange conglomerate of inhabitants. A few gleams of humor are introduced in describing a German family, but the serious and tragic predominates. The author is a Harvard man of the class of '98, who has seen much of rough life in Africa as well as in the west. His former work, "Moran of the Lady Betty," was highly praised by W. D. Howells.

- The story of a little Japanese girl and boy who were betrothed when the former was only three years old and the latter ten. Orito, the boy, is sent to America when seventeen and graduates at Harvard. On the voyage back to Japan he meets an American girl who is going to Tokyo to marry Arthur Sinclair, to whom she had for several years been engaged. Orito and the American girl fall in love, and on arriving at Tokyo it is discovered that Sinclair is in love with Orito's betrothed. Out of these complications a story of Japanese life is evolved.

- Presents the political history of the United States from the battle of New Orleans to the succession of Tyler to the presidency, and points out the influence of the two men who, more than any others, shaped the events of this epoch—namely, Jackson and Clay. The work gives also a preliminary review of the preceding period, beginning with the war of 1812. The Jacksonian epoch was the formative period of our politics, and nowhere else can its history be found in a single work. It was then that parties assumed their modern forms. It was then that the old aristocratic ideals were departed from and a duty of the people set up. Henry Clay is the central figure of the canvas, and the work is really the story of his political career.

Schubert, Hermann. Mathematical essays and recreations; from the German, by T. J. McCormack. Chic., The Open Court Pub. Co., 1898. c. 4+149 p. O. cl., 75 c. [776]

According to the translator's note, these essays are by one of the most successful teachers and text-book writers of Germany. For the plan of the mathematical system sketched the reader is referred to Professor Schubert's "Arithmetik und algebra," recently published in the Götschen-Sammlung (Götschen-Leipzig). The subjects are: Notion and definition of number; Modulus in arithmetic; On the nature of mathematical knowledge; The magic square; The fourth dimension; The squaring of the circle.

Skinner, Henrietta Dana. Espiritu Santo: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 3+329 p. D. cl., $1.25. [779]

The author is the youngest daughter of Richard H. Dana, jr., author of "Two years before the mast," and grand-daughter of Richard Dana, poet and editor of the North American Review. "Espiritu Santo" is a novel with a musical background; the scene is laid in Paris, and nearly all the characters are intimately connected with the musical world. The chief interest centres in the love affairs of Adriano and Theodore Daretti, who are respectively the leading baritone and tenor of the Paris opera. A glimpse is given of the better side of Bohemian life in Paris.

The serious criticism of the text of the Books of Samuel was first undertaken in 1842. Since then the most learned expositors have devoted themselves to these books, which cover about 100 years of time and contain the only sources of information concerning the origin of the monarchy in Israel. The gist of all this study has been put within the grasp of beginners in the higher criticism by the professor of biblical history in Amherst College.

C. Scribner's Sons, 1899. 9+428 p. D. (Periods of European literature, no. 8.) cl., net, $1.50. [781]

The achievements in literature in the fourteenth century are considered under the headings: The end of court-poetry; Town-verse and folk-song; Rise of a new lyric; Dante; Dawn of the renaissance; The well of English; Time and space; Allegory, mysticism, and reform. Petrarch, Dante, and Boccaccio belonged to this period, the author presenting thoroughly sifted biographies of these great writers.

The story has its scene in Southern California about thirty years ago. It is a study of the people and the life there, and is rich in characters and incidents. The chief male characters are Jeff Barker, the hard-working owner of a ranch heavily mortgaged, out of which he gains a bare subsistence, and Guy Warrander, a rich young Englishman of noble birth, looking for investments. They both love the same woman, and out of this fact the larger part of the narrative springs.

A dreamy artist, the descendant of one of the old Dutch families of New Amsterdam, decided to forego marriage because consumption was hereditary in his family. At the age of thirty-one love made him weak for a season, but the girl refused, and he settled down as a designer of comic cartoons of political subjects.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MARCH 18, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament therunto."—LORD BACON.

THE LIBRARIANSHIP OF CONGRESS.

THE appointment of Herbert Putnam to be Librarian of Congress is one which, it is already evident, will give universal satisfaction throughout the country, and should be peculiarly gratifying to the publishing trade. The Librarian of Congress is ex-officio the head of the Copyright Office—the Register of Copyright being his staff officer with reference to that division of the work of the library. No person could more worthily fill that office than the son of George Palmer Putnam, whose efforts in behalf of copyright, and whose championship of everything that was good in the business of publishing books, cannot be forgotten. Those who look back upon the unselfish endeavors of the elder Putnam to make the business of publishing worthy of its opportunities must greatly delight in that happy confirmation of his aims and purposes which has been accomplished in the work of his sons and daughters. The publishing business founded by the elder Putnam has been continued and developed as he would have had it by his immediate successor George Haven Putnam and those of the brothers composing the firm of G. P. Putnam's Sons, while the younger son, Herbert Putnam, has successfully administered the Minneapolis Public Library and the Boston Public Library, and now takes the position which will make him officially as well as personally the head of the library profession in this country. George Haven Putnam has also made his mark as an author, particularly in his works dealing with the history of the publishing trade and with copyright questions, and while some of the daughters of George P. Putnam have been identified with useful public developments in New York and elsewhere, Miss Ruth Putnam has made her mark in the literary field proper as the editor or author of a number of creditable books. THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, as the representative of the trade, may be forgiven this "aside," in view of the honors thus reaped through his children by one of the most honored men in the history of the American publishing trade.

The Library of Congress under Mr. Putnam will doubtless become in fact and, at last, in name the National Library of America. Hitherto it has never taken its full rank; but in its new home, one of the most beautiful buildings in which any great national library is housed, it has opportunities of which the new head will undoubtedly make the best use. Mr. Young's appointment of Mr. Solberg as Register of Copyright has already resulted in vast improvements in the methods of that particular branch of the library's work, and Mr. Solberg will now have the support of a chief whose intentions will be of the highest order, and whose practical experience will enable him to realize his intentions in the best way. It is most gratifying to note that the press has received the appointment of Mr. Putnam with the most thorough appreciation, and the President in naming him for this post has done a great service to all in America who have to do with books.

BOOK PRODUCTION IN THE NETHERLANDS IN 1898.

ACCORDING to Brinkman's "Alphabetische Lijst van Boeken" there were published in the Netherlands, during 1898, 2984 works, or 104 more than were published in 1897. This increase, it should be stated, is due to the issue of 151 books, pamphlets, etc., commemorating the coronation of Queen Wilhelmine. If these were deducted the total would be less by 47 than that of books published in 1897.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE DINNER.

THE fourth annual dinner of the Booksellers' League, held on the evening of the 15th inst., at the room of the Aldine and Uptown Association, 111 Fifth Avenue, New York City, though unfortunately preceded by wretched weather, was well attended—upwards of one hundred members and their guests being present—and was altogether an enjoyable occasion. The room in which the dinner was given was cosy, the dinner was well served, and the speaking, most of it extemporaneous, was as happy as it was instructive.

As the hour hand reached nine, the president, W. H. Parker, called the assembly to order and addressed them briefly as follows: This is our fourth annual dinner. In these past four years we have come to know each other, and to take an interest in success or misfortune as it may overtake each of us. We have been working for the good of all. It has been said that "no man can raise himself without taking others with him." If this be true, all the benefits we have bestowed on our members and the trade in general react upon ourselves, and the object of our league has been carried out. Our annual report each year shows the accomplishment of some worthy object. In our last year several changes have taken place, and I believe have resulted in much good. During the last year we increased our annual dues from $3.00 to $5.00. This was done that we might provide a dinner at each meeting. It has proved a wise move and added to our membership as well as to the sociability of our meetings. Our average attendance has grown so that we will be obliged to look for larger and better accommodations. This increase is not due entirely to the fact that we provide something to eat at our meetings, but largely to the mental dinner which comes after it. The talks on books and subjects pertaining to the trade, interspersed with lighter entertainment, have done much to excite an interest and improve our members.

There is one feature of the Booksellers' League which alone more than repays in the good it accomplishes all the outlay each member makes, the helping of those who may be out of work to secure positions. During the last year 33 members have been aided in getting work. The outlook for the coming year is very bright, and we hope to have double our number at our fifth annual dinner. I think this is what the committee must have had in mind when they selected the quotation under my name on the menu: "Let's meet him and receive him. Lo where he comes."

ADVERTISING.

Francis W. Crowninshield, the manager of the advertising department of Dodd, Mead & Co., was the first speaker, and responded in a most entertaining manner to the toast "Advertising," to which was attached the following motto from Addison: "The great art of writing advertisements is the finding out the proper method to catch the reader's eye." Mr. Crowninshield considered the subject under the following heads: Posters, the craze for which he thought was dead, though the type-poster printed in two colors was still an effective way of catching "the reader's eye;" Circulars, he thought, were no longer used except in making propaganda for special books; Review copies are considered good advertising, though in his experience only about fifty per cent. of the copies sent out are adequately noticed by the press; Magazine advertising he considered the best and most important. Among other and more insidious advertising he mentioned the paying of an enormous sum to a prominent author for writing a book. Inasmuch as such a course provokes widespread comment and discussion it was to be assumed that a very larger part of the reading world was bound to become acquainted with the publisher and his production than through less expensive or sensational advertising. He estimated the cost of advertising to amount to from five to ten per cent. of the sales, and thought it would be safe to put the average at seven per cent. Advertising in the publishing trade is becoming a serious factor, when it is considered that from $5000 to $50,000 is being spent yearly by publishing houses according to their standing in the trade. As to the manner of advertising, he thought it wiser to concentrate than to spread. He considered sixteen mediums sufficient—four magazines, four dailies, four city papers, three religious dailies, and one trade paper. The motives for advertising he considered to be for direct results, for making a general impression, to sell books, to please authors and, with a show of enterprise, to impress favorably other authors upon whose future works they may have designs, to keep the trade happy, and to keep in the company of other publishers. As to "ad." writing he regretted to think that that must remain as it is—even if the standard was considered dull. Book advertising must be sober—those who tried acrobatic experiments in this direction had found to their chagrin that it didn't pay to be clever. Mr. Crowninshield spoke in a happy manner, and was frequently interrupted with generous applause.

THE LITERARY AGENT.

Paul R. Reynolds discussed the "Literary Agent in His Relations to the Publisher and Author." Mr. Reynolds, who was introduced in the words of Wotton, "I am but a gatherer and disposer of other men's stuff," maintained that the literary agent in bringing the author and publisher together performs a necessary function, and one that is just as important in producing the complete book as that of the printer or binder. He compared the work of the literary agent to that of the real estate agent who brings lessor and tenant together, and contended that it is to the advantage of the author to place his manuscript in the hands of a man who knows what publishers it would be most likely to suit, and who also knows the value of such a manuscript, how to approach and deal with the publisher, how to draw up a contract, and how to ascertain the business standing of any house in the trade. He cited several cases in which authors who had dealt directly with publishers had suffered because of the lack of the special knowledge which the agent is presumed to possess. Mr. Reynolds also spoke of the advantages that accrue to the publisher in dealing with the agent; among them, that of being able to decline an undesirable manuscript without giving offence to an author, because of his identity being concealed. He admitted, however, that many publishers did not regard the agent as a necessity.

LITERATURE AND THE LAW.

Gilbert Ray Hawes, senior member of the law firm of Hawes & Norman, of New York

City, who spoke on "Literature and the Law," made some strong comments on the need of the legal profession for a higher standard of education. He said that the lawyer who knows little of history or literature is likely to turn his profession into a sordid, money-making business, and praised the action of Columbia University in requiring a classical education as a preliminary to its law course. Continuing, his remarks were in part as follows:

Law and literature should go hand in hand. The lawyer who hopes to win his cases in court, to obtain verdicts from juries, or even to properly frame a brief or draft corporate papers, should have a wide acquaintance with literature. How can he hope to rise to flights of eloquence if he has not studied the masterpieces of Pericles and Demosthenes and the famous orations of Cicero? Where can he find better models of logical and sustained argument than in the speeches of Burke and Pitt and Fox and our own glorious Webster, "the Divine Dan"? If he would form a correct style and write pure English, let him peruse Addison, Steele, Shakespeare, Dryden, Cowper, Pope, Byron, and all that long list of distinguished English writers whom we claim as part of our common Anglo-Saxon heritage. If he would speak with authority on constitutional law, he should read with care the "Federalist," the Constitutional debates and the writings of such profound thinkers as Jefferson and Hamilton and Jay. In fact, the well-equipped lawyer must have a thorough knowledge of history and literature and that general culture which springs from a liberal education. And thus we must look to the book publishers and the booksellers for the proper tools of our profession.

Then, again, the lawyer is frequently asked to give an opinion which has some bearing on literature. He is called upon to interpret or construe a clause in the statute relating to copyright, or he may have to decide one of those nice questions which are constantly arising in the sale of subscription books, such as what constitutes a sale and when does title pass. A knowledge of literature may not be essential to enable a lawyer to properly defend the interests of his clients in the class of cases I have cited, and yet is it not natural to suppose that the author and publisher and bookseller would prefer to retain as counsel the literary man who has an appreciative knowledge of books, combined with legal attainments, rather than one who is only "learned in the law" but with his finer instincts undeveloped?

If, therefore, literature and the law can be brought into closer relations, each will be strengthened by mutual co-operation. But I would not have you understand for a moment that I think that literature should be put under the domination of the law. Literature, except that which is positively obscene, should be wholly untrammelled. We boast of a free press, and yet we have "in our midst"—if you will allow the expression—a man clothed with a "little brief authority" who presumes to act as public censor. St. Anthony of old was tempted by beauteous visions, from which he endeavored to flee away. But our modern St. Anthony is always yearning to be tempted and anxious to find some pretext for earning his salary. If he would confine his attention to the cheap and nasty libidinous publications which are exposed for sale, and endeavor to suppress those periodicals which are a disgrace to any community, all decent citizens would wish him God speed. But, instead, he seems to take special delight in persecuting the respectable members of the publishing trade, and in seeking to procure their arrest and the confiscation of their books. He has objected to the sale of such classics as Boccaccio, Balzac, and Rabelais.

He has sought to interdict the sale of the works of Rousseau, and even of the "good gray poet" Walt Whitman. Could ignorance or prejudice go further? And yet he is still unhappy. For the law has been successfully invoked for the protection of literature, and the courts have decided against the holy Anthony in almost every instance. So, gentlemen of the Booksellers' League, I say to you in the words uttered by the great Gustavus Adolphus, on the eve of the Battle of Lutzen, "Fear not, thou little band." The enemy who is continually going up and down seeking whom he may devour, can annoy, but he cannot defeat you with law on your side.

To many the law is too prosaic a subject to inspire poets or authors. But the two great monuments of our literature, the Bible and Shakespeare, contain many allusions to law and lawyers, some of them not of a very complimentary nature. "The Merchant of Venice" is a dramatized law case, with Portia as the successful pleader. Many lawyers have reached distinction in the literary world, such as the late Irving Browne, whose brilliant talents and graceful pen charmed and delighted all. Many lawyers have also attained such high rank in literature that they have been remembered only in that field of work.

Mr. Hawes concluded his address by relating a number of stories to prove that literature is also indebted to the law for many of its best anecdotes and wittiest sayings.

HOW BOOKS WERE SOLD IN EARLIER TIMES.

John H. Dingman, of Charles Scribner's Sons, who may well be regarded as the dean of the retail book trade, in speaking to the toast "How Books Were Sold in Earlier Times" emphasized the fact that the book trade was the most honorable profession in the world, and that its members were men of broad culture, generous views, and large enterprise. As witnesses to this statement he referred to the careers of the Appletons, the Putnams, the Scribners, the Wileys, Ticknor & Fields, Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Lee & Shepard, and others equally well known. In calling up the names of the founders of these houses the speaker paid to each a word of tribute or affectionate remembrance. Alluding to the manner of selling books, he recalled the fact that when his firm published Beecher's "Norwood" they considered that 750 copies would be a good showing in New York. On his way to Sheldon & Co.'s, then the leading jobbing house in New York, the thought struck Mr. Dingman that, considering the popularity and reputation of the author, the book was bound to create a sensation. On meeting Mr. Davies, the buyer of Sheldon & Co., Mr. Dingman proposed that he take five thousand copies of the book. The proposition was so staggering that the whole firm was convened to consider it. Mr. Dingman, when called upon to give his reason for making such an extraordinary proposition, explained that he had in his mind the trade of New York, and was confident that such a dealer would be able to dispose of a certain number, another of a specified quantity, and so on, until he had made a mental calculation that almost reached the total he had staked out. Upon mature deliberation Sheldon & Co. gave an order for three thousand copies, and before he returned to the store Mr. Dingman had sold in all nine thousand copies. When he made his report to A. C. Armstrong, who was then chief clerk at Scribner's, he was informed that the firm did not care to send out books "on sale." When it was made clear that the books had been sold out, the excitement almost upset the gravity of the establishment for that day. Mr. Dingman paid tribute to the growing intelligence of the members of the book trade, who year by year were obliged to do business under more trying conditions and by the aid of more complicated machinery than was necessary in the days gone by.

OLD BOOKS.

George H. Richmond, responding to the toast of "Old Books," disclaimed the assertion of the toast-master that he was a "book expert." He believed that no man could claim to be an all-around book expert and tell the truth at the same time. He knew of but one man who approached the ideal, and yet he, in publishing a bibliography that for many years has been justly regarded as an authority, made a mistake and a misstatement in each of the first two titles of that book. Mr. Richmond said that while he did not lay undue stress on his modesty, he was thankful that he had learned early in life not to be too sure nor to know too much. He explained that he was not born in the business; he did not become a bookseller until he failed as a lawyer. He then entered the employ of a bookseller in Baltimore, and almost on the first day he discovered that he had considerable to learn before he could fill the position to his own and his employer's satisfaction. Mr. Richmond naturally had much to say about collectors, on the buying of rare books, on the rise in values, etc., all of which he entertainingly elaborated with personal recollections and experiences. In concluding, he agreed with Mr. Dingman that the bookseller—especially the dealer in old books—was in advance of his predecessor, at least so far as a knowledge of the values of books was concerned. The day of picking up a bargain on the shelves of a dealer in second-hand books was a thing of the past, no matter where that bookseller had his home. Yet he did not think that was a misfortune, because the knowledge of the individual was bound to elevate the standard of the whole trade.

Incidental entertainment was furnished by Charles B. Hawley, the famous basso and composer, and Barclay Dunham, known to the book trade through his connection recently with the George H. Richmond Co., and also as a tenor of some reputation, and by the Manhattan Symphony Instrumental Quintet. The menu was attractively gotten up and illustrated with designs by H. T. Carpenter, the Eastern representative of Herbert S. Stone & Co. It was bound in green, we suspect, to propitiate the shades of St. Patrick, in whose festival week the dinner was given.

A PRINTERS' EXPOSITION.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION No. 6, to which belong all union printers in New York City, will be fifty years old next year, and it has determined to celebrate the golden anniversary in elaborate style. The celebration will be in the form of an exposition lasting five weeks, at which typesetting machines, presses, stereotyping, electrotyping, photo-engraving, manufacturing of printing inks, manufacturing of paper, and all machinery used in the production of printed matter will be exhibited. The profits from the fair are to be given to the union hospital fund.

A committee will wait on the managing editors of the daily newspapers in New York and ask their co-operation toward arranging to publish a daily morning paper at the exposition. The 380 sub-unions throughout the United States will lend a hand to make the celebration a success. The committee has already arranged to borrow the first Franklin press manufactured, which is now in the Boston Museum.

BRAYTON IVES'S SUIT LOST.

A JURY rendered a verdict in favor of the defendant on the 9th inst. in the action brought by Brayton Ives against Ellis & Elvey, of London, to recover $4374, being the price paid by him in March, 1891, for a book supposed to be a copy printed with movable types in the end of the fifteenth century of a letter written in Spanish by Christopher Columbus upon his return from his first voyage. The justice denied a motion for a new trial.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

COPYRIGHT IN THE NETHERLANDS.

THE Amsterdam German journal Die deutsche Wochenschrift in den Niederlanden reports that new members are continually joining the Berner Conventionsbund, recently founded by prominent publishers, authors, journalists, and others. On the other hand, the Internationale Literaturberichte (Leipzig) prints a despatch from Amsterdam announcing that the Amsterdam Bestelkantoor voor den Boekhandel is circulating a petition to the Dutch ministry against the adhesion of the Netherlands to the Berne Convention, which has received the signatures of some publishers, newspaper editors, and booksellers. The hope is expressed that the Ministry will resist this piece of bounce ("Anprall") and recognize the rights of authors acknowledged elsewhere throughout the civilized world, so that the unnatural theft of intellectual property in literature and art may finally cease.

GILMORE vs. THAYER.

AN alleged infringement of a copyright case that was started twelve years ago came up in the natural order of its still unsettled course before Judge Lowell in the United States Circuit Court in Boston on the 4th inst. The complaint was filed in 1887. In that it was set forth that the year before Miss Laura Edmonds, of Bolton, N. Y., had paid J. P. Gilmore, of the same place, $500 for all rights in a book he had written under the title "The Life of James A. Garfield." The work was copyrighted and published by Harper Bros. Then Miss Edmands and Mr. Gilmore were married. At about the same time J. H. Earle, of Boston, and W. M. Thayer, of Franklin, brought out a book called "From Log Cabin to White House." That book the Gilmores felt warranted in declaring a steal from their life of Garfield. Action was accordingly begun to suppress the log-cabin story and recover damages. The matter dragged along with the defendants' answers, demurrers, amended complaint and other legal technicalities until March, 1893, when C. H. Drew, of Brookline, Mass., was appointed master to hear evidence and pass upon its merits. His finding was for the complainant in the sum of $11,000. Then the defendant, Thayer, died, and his widow, Rebecca W., was made executrix of the estate. She was made a party to the suit, and an objection to the master's finding was taken. This was what Judge Lowell heard last week. He will give a decision later.

OBITUARY NOTES.

EMILE ERCKMANN, the literary partner of Alexander Chatrian, died at Luneville, France, on the 14th inst. Erckmann was born at Phalzburg in the Department of the Meurths, May 20, 1822, and was the son of a bookseller. He studied law but never practised. In 1847 he made the acquaintance of Chatrian, who was born at Soldatenthal, December 18, 1826, and was an usher in the college of Phalzburg. From that time the two friends composed numerous tales, all signed "Erckmann-Chatrian," and characterized by such unity of composition that no one doubted they were the production of a single individual. At first their writings attracted little attention, and in despair Erckmann retired to his law books and Chatrian took a position in the offices of the Eastern Railway Company. It was not until 1859 that the publication of "L'Illustre Docteur Matheus" gave a certain amount of popularity to the name of Erckmann-Chatrian. From that time their reputation as writers of romances steadily increased in consequence of a series of works containing faithful and graphic narratives of the manners and customs of Germany, and of the glories and military reverses of the revolution and the First Empire. Most of these works have been translated into English. M. Chatrian died on September 4, 1890. About a year before his death an unfortunate quarrel arose between M. Erckmann and M. Chatrian's secretary, M. Georget, resulting in a law suit, in which the secretary and M. Pigeonnat, manager of the "Figaro," were condemned to pay to M. Erckmann 10,000 francs damages. Among the best-known works published by the authors are "Histoire d'un Conscrit de 1813," (1864) translated into English under the title of "The Conscript; A Tale of the French War of 1813"; "L'Invasion—Waterloo," (1865), translated under the title of "Waterloo: A Story of the Hundred Days," and "Le Blocus," (1867), translated under the title of "The Blockade of Phalsbourg; An Episode of the Fall of the First French Empire." English versions of their three-act comedy, "L'Ami Fritz," and their melodrama "Le Juif Polonais," are familiar to American theatre-goers. Sir Henry Irving has familiarized playgoers in this country with this melodrama by his brilliant impersonation of the Polish Jew in "The Bells."

HEYMANN STEINTHAL, the German philologist, died in Berlin on the 13th inst. He was born at Gröbzig, May 16, 1825. A pupil of Humbolt, Steintal recalled the teachings of his master by several of his works, which include "Classification of the Languages from the Standpoint of the Intellectual Development of Language," "Origin of Language in Connection with the Recent Questions of Science," "The Development of Hand-Writing," "History of the Science of Language with the Greeks and Romans," "Language in General," and other works.

LUDWIG BAMBERGER, at one time one of the leaders in the German National Liberal party and the author of a number of works on history and political economy, died in Berlin on the 14th inst. He was born at Mayence, June 22, 1823. Among his published works are "The Honeymoon of the Liberty of the Press," "Results of the Uprising in the Palatinate," "Monsieur de Bismarck," "Natural History of the French War," "Workers and the Right of Reunion," "Germany and Socialism," and "Journalism and Judaism."

HENRY M. BURT, founder of the paper published on the top of Mount Washington, known as Among the Clouds, died in Springfield, Mass., on the 7th inst. Mr. Burt was born in Otisco, N. Y., September 13, 1831. Just before his death he published the second volume of his "First Century of the History of Springfield."

ROBERT A. JOHNSON, a well-known journalist, who, we believe, had the distinction of having written the first editorial of The Nation, died on the 8th inst., in the Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y. He was born on the island of Jamaica in September, 1825.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Universe and The Great Round World will hereafter be published by the Universe Publishing Company of New York as one publication under the title of The Great Round World. Mrs. Genie H. Rosenfeld and T. Commerford Martin will write for it.

The Kiote is the title of a fad or freak magazine, fantastically described as "a new venture by a new folk in a new field, being a literary monthly dedicated to the prairie yelper." Its managers are Schuyler W. Miller and Harry G. Shedd, and its printer the Ivy Press, of Lincoln, Nebraska.

THE new monthly journal devoted to literature, the fine arts, and the play, entitled In Lantern Land, lives up to the plan of its editors, Charles Dexter Allen and William Newnham Carleton, and discusses passing events in an unprejudiced and independent manner. Its book notices are timely and uninfluenced by commercial consideration. The keynote of the paper is a protest against the materialism of the hour. It is issued in Hartford, Connecticut, is well printed on excellent paper, and should appeal by exterior and intrinsic merit to a class of cultured, intelligent readers.

BUSINESS NOTES.

CHARLOTTE, KY.—J. R. Eddins, bookseller, has sold out.

DAYTON, O.—The Dayton Duplicating Book Co. has been succeeded by John A. Brake.

DENVER, COLO.—Pierce & Zahn, booksellers, have leased the large store at 633 Seventeenth Street, and will consolidate their two stores there. They expect to be in their new quarters early in April. They have sold their stationery and periodical departments to L. C. Lewis, who will continue them at the old branch at 1454 Arapahoe Street.

DENVER, COLO.—J. Westling has withdrawn from the firm of Kelly & Westling to take charge of the book department of the Warren-Walker Book and Stationery Co.

DETROIT, MICH.—J. V. Sheehan & Co., dealers in books, etc., have formed a new special partnership.

DOVER, N. H.—F. B. Lane, bookseller, is advertising to sell out.

DOVER, N. J.—J. B. Pellett has bought Miss L. H. Ives & Co.'s dry goods store, and will close out the present stock and substitute for it a general line of periodicals, newspapers, books, and stationery.

FORT WORTH, TEX.—Mrs. Jennie S. Scheuber, bookseller and stationer, is closing out her business.

LEAVENWORTH, KAN.—J. W. Shoemaker, of the Dodworth Book Co., is dead.

LINCOLN, NEB.—Herpolsheimer & Co., dealers in books, etc., dissolved partnership February 21, Otto A. Mohrenstecher re-irring. Henry Herpolsheimer collects all debts and assumes all liabilities.

NEW YORK CITY.—Joseph J. Little, receiver for the late Worthington Company, has just paid a second dividend of .0337 per cent., making in all 30 per cent. There still remains a fund directed by the court to be held awaiting the final decision of a claim against the receiver. In the event of a decision favorable to the receiver there will be sufficient moneys to pay a further dividend, perhaps a trifle larger than the second one. Should the decision be adverse, no further dividend may be expected.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

In our issue for February 18 we inadvertently gave the address of U. P. James as in Cleveland. We ought to have given it as Cincinnati, where the firm has always done business since it was established there sixty-eight years ago.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have published an interesting catalogue entitled "Descriptions of a few books from Charles Lamb's Library, and of some presentation copies and first editions of his rarer books, with collations and notes." The catalogue, which is replete with interest to the admirers of Lamb as well as to the collectors, is judiciously illustrated with facsimiles of autographs and title-pages. (22 p. sq. 8°, 25 c.)

In recording the title of the "Bibliography of Eighteenth Century Art and Illustrated Books," by J. Lewine, published last year by Sampson Low, Marston & Co., (see PUBLISHERS' WEEK-LY, January 21, 1899, pp. 54, 55.) The Library Association Record, the official organ of The Library Association of the United Kingdom, says: "Although Mr. Lewine has carefully avoided any acknowledgment of the fact, the present work is very little more than a translation of Cohen's 'Guide de l'amateur des livres à gravures du 18me siècle,' with which a few additional French and English works have been incorporated. Indeed, we are inclined to think that the more appropriate title would have been 'Cohen (H.), Guide for collectors of illustrated works. . . . Trans. and slightly enlarged by J. Lewine.' We have been led to this conclusion by a careful perusal and comparison of the two works—a comparison which has revealed to us the fact that the notes and descriptions contained in the English volume are, with very few exceptions, Cohen's done into English. This practice of making use of other men's work, without due acknowledgment, is becoming so common that we feel called upon, whenever an instance comes under our notice, to condemn it in no very measured terms. It is true that Cohen's prices have been modified so as to bring them into line with the present market value, but beyond this we find no improvement." We would advise the Record's critic to compare its own pages—especially those of its first issue—with the columns of the Library Journal of the months previous to the issue of the Record's first number. Possibly he might in such a comparison find food for thought, if not for more "fine frenzy."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

JOHN LANZ has in preparation a critical volume on Kipling's works by Richard Le Gallienne.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have nearly ready the Book of Ezekiel, the latest volume of Professor Haupt's Polychrome Bible.

THE BOWEN-MERRILL COMPANY, Indianapolis, is now printing the forty-second thousand of Charles Major's remarkable novel, "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

DOUBLEDAY & McCLURE Co. will publish Mary E. Wilkins's novelette, "The Jamesons." In our issue for March 4 we inadvertently announced that the book would be published by the Scribners.

EDWARD J. GOLDBERY, formerly with Rand, McNally & Co., is now representing Laird & Lee, of Chicago. He reached New York City last week, after an extended and satisfactory trip through the West.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have nearly ready an abbreviated edition of Le Sage's "Gil Blas," prepared under the editorship of Professor Cohn, of Columbia University, and Professor Sanderson, formerly of Harvard University.

In our report of the election of the members of the Executive Committee of the Newspaper Publishers' Association we inadvertently gave the name of the representative of the Chicago Times-Herald incorrectly. It should have been A. A. McCormick, who is general manager of the Times-Herald and of the Chicago Evening Post, as well as an old friend of the book trade.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS has undertaken the serious business of editing the American edition of Literature, published by Harper & Brothers. Mr. Bangs has practically occupied this position since the beginning of the year, but the fact is only now formally announced. A liberal and intelligent administration can be expected from Mr. Bangs, even though he has been guilty of owning to being professionally funny.

THE proprietor of The Pall Mall Magazine has commissioned William Archer to come to the United States for the purpose of writing a short series of articles on the stage in America. The yearly increasing theatrical intercourse between England and America should make the result of Mr. Archer's tour of interest to theatre-goers on both sides of the Atlantic. Mr. Archer reached New York on the 5th inst.

BENJ. R. TUCKER, of New York, will publish on the 22d inst. "The Ballad of Reading Gaol," by C. 3. 3. (Oscar Wilde). It is a poem of more than 600 lines, dedicated to the memory of a trooper of the Horse Guards who was hanged in the gaol during Wilde's imprisonment there, and depicts the terrible sensations of the author and his fellow-prisoners before and after the execution. C. 3. 3. was the poet's prison number.

HARPER & BROTHERS further announce "Denis Duval" and "Miscellanies" in their Biographical edition of Thackeray; "The River Syndicate," a volume of short stories by Charles E. Carryl; and "When the Sleeper Wakes," one of H. G. Wells' imaginative stories of future conditions, in which the hero goes into a trance, possessed of a small bank account at the end of the nineteenth century and awakens two centuries later to find himself the owner of more than half the world.

F. V. WHITE & Co., London, will publish at once Le Queux's "The Veiled Man: being the risks and adventures of Sidi Ahamadou, Sheikh of the Azjar Marauders of the Great Sahara." It may be explained that the curious title refers to the Touaregs, known among the Desert-tribes as "the veiled men" because of their habit of constantly wearing a black veil. The book is illustrated by Alfred Pearse, the artist who illustrated the "De Rougemont" papers in The Wide World Magazine.

THE TRIPTYCH, the trio of lovers of good literature and good printing, whose first publication was "Two Love Sonnets," by Gaspara Stampa, will publish for Easter time "Talitha Cumi," retold from a Belgian legend, by Vance Thompson. The edition will be of 99 numbered copies on Wrentham paper, and will be done up in French handmade paper tied with silk. Eighty copies only will be for sale. Subscriptions may be sent to Jay Chambers, clerk to The Triptych, 991 Amsterdam Avenue, New York.

PAUL LEMPERLY, 16 Vestry Street, Cleveland, Ohio, will publish on April 3 a volume entitled "List of Book-plates Engraved by Mr. Edwin Davis French." The volume will be printed by Frank E. Hopkins, at the Marion Press, Jamaica, Queensborough, New York, on handmade paper, and bound in red corded silk cloth. It will be illustrated by a portrait of Mr. French, a view of his study at Saranac Lake, N. Y., and four of his book-plates, printed from the original coppers. The edition will be limited to 120 numbered copies, of which only 100 are for sale.

THE BROTHERS OF THE BOOK announce as their next publication "The Morality of the Profession of Letters," by Robert Louis Stevenson, now first separately reprinted from The Fortnightly Review for April, 1881. Three hundred and fifty copies will be printed on handmade paper, and bound in crushed buckram. Price, one dollar. Subscriptions, accompanied by remittances, may be sent to the Scrivener, Laurence C. Woodworth, Gouverneur, N. Y. After publication the price of any copies remaining unsold will be one dollar and fifty cents.

WILLIAM R. JENKINS will publish in September "The American Cicerone," a pocket guide to the Paris Exposition of 1900. It will be compiled under the direction of Vicomte de Keratry, and it is proposed to arrange the text so that a person, no matter from where he starts, may at once be guided, without the assistance of any one, through all the marvels of the exposition, and he will at the same time be made familiar with the hotels, restaurants, public walks, theatres, stores, monuments, and all places of interest. It will contain maps simply arranged for quick reference.

THE WOOLFALL COMPANY, New York, announce for immediate publication "The Life of Admiral George Dewey, U. S. N., from Montpellier to Manila." The material furnished for this work has been in preparation for some time, the author being a member of the Dewey family, already well and favorably known in the literary field, ably assisted by members of the Admiral's immediate family at Montpellier. The account will be complete and will contain a large amount of hitherto unpublished matter gathered from the personal correspondence of George Dewey during his thirty-seven years' service as an officer of the United States Navy.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS issue to-day "The Life of Danton," a study by William Belloc of the great revolutionary leader which is founded on original documents, with an appendix embodying much collateral information bearing on the time in which he lived; "History of Yiddish Literature in the sixteenth Century," by Leo Wiener, instructor in Slavic languages at Harvard University, an essay on the language of six millions of Jews in Russia and America; "On the South African Frontier," by William Harvey Brown; a new edition of Cavendish's "Laws and Principles of Whist," containing the latest laws on duplicate whist as adopted in this country; and a volume of short stories by Edith Wharton, entitled "The Greater Inclination."

THE Government Printing Office has published a useful work for those interested in national legislation in particular and parliamentary legislation in general, entitled "Parliamentary Precedents of the House of Representatives of the United States." The work has been compiled by Asher C. Hinds, clerk at the Speaker's table, and is published by authority of Congress. These precedents have been collected from the journals and records of debates, and arranged with suitable references to the Constitution and statutes relating to the organization and administration of the House, the general parliamentary law, and the origin and development of the rules of that body. The collection was originally made for use in the work at the Speaker's table, and its arrangement and scope have been carefully planned with the view of making it a practical reference-book.

DAVID MCKAY, of Philadelphia, will issue very soon a new edition of Roper's "Engineers' Handy-book," under title of "Engineers' Handy-book for Steam Engineers and Electricians," rewritten and much enlarged by Edwin R. Keller and Clayton W. Pike, ex-president of the electrical section of the Franklin Institute. The book will contain nearly 900 pages, 325 illustrations, over 700 main subjects, 222 tables, and 645 questions most likely to be asked when under examination before being licensed as an engineer. Being a complete manual for the steam engineer, embracing all the most recent improvements in the steam engine, and giving full instructions for the care and management of an electrical plant, which so many steam engineers are now called upon to take charge of, this handbook will be doubly useful in its new form.

THE MACMILLAN Co. are to publish "Hugh Gwyeth," by Beulah Marie Dix, a tale of a Roundhead cavalier. Among their most important new books are Gamaliel Bradford's

"The Lesson of Popular Government," a defence of democracy; "The Theory of the Leisure Class," by Thorstein B. Veblen; and "The Story of France," by Hon. Thomas E. Watson, covering from the earliest times to the consulate of Napoleon Bonaparte. A valuable medical work just ready is "Impaired Eyesight," by Dr. St. John Roosa. It was not generally known that at the time Winston Churchill's successful story, "The Celebrity," was published, he was engaged upon a novel of much broader scope and on a very much larger canvas. After two years' work this last book is now on the press. "Richard Carvel" will be its title, and The Macmillan Company will publish it in May.

THE STATIONERS' BOARD OF TRADE, in reporting upon the filing of the voluntary petition of bankruptcy by Robert H. Merriam in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in which he disregards the prior general assignment and the Minnesota suit, and assumes that all will be administered in bankruptcy, states that their attorneys hold that the assignee has a prior and enforceable right to the equity in the pledged securities, although events may take such a turn as to throw this to the trustee in bankruptcy, and that the creditors in the Minnesota equity suit have a lien on Merriam's interest under the will which cannot be disturbed. The board also notifies the creditors of Merriam that the creditors who instituted the Minnesota suit have consented to shave the net amount received by them, if any, pro rata, with such other creditors as will, before April 15, contribute to the expenses of the proceedings four per cent. of the face of their respective claims.

THE REV. S. J. BARROWS having failed to receive confirmation by the Senate, the President has nominated Herbert Putnam, of the Boston Public Library, as Librarian of Congress. Mr. Putnam was born in New York in 1861, and is the youngest son of the late George Palmer Putnam, the founder of the publishing House of G. P. Putnam's Sons. He was graduated from Harvard in 1883, and studied at the Columbia Law School. In 1884 Mr. Putnam went to Minneapolis and was admitted to the Minnesota bar. While in Minneapolis he became librarian of the Athenæum, a proprietary library. Through his efforts the Minneapolis Public Library was founded and the Athenæum was merged with it. From its organization the Minneapolis Public Library, under the direction of Mr. Putnam, became one of the most progressive in the country. For personal reasons Mr. Putnam in 1891 resigned as librarian of the Minneapolis Public Library and went to Boston to practice law. He was about to remove to New York when he was chosen librarian of the Boston Public Library. While his name was under discussion at that time President Eliot, of Harvard, referred to him not inaptly as "one of the best three librarians of the country." The American people certainly have every reason to congratulate themselves that the choice of the President has fallen upon one who possesses so many qualifications to administer ably and broadly the affairs of the national library, and who may be depended upon in time to so develop its resources and usefulness as to enable it to rank with the best libraries of the world.

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

MARCH 20-24, 3 P.M.—The third sale of the stock of George H. Richmond & Co. (1500 lots.)—Bangs.
MARCH 27-29, 3 P.M.—Library of the late Robert H. Labberton, historian and geographer. (1099 lots.)—Bangs.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 50 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

SCRIBNER'S NEW BOOKS.

READY TO-DAY.

The Life of Danton.

A Study. By HILAIRE BELLOC, B.A., Late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford.
With portrait and notes. 8vo, $2.50.

This is the first biography in English of the great French revolutionary leader that is founded on original documents. Taking the facts that are known, Mr. Belloc's endeavor has been to paint a picture as vivid as may be of Danton, and to describe the character of the period in which he was a central figure. Supplementing his narrative proper is an appendix embodying much collateral information bearing on the revolutionary leader and the dramatic times in which he lived.

On the South African Frontier.

The Adventures and Observations of an American in Mashonaland and Matabeleland. By WILLIAM HARVEY BROWN. With 32 illustrations and 2 maps. 8vo, $3.00.

A story of absorbingly interesting travel, exploration, and adventure in Rhodesia. The narrative of the author's varied experiences gives a series of vivid pictures of life on the African frontier as entertaining as it is historically valuable.

History of Yiddish Literature in the XIXth Century.

By LEO WIENER, Instructor in the Slavic Languages at Harvard. 8vo, $2.00 net.

An essay in an entirely new field. Yiddish is the language of six millions of Jews in Russia and America, and this study of its very genuine literature will prove indispensable to the student of Jewish thought. Its history also suggests interesting analogies with modern Russian letters and throws a flood of light upon the mood of the American Ghettos.

The Greater Inclination.

By EDITH WHARTON. 12mo, $1.50.

A volume of short stories, marked by wit, subtlety, and uncommon capacity in character-drawing. The author's lack of the "clever" pose and the essential charity behind her touches of outward cynicism are especially attractive.

The Laws and Principles of Whist.

By "CAVENDISH." New and revised edition. 16mo, $1.50 net.

This new copyright edition is revised to the standard of the twenty-third English edition, and contains the latest laws on duplicate whist as adopted in this country. It is printed in colors.

THE MINISTER OF CARTHAGE

By CAROLINE
A. MASON

Author of "A Minister of the World"

Mr. Crockett considers this romance of the 15th century in Scotland (on which he has been working for the past ten years), his strongest work. The fall of the great House of Douglas, with which it deals, he says, "was the one romance of my boyhood."

Size, 5 1/4 x 8 1/4; Binding, cloth, decorated; Pages, 475; Illustrated $1.50.

A most interesting work which could easily stand upon its own merits, even without the literary connections its author has with Swift and Molière, or with M. Rostand's famous play. It is a charmingly fanciful and poetic piece of literature, full of imagination and delicate conceits. This is the first translation even substantially complete that has ever been published.

Size, 4 x 6; Pages, 220; Binding, flexible cloth; Illustrated; 50 cents net. (Uniform with "Cyrano.")

The tale of a "trial" sermon preached by a brilliant young clergyman in the pulpit of a prosperous church. It wins him a call and the love of a girl, but his romance is complicated by his high sense of duty.

Size, 4 x 6; Pages, about 200; Type, 10-point; Price, cloth, 50 cents.

LIFE MASKS
OF GREAT AMERICANS

By C. H. HART

21 Full-Page Cuts

The author was the Associated Press correspondent on the New York all through the war, and his admirable personal account is well supplemented by special contributions. The book is the authoritative record of the North Atlantic Squadron's work, and clears up many mooted points.

Size, 6 x 9 1/4; Pages, 350; many illustrations, maps and diagrams; Binding, cloth, decorated; Price, $2.50.

Mr. Parsons (who is a fellow of the Society of American Landscape Architects and ex-Superintendent of the New York City Parks) has written a practical, helpful book, telling popularly and in detail how to beautify the home grounds, be they small or large.

Size, 5 x 7 1/2; Pages, 350; Illustrations, 56; Type, 10-point, $1.00 net.

These wonderful life masks of famous Americans, the work of J. H. I. Browere, whose invention died with him, reveal to us for the first time the features and facial character of our great statesmen as they really were.

Two editions; Size, 7 1/4 x 10; 21 full-page plates; fifty copies on large paper, with plates on Japan, with an extra set of plates on heavy coated paper, suitable for framing, each $25 net; 347 copies, regular numbered edition, each $6 net.

Cable Address: "Lichinine."

The "Atlas" is an up-to-date telegraphic Code in every respect, and is designed for general use the world over by business men and the public generally having occasion to use the wires.

Without wishing at all to depreciate other works of a similar character the following approximate comparison of the contents of the "Atlas" and the "A B C" Codes is interesting. The latter was published in 1883:

SENTENCES WITH CIPHERS ATTACHED RELATING TO	"ATLAS" CODE.	"A B C" CODE.
General Business.....	20,000	15,000
Legal, Official, Political, Mining, etc.....	2,000	200

Names of Products and Commodities.....	2,300
Vessels, Class, Gear, Shipments, Ports, Rates.....	500
TOTALS	36,000	24,200

The ciphers in the "Atlas" Code have been carefully selected from those published by the Berne Convention and are printed in bold type. There is only one alphabet of words which terminate with the letter "R," thus enabling the users to make up additions for special or private business, attaching Code ciphers commencing with letter "S," thus avoiding a double alphabet of words, which causes loss of time and annoyance.

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

THE LOVE STORY OF MARY TUDOR,
SISTER OF KING HENRY VIII.

By Charles Major (Edwin Caskoden).

Crown 8vo, illustrated, postpaid, $1 50.

NEVER was a prettier love story of the Middle Ages written than this book from the pen of Edwin Caskoden.—SAN FRANCISCO CALL. . . . "When Knighthood Was in Flower" is one of the best romances that has been printed in the last ten years.—CHICAGO EVENING POST . . . The story is in every way a meritorious one, and deserves its popular success.—THE BOOKMAN, N. Y. . . . Julia Marlowe said of Mary Tudor, the heroine in "When Knighthood Was in Flower": "It is the only literary character that I have met with in all my histrionic career that deserves a place in a Shakespearian repertoire."—ENQUIRER, CINCINNATI, O.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE Book Branch of the H. B. Clafin Co., New York, has made arrangements with The Macmillan Company for the exclusive sale of a cheap edition, bound in paper, of Maurice Hewlett's successful story "The Forest Lovers." The edition is limited (?) to 100,000 copies, and will be ready for distribution on April 1.

D. APPLETON & Co. announce "The Care and Feeding of Children," by Dr. L. Emmett Holt, in a new and revised edition; also, a Teacher's edition of Frank M. Chapman's "Bird-Life," containing an appendix of new matter, and a "Teacher's Manual," by the same author, to accompany portfolios of colored plates showing birds of various seasons, of which three are ready. "Uncle Sam's Soldiers," by O. P. Austin, will appear in the Home-Reading Books.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just issued volume XII of their Biographical edition of Thackeray's works, containing "Denis Duval," "The Wolves and the Lamb," "Love the Widower," and "Roundabout Papers." Mrs. Ritchie, in her introduction to the volume treats of the years 1860 to 1863, and includes a hitherto unpublished chapter of "Denis Duval." They have also ready "The Caprina," a new novel of E. F. Benson, which may be looked upon as a sequel to his beautiful Grecian story entitled "The Vintage," dealing with the Greek war of 1820-23; also "The River Syndicate," by Charles E. Carryl, a volume of short stories, many of which have already received high praise.

DOUBLEDAY & MCCLURE Co. have just issued "With Sampson Through the War," by W. A. M. Goode, with contributed chapters by Rear-Admiral Sampson, Captain Robley D. Evans, and Commander C. C. Todd; "How to Plan the Home Grounds," by S. Parsons, Jr., formerly Superintendent of Parks, New York City, with illustrations by W. E. Spader; "A Voyage to the Moon," by the real Cyrano de Bergerac, with introduction and notes by Curtis Hidden Page, of Columbia University; "The Minister of Carthage," by Caroline Atwater Mason, illustrated by C. M. Relyea; and "Black Douglas," a stirring romance of Scotland in the fifteenth century, by S. R. Crockett, who has worked upon this powerful story for more than ten years.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have in press for immediate publication "Men's Tragedies," a volume of short stories dealing with "the realisms of idealists—strong, high, pure, and desolate men"; and "The Short Line War," a Western railroad story by Merwin-Webster. The "American Art Annual," edited by Florence N. Levy, will contain a complete record of painters, their works for 1898, the reports of art museums, art schools, galleries, societies, and foreign exhibitions, upwards of ninety-three half-tone reproductions of pictures of the year, portraits, etc. Other features of interest in the Annual will be directories of artist-artisans and art dealers, together with a list of art books and magazines of the year. An important addition to the ever-increasing literature of electricity is the popular, practical, and fully illustrated handbook by Percy E. Scrutton, entitled "Electricity in Town and Country."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just ready "How to Know the Ferns," by Frances Theodora Parsons, author of their wonderfully successful "How to Know the Wild Flowers," illustrated by Marlon Satterlee and Alice J. Smith; "Anton Seidl," a memorial by his friends, with portraits and illustrations, which, published in the week of the great Seidl memorial performance at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York City, should sell the 1000 copies, to which the edition is limited, almost at sight; and "St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans," a practical exposition by Rev. Dr. Charles Gore, the celebrated editor of "Lux Mundi"; "The Confounding of Camelia," by Anne Douglas Sedgwick, author of "The Dull Miss Archinard," a new novel of English life, is also ready; and "Sweethearts and Wives," stories of life in the navy, by Anna A. Rogers, has been added to the Ivory Series. A sixth edition of Pilcher's "First Aid to the Injured" is also just issued.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyrighted, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

*Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.). D. (name: no cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (32mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ps. (8mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

*Allen, H. C., M.D. Keynotes and characteristics; with comparisons of some of the leading remedies of the materia medica. Phil., Boericke & Tafel, 1898. 179 p. 12°, cl., $1.25. [798]

Ansonge, W. J. Under the African sun: a description of native races in Uganda, sporting adventures and other experiences; ill. from photographs by the author. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 10+355 p. il. 2 col. pl. O. cl., $5. [799]

Professor Ansonge is late senior professor at the Royal College of Mauritius and medical officer to Her Majesty's government in Uganda. He took the journey over the old caravan route from Mombasa to Uganda six times, and spent a year in the more remote parts of Africa known as Unyoro, crossing Lake Albert four times. In the appendix Mr. Ernest Hartert, director of the Tring Museum, has given an interesting account of the author's collection of African birds. Hon. Walter Rothschild contributes a description of some new species of African lepidoptera.

*Atlantic reporter, v. 41. Permanent ed. Sept. 21, 1898-Jan. 18, 1899. St. Paul, West Pub. Co., 1899. 22+1192 p. O. (National reporter system, state ser.) shp., $4. [800]

Contains all the reported decisions of the supreme courts of Me., N. H., Vt., R. I., Conn., and Pa.; court of errors and appeals, court of chancery, and supreme and prerogative courts of N. J.; supreme court, court of chancery, superior court, court of general sessions, and court of oyer and terminer of Del., and court of appeals of Md. With tables of Atlantic cases published in v. 1, Marvel's (Del.) reports; 55, N. J. equity reports; 60, N. J. law reports; 186, Pa. state reports. A table of statutes construed is given in the index.

*Beautiful and quaint designs in leaden glass: entitled A book of sundry draughts, principally serving for glaziers, and not impertinent for plasterers and gardeners; besides sundry other professions, where unto is annexed how to anniel in glass, and also the true forme of the furnace and secretes thereof. London, printed in Shodane, at the signe of the Faulcon, by Walter Dight, 1615. (Facsimile.) N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 4°, velum, net, $2.40. [801]

*Beckx, Rev. P. Manual of the sodality; containing the rules of the sodality of the Blessed Virgin; tr. from the Latin. [Also] New translation of the Little office of the immaculate conception A. M. D. G.; with the litanies of Jesus and the Blessed Virgin and prayers; ed. of 1890 printed from new pls. St. Louis, Mo., B. Herder, 1899. 416 p. 12°, cl., 40 c. [802]

Belloc, Hilaire. Danton: a study. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 11+440 p. por. O. cl., $2.50. [808]

The first biography in English of the great French revolutionary leader founded on original documents. Mr. Belloc, late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, deals only with known facts—facts that may be proved; he has by this method painted a vivid and true picture of Danton, and described the character of the period in which he was a central figure. An appendix supplements the narrative, embodying much collateral information.

Benson, E. F. The Capsina: a historical novel; ill. by G. P. Jacob-Hood. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 8+333 p. D. cl., $1.50. [804]

In a measure a sequel to "The vintage," but can be read independently. The heroine of that book has now become the wife of Mitsos, who has been singled out by Nicholas Vidalis as a worker and leader in the struggles against the Turks, 1819-1823, in the efforts of Greek patriots for independence. The heroine is the head of the historic clan of Capsas, known as the Capsina, a wonderfully strong character. She refused marriage and devoted herself to her father's trade of shipbuilding. She built and fitted out ships to war against the Turk, sailed them herself through dangers from the elements and from brutal enemies, climbed mountains where only goats could go, managed intrigues, etc., etc., and was all woman in her love for Mitsos. When she knew he was married she vowed vengeance on his wife, but was conquered by his child.

Bergerac, Savinien-Hercule Cyrano de. A voyage to the moon. N. Y., Doubleday & McClure Co., 1899. c. 80+219 p. por. S. (Ladies' Home Journal lib. of fiction.) cl., net, 50 c. [805]

Rostand's epoch-making play of "Cyrano de Bergerac" is founded on events in the life of Cyrano de Bergerac, who lived from 1600 to 1655, and on his imaginative work, "A voyage to the moon," which was published in France a year after his death in 1655, and of which there have been three English translations. The present one, by A. Lovell, appeared in 1897, and the original title-page is given in the book. It is an imaginative narrative of a trip to the moon, describing the inhabitants of that planet, their strange customs, etc. Curtis Hidden Page, of Columbia University, gives a biographical sketch of Cyrano de Bergerac, swash-buckler, hero, poet, and philosopher, who was of noble family and richer in titles than estates.

*Birrell, Augustine. Sir Frank Lockwood: a biographical sketch. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 226 p. 12°, cl., $4.20. [806]

Blakeney, Rob. A boy in the Peninsular war; the services, adventures, and experiences of Robert Blakeney, subaltern in the 28th Regiment: an autobiography; ed. by Julian Sturgis. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. 18+282 p. map, O. cl., $4. [807]

The Robert Blakeney of these memoirs was born in Galway in 1799, joined the 28th English Regiment of Infantry in 1804, left it in 1823. He died in 1868, in his seventieth year. This volume, which reads like a romance, is a spirited picture of an English soldier's life during the Peninsular war, with the allied armies against Napoleon's generals. Blakeney describes the retreat through Spain to Corunna with Sir John Moore, and a vivid and touching account of that great general's heroic death is given, also a dramatic account of the battle of Barossa, and the siege and storming of Badajoz.

Blow, Susan E. Letters to a mother on the philosophy of Froebel. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 18+311 p. D. (International education ser., no. 45.) cl., $1.50. [808]

The philosophy of Froebel is here explained in language addressed to the general public. The author takes up the most important doctrines one after the other as they were developed in the Mutter und Kose

Lieder, and shows their equivalents in the different systems of thought that prevail. In some cases these systems are in harmony with Froebel, and in other cases there is profound disagreement.

Bonehill, Ralph. When Santiago fell; or, the war adventures of two chums. N. Y., The Merston Co., [1899.] c. 6+280 p. il. D. (Flag of freedom ser., no. 1.) cl., $1. [809]

"When Santiago fell," while a complete story in itself, forms the first volume of the Flag of Freedom Series for boys. The time covered is the last year of the Cuban-Spanish war and our own campaign leading up to the fall of Santiago.

Borgmeyer, C. L., ed. American corporation legal manual: a compilation of the essential features of the statutory law regulating the formation, management, and dissolution of general business corporations in America, [etc.] patent, trade-mark, and copyright laws of the world, [etc.] V. 7, 1899, [to Jan. 1, 1899.] Plainfield, N. J., The Corporation Legal Manual Co., 1899. c. 8+1288+83 p. O. shp., $4.60. [810]

Bossuet, Jacques Benigne, (Bp.) Devotion to the Blessed Virgin; being the substance of all the sermons for Mary's feasts throughout the year; condensed, arranged, and tr. by F. M. Capes; with introd. by the Rev. W. T. Gordon. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 12+150 p. D. cl., $1. [811]

Boyer, C. C. Principles and methods of teaching: a manual for normal schools, reading circles, and the teachers of elementary, intermediate, and higher schools. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1899. 393 p. O. cl., $1.50. [812]

The treatise is divided into three parts—"Psychology," "Principles of teaching," and "Methods of teaching." There is a list of reference books for collateral reading (4 p.). The author is professor of pedagogy, Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown, Pa., and author of "Concrete psychology."

Bradford, Gamaliel. The lessons of popular government. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 2 v., 19+526; 12+590 p. 8°, cl., $4. [818]

Bradford, T. Lindsley. History of the Homœopathic medical college of Pennsylvania: the Hahnemann medical college and hospital of Philadelphia. Phil., Boericke & Tafel, 1898. 904 p. 8°, cl., $3.50. [814]

Brown, W. Harvey. On the South African frontier: the adventures and observations of an American in Mashonaland and Matabeleland. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1899. c. '90. 20+430 p. map, il. O. cl., $3. [815]

This work is a narrative of the author's experiences and observations, partly as naturalist on an expedition sent by the United States Government in 1890 to the west coast of Africa, but mainly as collector, big-game hunter, gold-seeker, land-owner, citizen, and soldier, during seven years' participation in the settlement and early development of Rhodesia. It treats variedly of travel, collecting, hunting, prospecting, farming, scouting, fighting. It throws a few sidelights on pioneer life. Two chapters are devoted to ethnology. The race problems which arise during the stage of transition from barbarism to civilization are discussed to some extent, as well as the agricultural and mineral resources of Rhodesia, and the possibilities of that region as a future field for immigration and commercial enterprise.

Burgh, A. de. Elizabeth Empress of Austria: a memoir. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1899. 5-384 p. pors. il. O. cl., $2.50. [816]

A conventional biography of the late Empress of Austria, which presents her as Princess of Bavaria, as Empress Elizabeth, as Queen of Hungary, as a woman, philanthropist, friend, and mistress, as a student and reader, as an architect, sportswoman, traveller, as the cousin of King Ludwig II. of Bavaria, as Mater Dolorosa, etc. Her assassination is described, and some anecdotes and reminiscences given relating to her. The volume is richly illustrated from photographs taken from life, many of which were never before made public.

- For the past ten years the author of "The raiders" has worked on this stirring romance of the days of William Douglas, the unfortunate earl who conspired against James II. of Scotland, who stabbed him with his own hand in 1452, after having enticed him to Stirling by a safe conduit. The romantic Scottish scenes and the beautiful women who loved the warrior earl are depicted in the author's best manner.

- Dix, Beulah Marie. Hugh Gwyeth: a Roundhead cavalier. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. c. 4+376 p. D. cl., $1.50. [882]
- The hero was the son of a royalist father and the daughter of a stern Puritan Roundhead. He was brought up in the household of his grandfather and in his early youth heard many derogatory things spoken of his father. When sixteen years old he determined to seek his father. After joining the followers of Charles I. he was obliged to take care of horses and perform menial duties of all kinds. When he first met his father he was rejected by him. The fortunes of war enabled him to defend his father's name and he was advanced to soldier's ranks. Prince Rupert, the nephew of Charles I., appears in the story, which is historically correct and intended specially for young men.

- This edition is considerably enlarged over previous editions; more or less extended notices of the latest scientific discoveries in the departments treated have been added, and certain portions which have grown in importance and interest since the first publication of the work, more than twenty years ago, have been amplified with fuller details. A careful revision has, as far as practicable, eliminated all errors and also all words which, on account of their almost exclusive use in England, are not likely to be easily understood by children in the United States; American instead of English examples are also given, to illustrate statements of general scientific truths. The work has been largely re-illustrated.

The hero is deserted by his mother, when only three weeks old, in a London lodging-house. He is adopted by the woman who keeps the house, receives a good education, enters the army and wins the Victoria cross. The mystery of his real mother's life is finally revealed, and her reasons for deserting him. Middle-class English life and fashionable life, with scenes from a soldier's life, are described, and form the background to the hero's story.

The scene is laid at Fort Worth Texas, the time being the winter of '70 and '71, "as black and dreary a time as ever the army knew, for Congress had telegraphed forty-five regiments into half the number, and blasted all hopes of promotion—about the only thing the soldier has to live for." The novel deals with army life and army men, and has the usual amount of love.

- Under the name of Antichrist the author describes the many miracles of progress and invention that all make for the material happiness of this world. The new socialism especially, of which the chief prophets are atheists, agnostics, or pagans, is shown to be a failure, because it is of this world only, bestowing upon people only that of which change of circumstances and other vicissitudes may rob them. The soul, the hope, the courage of the world is sacrificed to greed and tangible riches. The form of fiction lays the scene in Sicily, and all the legends and superstitions of the populace are used with skill. The lesson is that man was not created for personal happiness, but to leave the world a holier place.

- Under cover of a pretty love-story there is an arraignment of the clergy who still seek place, reputation, and power, always ready to hear a "call" from the centres of prosperity and cultivation, changing from parish to parish for wholly selfish reasons, totally forgetful of "the cumulative effect of a long pastorate, where there is undivided sympathy between pastor and people." The methods of the churches for securing pew-filling preachers are also frankly stated.

Royal, Matthew J. The Isle of the Virgins: a romance. Buffalo, N. Y., The Wenborne-Summer Co., 1899. c. 4-328 p. il. D. cl., $1.25. [889]

A learned and enthusiastic theorist contends that the world is flat and induces the London Company to send out a ship to search for an island of which he has seen a mirage upon the heavens. A young man who has every mental, moral, and physical qualification imaginable is detailed to take care of the learned explorer. The island is found and proves to be inhabited by a race speaking English and thoroughly posted on all matters. The women rule the men and make slaves of them. Twice a year the virgins choose husbands. This custom brings about the circumstances of the plot.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MARCH 25, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

APPROPOS OF A BOOK-TRADE REFORM.

We do not suppose that the correspondent whose communication is printed elsewhere in this issue would be willing to admit that condoning two wrongs establishes a right; yet that seems to be the line on which he desires to convince us that we were in error in taking the stand we did in the article referred to. If the number of booksellers who trespass on the good nature of the publishers in the manner described in the article, "Leakage in Publishing Expenses" (printed in our issue for February 4,) grows so large as to cause them loss—and in one case the leakage traced showed an actual loss already so significant as to threaten to become in a short time a serious burden—the offenders must be brought to book, and no reasonable man will object to the punitive process. Contrariwise, if there are publishers who impose onerous burdens on booksellers and cause them to be losers thereby, the bookseller, on his part, is justified in adopting measures that will protect him and secure him against loss. Especially ought the bookseller to be protected against the newspaper men, who compete with him in selling their editorial copies—though, as a matter of fact, the booksellers, in many places, compound this evil-doing by encouraging editors to sell to them the review copies for which they may have no use.

In discussing trade abuses we are well aware that the right is not all on one side and the wrong all on the other side. Reform will never be possible until each side is willing to meet the other, and frankly and dispassionately state its grievances, and point out in what manner a cure seems possible. There has been in the past too much discussion at cross purposes, which has led to nothing, because there was nothing tangible to lead up to. It is, unfortunately, a fact that there are many so-called booksellers who take it for granted that the publisher is their natural enemy, and so have no compunction in despoiling him whenever the opportunity offers. Why wonder, then, if occasionally retaliation follows? Of course, the innocent very often suffer with as well as for the guilty; but when the matter is brought home to the right party a discrimination is invariably and speedily made. And so it will be found to be in the cases in point. The conscientious and efficient bookseller will not likely be affected by the rule in question, and the publisher, when his attention is called to the burden which he places upon the bookseller who is ready to be obliging in small matters, will no doubt afford relief at once without being coerced by any new or ingenious practice on the part of the bookseller.

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' COPYRIGHT LEAGUE.

THE annual meeting of the American Publishers' Copyright League was held on March 17 at the Aldine Club, the president, W. W. Appleton, in the chair. In the absence of the treasurer, Charles Scribner, the treasurer's report was read by Arthur Scribner. The balance in the treasury was sufficient to show that the work of the League could be carried on, excepting in connection with any exceptional outlays for legal expenses, without any addition to the present dues.

The report of the secretary, George Haven Putnam, presented a brief summary of the action taken by the Executive Committee and by the secretary and the counsel of the League under the general authority confided to them, through the preceding twelve months. Such action had, in the main, been devoted to the heading off of various attempts that had been made during the year to undermine or to hamper by so-called "amendments" the copyright system of the country. It appeared as if there was hardly a month during any time in which Congress was in session in which some measure had not been presented, the purpose of which was inimical to the interests of the producers of copyrighted property. The secretary reported that, in addition to the necessity for such watchfulness and frequent individual effort in Washington, there had been occasion for continued correspondence with American publishers and authors in regard to the status in England and on the Continent of American productions, and an increasing amount of correspondence with publishers and authors on the Continent who were interested in learning what rights, if any, could be secured in the United States for literature produced on the other side of the Atlantic. The secretary found occasion, in connection with this correspondence, and in connection also with action that had been taken in Berlin and with an increasing series of criticisms in Paris, again to call attention to the inadequacy of the protection afforded by the existing American law for works originally issued in languages other than English. The requirement that the English version should be issued in the United States not later than the date of its issue in the country of origin, and the further requirement that the American edition must be printed from type set within the limits of the United States, had the result of rendering it impracticable to secure the protection of American copyright for works of French, German, Italian or Spanish authors which were not sufficiently assured of an American market to warrant the expense of putting into type and printing in the United States an edition in the original language in addition to that planned for in English. Such a requirement could be met only in the case of a very exceptional work by an author for whose writings a large circle of American readers was certainly waiting. For the books which did not warrant the expense of a special American edition in the foreign language, the American copyright was forfeited. Any particular English version could be protected, but the original still remained free for appropriation by unauthorized translators. The risk of such competition stood in the way of the publication of American editions of Continental works which, if they could have been safely controlled on behalf of the owners of the copyright, would have given every prospect of remunerative returns.

The most serious assault upon the existing copyright system had been made, as above stated, during the last days of the session of Congress, in connection with the General Appropriation Bill. It had been attempted to fasten upon this bill a "rider" prescribing that no work should secure the protection of American copyright which had not been put into type and manufactured according to a standard to be set by the Government, and to be passed upon or verified by the Librarian of Congress. This provision had actually passed the House at the time that information first came to the secretary. Prompt action on the part of Charles Henry Butler, the temporary counsel appointed for this purpose, and authorized (by telephone) to represent the League before the Appropriation Committee of the Senate, secured the throwing out by the Senate Committee of the "rider" in question. Two or three days later, the matter came before the Conference Committee, to which committee a brief was submitted presenting the argument of the League against the measure. The "rider" was thereupon thrown out by the Conference Committee. The attempt was, however, serious, as an example of the class of hasty and ill-judged legislation to which the copyright system has so continually been exposed. The secretary pointed out that whenever the time might come for carrying into effect a plan that had been more than once talked over, for an appointment of a commission of experts which should be charged with the task of putting into shape a consistent and effective copyright measure, it would be necessary to refer to such commission all individual suggestions for the modification of the existing law. Even if the work of the commission had no other satisfactory result, the existence of such a commission would be serviceable as minimizing the risk of individual action in regard to copyright. This had been the experience of all the other countries possessing copyright systems, and in all of these countries the existing copyright legislation was based upon reports framed by commissions of experts appointed for the purpose.

The secretary reported finally that the Executive Committee had taken preliminary action in appointing as delegates to the International Conference of Publishers,* which was to be held in London in June, the president, the secretary, and the treasurer. He suggested that as but one of the three would probably be able to be in London at the date of the conference, the number of delegates should be added to by the appointment of R. R. Bowker, of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, who would be a valuable representative of the League, and who expected to be in London at the date mentioned.

After the completion of the secretary's report, the election was held for officers for the ensuing year, with the result that the present officers and members of the Executive Committee were re-elected: President, W. W. Appleton; vice-president, J. Henry Harper; treasurer, Charles Scribner; secretary, George Haven Putnam; Executive Committee (in addition to the above specified officers), Craig Lippincott, Henry Holt, A. F. Houghton, Dana Estes, F. H. Dodd, and Albert Smith.

It was further voted to confirm the action taken by the Executive Committee in the appointment of delegates to the International Conference of Publishers, and R. R. Bowker was added to the delegation. On the motion of Mr. Bowker, it was voted that the secretary be authorized to confer with the representatives of the American Authors' Copyright League with reference to the desirability of bringing about the appointment of a copyright commission. No action was authorized on the part of the secretary, but he was instructed to report to the Executive Committee the result of his conference.

In response to the request of the secretary for general instructions in regard to action to be taken at the London Conference, it was decided that no formal instructions were requisite. An informal discussion brought out a substantial harmony of view in regard to certain questions that were likely to come before the Conference, such as the relations between the American publishers and the Canadian market, etc. The question was raised as to the information that was to be given to the Continental publishers, who were particularly interested in behalf of themselves and their authors in regard to the possibility of better protection for Continental books in this country. On a motion of Mr. Bowker the following resolution was adopted to cover this point:

RESOLVED, That the American Publishers' Copyright League is in favor of such modification of the existing copyright law as may secure for works in foreign languages a reasonable extension of time after the deposit (as required by the provisions of the statute) of a copy of the original edition in the office of the Librarian of Congress simultaneously with its publication in the country of origin, for the publication of an authorized copyright translation of the same.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE ALDINE ASSOCIATION.

On April 1 the Aldine Club will, as the New York Tribune puts it, "recover its birthright." On that date the Uptown Association with which the Aldine merged its identity about a year ago will yield precedence to the older organization, and thereafter the consolidated clubs will be officially known as the Aldine Association.

The Aldine Club was incorporated ten years ago through an act of the legislature, the passage of which was secured by William W. Appleton, Henry C. Bunner, George R. Cathcart, Charles E. Merrill, James F. Ruggles, Frank H. Scott, Arthur H. Scribner, Henry F. Thomas, and John S. Wood. Despite the by-laws, which state that the club was founded to encourage literature and art, it really sprang from a desire on the part of publishers in the vicinity of Lafayette Place for a congenial place in which to lunch and talk shop.

The club found a home in one of the old-time mansions near the Astor Library, and remodelled it into a unique and picturesque abode, which soon became known as one of the distinctive institutions of the city. Its membership included men of varied cleverness. Its dinners and receptions to distinguished men of letters, travel and science were always noteworthy. In Lafayette Place were entertained Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Stanley, Lieutenant Robert E. Peary, Ian MacLaren, A. Conan Doyle, Mr. Barrie, W. D. Howells, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Thomas Nelson Page, and Dr. Weir Mitchell. The club's last dinner in its first home was given in honor of Dr. Edward Everett Hale.

In 1894 a change came over Lafayette Place. Publishers began to move uptown. In their wake went the Aldine. A second home was found in the Kensington Hotel, at Fifteenth Street and Fifth Avenue. The entire first floor and basement were leased. The grill-room of the Lafayette Place house was removed bodily to the new quarters, and it never seemed to be quite at home. From the Kensington the Aldine moved to the Constable Building. The Uptown Association was incorporated in 1895. The incorporators were John W. Atkins, William Schickel, William Baumgarten, Charles T. Cooke, H. Blanchard Dominick, Edward P. Hatch, Charles Scribner, John Sloane, Isaac Stern, and Isidor Straus. Its first president was John Sloane.

Both clubs finding it difficult to meet expenses the Uptown Association proposed to the Aldine, in January, 1897, that they consolidate. The association offered to buy the chattels of the Aldine and share with it their spacious quarters in the Constable Building. The proposition was accepted, and about one hundred and fifty members of the Aldine went over, while forty or fifty took the opportunity to withdraw. The consolidation was made with the implied understanding that as soon as certain legal restrictions could be removed the organization should be known as the Aldine Association. As a matter of fact, the Aldine Club, under the title of the Uptown Association, has never ceased to be identified in the popular mind with the original name.

The club-rooms occupy the entire twelfth floor of the Constable Building. It covers an area of one hundred by two hundred feet. To the right of the onyx-wainscoted entrance-hall is the library, hung in ochre burlap, and full of curious prints, rare folios, autograph letters and portraits of historic and literary celebrities.

Here may be found the choicest work of the author's and the publisher's arts. They flank the room in oak cases, separated at intervals by inviting divans and easy chairs. All the rooms open on a spacious hall. Next to the library is the women's parlor, hung and carpeted in old rose and pale olive, and upholstered in gold and pompadour silks, while on onyx-topped tables is a choice of fashion periodicals. In the southwest angle of the suite is the men's smoker. It is a huge room, cosy in warm reds and cool olives. The main hall, turning east from the smoker, leads to the men's dining-room and café, passing on the way the council chamber and the women's lunch-room. The initiation fee of the club is $100, and the dues are $75 a year. Meals are served from 8 A.M. until midnight. The club is at its best at the noon hour.

Everywhere throughout the Aldine's new home is felt the artistic taste of one of its oldest and most valued members, A. W. Drake, head of the art department of The Century. It was he who set up the club's old idols in new shrines. His table decorations, like all the printing matter in the nature of invitation, menu, or programme issued by the club, are always artistic and unique.

THE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF PUBLISHERS.

THE third International Conference of Publishers will be held in London, in Stationers' Hall, June 7 and following days. The arrangements for this gathering are in the hands of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland. The representatives of all national publishers' associations composed of publishers of books or periodicals are eligible for members of this Conference. The sessions of the Conference may last three or four days, and two sessions will be held daily. The programme for the meetings and order of business will be published by the Executive Committee in good time.

In this third Conference all questions may be discussed bearing directly or indirectly upon publishers and publishing, and also questions bearing upon literary and artistic copyright. Members of the Conference who desire to read papers, or desire special questions to be brought before the Conference are requested to notify the Executive Committee to that effect as soon as possible, that proper allowance may be made for such papers, etc., in making up the programme. All such papers must be presented in the English language and must reach the chairman of the Executive Committee before May 1, 1899. These papers will be printed in English, but may be circulated at the Conference in the original language, and the author will be allowed to print them in that language after they have appeared in the English Conference reports.

All expenses of the Conference will be borne by the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland. It will have the following officers: an English president, (John Murray); vice-presidents elected from the national representatives, of which the president of the last Conference will be a member ex-officio; an English secretary,

(E. G. Fairholme.) and secretaries of the several national divisions. The president and secretary of the Conference will be chosen before the Conference goes into session, in order that they may make the necessary arrangements for business. Publishers intending to become members of the Conference must signify such intention at once and accompany such communication with a fee of £1, ($5.) The Conference will decide the time and place of meeting of the fourth Conference.

PLATES, ETC., REIMPORTED FROM CANADA.

THE following correspondence relating to the reimporting of books and other articles from Canada will explain itself:

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' COPYRIGHT LEAGUE.

NEW YORK, March 14, 1899.

Hon. Lyman R. Gage, Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: The publishers who have business relations with Canada find themselves somewhat perplexed as to the precise purpose of a regulation that has been recently put into force on the Canadian line by the U. S. Treasury authorities in modification of Article 331 of the Customs Regulations of 1892.

The new regulation reads as follows:

"If the importation be made within one year after the date of exportation, the collector shall require the importer to produce the affidavit of the exporter to the fact that such exportation was made in good faith and without any purpose or intention of reimporting the merchandise in question."

The matter affects American publishers and their correspondents in Canada in connection with a practice that has grown up of sending to Canada plates of American made books for the purpose of printing a Canadian edition. There is frequently a business advantage in making a loan of these plates in place of making sale or final transfer of the same, so that when an edition has been printed sufficient to supply the requirements of the not very considerable Canadian market the plates have been reimported.

In connection with such reimportation, the necessary certificates have been given to the effect that the merchandise was American in its origin, and importation without duty has, therefore, been permitted.

It would, of course, not be practicable for a publisher who was sending plates to Toronto for temporary use of this kind to make affidavit to the effect that he had at the time of making the shipment "no purpose or intention of reimporting the merchandise."

The Canadian market for American books is at best but limited, and it is the case with not a few publications of which sale can be found in the Dominion that such sale is not sufficient to repay the cost of putting into type a separate edition for Canada. On the other hand, the provisions of the Canadian copyright requires that a book that is to secure the protection of copyright shall be printed within the territory of the Dominion. There is no requirement that the typesetting or the plate-making shall be done in Canada.

There is, we judge, some advantage to the interests of those concerned in typesetting, or in the production of plates (the U. S. Typographical Union and the U. S. Electrotypers' Union) in being given an opportunity of doing the typesetting for plates to be utilized in Canada.

We had not understood that the Treasury was at any disadvantage in connection with the arrangement that has heretofore been enforced, permitting the reimportation of such plates.

I am instructed by the Publishers' League to submit the inquiry as to whether the regulation, as now worded, is intended to prevent this practice of loaning American plates to Canadian correspondents.

I am also instructed to inquire whether, if that be the present decision of the Department, the publishers may not be permitted to submit an argument in behalf of the reconsideration of such decision.

I am, with much respect,

Your obedient servant,

(Signed) GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM,
Secy A. P. C. L.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 20, 1899.

The American Publishers' Copyright League.

GENTLEMEN: As a reply to your letter of the 14th inst. in regard to the reimportation from Canada of stereotype and electrotype plates of domestic origin, I enclose herewith copy of a letter addressed to Collectors of Customs on the Canadian frontier under date of the 1st inst. (S. 20768) which, it is believed, will afford the relief sought in your letter.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) O. L. SPAULDING,
Assistant Sec'y.

(20768.)

Reimported goods.

Proof required in case of returned goods representing shipments to Canada in foreign vessels.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 1, 1899.

SIR: The Department is advised that there is a want of uniformity at ports on the Canadian frontier as to the acceptance of evidence covering domestic products returned to the United States under the provisions of paragraph 483 of the act of July 24, 1897, it being alleged that, in the case of such goods valued at over $100, some collectors require that the consular declaration of the shipper shall contain, in addition to the words "such exportation was made in good faith," the words "and without any purpose or intention to reimport the merchandise."

You are informed that except in the case of returned goods representing shipments to Canada in foreign vessels under the circumstances stated in Synopsis 7172 and article 331 of the Customs Regulations of 1892, the language last referred to is not required in such consular declarations. (See Department's circular No. 37, of February 28, 1896.) You will be governed accordingly.

Respectfully yours, W. B. HOWELL,

(39136.)

Assistant Secretary.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS, Detroit, Mich.

PAPER MILLS COMBINE.

THE combination of fine writing-paper mills, twenty in all, has been assured by the concerns giving options on the property and a majority of the directors voting to sell. William Whiting, of the Whiting Paper Company, will be the president of the combination. The Holyoke and South Hadley Falls companies, with the capital of each, are as follows: Albion, $500,000; Beebe & Holbrook Company, $150,000; Carew Manufacturing Company, $35,000; Connecticut River, $200,000; Crocker Manufacturing Company, $400,000; George R. Dickinson Company, $150,000; Esleek, $100,000; Franklin, $60,000; George C. Gill, $100,000; Hampshire, $200,000; Holyoke, $500,000; Massasoit, $28,000; Nonotuck, $155,000; Norman, $300,000; Parsons, $360,000; Riverside, $500,000; Valley, $200,000; Wauregan, $100,000; Whiting, $300,000.

CHRISTIAN PRESS ASS'N BOUND BY CONTRACT WITH JOHN MURPHY & CO.

JUSTICE CULLEN, of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Second Department, New York, has just handed down a decision in the suit of John Murphy & Co. against the Christian Press Association. It will be remembered that a few years ago John Murphy & Co. acquired the rights to publish a volume known as "A Manual of Prayers for the Use of the Catholic Laity." The company acquired the right from the Catholic Publication Society, which corporation owned the copyright. This latter company agreed with John Murphy & Co. that it would not sell any of the books in question for a sum less than $1.25 a volume. It was also mutually agreed that a uniform amount would be paid in commissions.

Some time after the agreement was entered into the Catholic Publication Society passed into the hands of a receiver, and this official sold out its property and effects to the Christian Press Association. This association did not live up to the original compact with John Murphy & Co., but, instead, published the work and sold it for a much lower figure.

The suit was brought in 1896 to restrain the Christian Press Association from violating the agreement. The controversy was submitted to a referee, who decided in favor of the plaintiffs. From this decision the defendants appealed, setting up among other things that the action of the plaintiffs was one that was brought in restraint of trade. The appellants also declared that the plaintiffs were claiming a monopoly of the publication.

Justice Cullen does not agree with either of those propositions, and holds specifically that agreements in restraint of trade have no application to agreements concerning copyrights and patents, the very object of which is to give monopolies. He also holds that the Christian Press Association is bound by the contract which its predecessor entered into with John Murphy & Co.

A MEXICAN PAPYRUS.

EUSEBIUS J. MOLERA, dean of the Academy of Sciences, has in his possession, according to the San Francisco Chronicle, an ancient papyrus from Mexico. This papyrus is known as the Codex Fernandez Leal. The British Museum does not possess a single example of this sort, nor does a parallel exist in any continental museum save one, the Imperial Museum of Berlin, where an inferior specimen of Mexican codex is ranked as one of its chief treasures.

The history of this codex dates back to a period far prior to the Conquest, and is probably but one of many works of this type which formed the written records of those ancient days, the extreme care with which it has been handled and preserved only having saved it from the common fate of destruction which has overtaken the rest by reason of their extreme fragility.

The events in this codex describe both chronologically and figuratively some of the conquests made by the prehistoric Mexicans south of their kingdom as far as Tehuantepec, or possibly Guatemala. This is plainly apparent from the hieroglyphics representing the warriors, as well as the known historic emblems of many of the places indicated upon it.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

DISCUSSING CANADIAN COPYRIGHT.

THE CANADIAN SOCIETY OF AUTHORS met at the Canadian Institute, Toronto, March 13, with Hon. G. W. Ross in the chair. The draft report of the provisional committee on copyrights was presented for discussion. The Canadian authors prefer publishing their works in London rather than in Canada, inasmuch as this gives them a larger market at the outset. The consequence of this is that they are little known to the Canadian public, as the British publisher has little interest in what he regards as a comparatively limited market. The committee suggested that the Canadian author who publishes in London could also arrange with a Canadian publisher for a Canadian edition of his works, and, in this way, secure the full advantage of the Canadian market. The committee did not favor any amendment to Lord Herschell's bill which would exclude any British copyright from the Canadian market.

A copy of the report will be transmitted to the Minister of Justice, with the urgent request that a despatch based thereon be sent to the Colonial Senator. A deputation was appointed to confer with the Canadian Copyright Association with a view to their acting in concert with the society. A committee was formed to represent the views of the society before the members of the Dominion Parliament, and to communicate with the British and American Associations of Authors, to secure, if possible, their co-operation in advancing the recommendations of the committee.

COMMUNICATIONS.

LEAKAGE IN PUBLISHING EXPENSES.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: We read with interest and great amusement your editorial on "Leakage in Publishing Expenses."

We are still more amused by an actual case resulting from the innovation which you there suggested. On our desk are two bills from the same house, both bearing the same date, both mailed at the same time in separate envelopes, both received by us at the same time. One bill is marked "T. O.," and is for back items on former order; the other is for a mail order. Both packages were sent at the same time (presumably) as enclosures to our regular packer, and were received by us in the same box. In the package on which we are charged five cents we find not only the book we ordered, but also an editorial for a scientific paper, whose thrifty editors sell their copies to our largest library, thereby depriving us of the sale. That this house may reach a larger clientele, few if any of whom are residents of our town, we pay on this editorial copy not only the pro rata expressage with our other goods, but an additional charge for its delivery, and then lose the sale of the book. Pray, whose is the greater "leakage," the publisher's or the retailer's?

Yours very truly,

A BOOKSELLER.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JOSEPH MEDILL, the well-known journalist and proprietor of The Chicago Tribune, died at San Antonio, Tex., on the 16th inst. He was born at St. John, N. B., April 6, 1823, of Scotch-Irish parents, who in 1831 removed to Massillon, Ohio.

DR. OLIVER MARCY, dean of the Northwestern University and a noted scientist, died at Evanston, Ill., on the 19th inst., seventy-nine years of age. He had been connected with the Northwestern University since 1862, when he took the chair of natural history. He was the author of several works on geology.

OTHNIEL CHARLES MARSH, Professor of Palæontology at Yale, died at New Haven, Conn., on the 18th inst. He was born in Lockport, N. Y., October 29, 1831, and was probably Yale's most famous scholar, his reputation on account of his marvellous achievement in palæontology being world-wide. In addition to this his literary contributions on the subject gave him a renown which caused him to be known among the greatest investigators and scholars of the age. His researches and investigations brought to light more than 1000 new species of extinct vertebrates that were not before known to have existed in this country. In 1876 Professor Marsh began the preparation and publication of a series of monographs upon his Western discoveries. These include "Odontornithes, or, birds with teeth," Washington, 1880, and a volume on the "Dinocerata," 1884. A third volume is devoted to the dinosaurs. Still another volume is concerned with the stegosauria, a group of extinct reptiles in the region of the Rocky Mountains. Several other volumes were in contemplation.

PHILIP J. J. VALENTINI, author of numerous papers on ancient Mexican and Central American history, died on the 16th inst. at St. Luke's Hospital, New York. Dr. Valentini was born in Berlin in 1828. His father, an Italian, was a teacher of foreign languages and the author of a German-Italian dictionary. In 1854 Dr. Valentini went to Central America and there founded the seaport of Puerto Limon, under Government auspices. Learning that the Costa Ricans could give no account of their ancestors, he returned to Germany to search for manuscripts and historical information regarding early Spanish colonization. He returned to Costa Rica, where he lived for eleven years, and where he carried on extensive explorations, which resulted in numerous manuscripts being prepared. These historical studies led Dr. Valentini to investigate the prehistoric remains of Guatemala and neighboring regions, which he found necessary for a clear understanding of Spanish conquest. In these studies he made such progress in deciphering the hieroglyphics of stone monuments and the codices of pre-Columbian manuscripts that in thirty years his work brought him to the front rank of American archaeologists. Dr. Valentini's researches remain for the most part unpublished. His most recent work was "A Study of the Voyage of Pinzon to America," published in Germany in 1898. Dr. Valentini was a son-in-law of the late F. W. Christern, the well-known bookseller.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ALLIANCE, O.—Miss J. M. Feters has sold out her bookstore.

ATLANTA, GA.—H. C. Hudgins & Co., map and book publishers, have been succeeded by the Hudgins Publishing Company.

BELLOWS FALLS, VT.—W. E. J. White, who has been in the book and stationery business here for twenty-three years, is thinking of selling out the business and retiring.

CENTRALIA, ILL.—Harry Warner has bought the bookstore and business of Joe Hefter.

CHICAGO, ILL.—M. H. Fish has resigned his position with the firm of Hayes, Cooke & Co.

CHICAGO, ILL.—The Scroll Publishing and Literary Syndicate has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2500. Incorporators, W. C. Van Gilder, Walter E. McCormack, William R. Burleigh.

COLUMBUS, O.—The firm of Quinius & Ride-nour, booksellers, at No. 1 High Street, has been dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Quinius has retired and Mr. Ridenour will continue the business.

DALLAS, TEX.—The recent report regarding the sale of his business by John Kerrigan was erroneous. Mr. Kerrigan continues to push his wholesale and retail trade in stationery and fancy goods, and 1899 bids fair to beat all previous years.

DECKERTOWN, N. Y.—J. C. Hendershot has moved his bookstore into the Wood building.

GRAND FORKS, N. DAK.—The F. W. Iddings Book and Stationery Company has sold out to R. B. Griffith.

MARLETTE, MICH.—F. J. Erwin has added a stock of books and stationery to his business.

NEW YORK CITY.—Braun, Clément & Co. have discontinued the selling agency for their art works, formerly held by the Helman-Taylor Company, and will hereafter sell their productions direct at 257 Fifth Avenue. The Helman-Taylor Company will continue their business at Cleveland as before.

NEW YORK CITY.—D. M. MacClellan is in charge of the New York office of the Werner Company, of Akron, Ohio, at 177 Fifth avenue.

NEW YORK CITY.—Truslove, Hanson & Comba will hereafter carry the Hossfeld Series of books published by the Hirschfeld Brothers, of London. E. B. Barnes, who formerly acted as agent for the Hirschfelds, will for the present travel for Truslove, Hanson & Comba.

OMAHA, NEB.—Frank Kelble and R. G. Hearsey have opened a book, news, and stationery business at 1515 Farnham Street, which will be carried on under the firm-name of The Globe News Co. They will carry one of the largest stocks of paper-bound books in the city.

PETOSKEY, MICH.—A. G. Cook & Co. have bought the book and stationery stock of James M. Wells.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—The Campbell Book and Stationery Company has been incorporated by Annie Campbell, J. M. Campbell, and George Campbell. The firm will do business at 805 Frederick Avenue.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—F. Cady Packard has retired from the firm of Stephens & Son and opened a bookstore at 651 Fifth Street.

SHAMOKIN, PA.—John T. Thomas has opened a book, music, and stationery store here.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—Browne & Hunt, book-sellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—A. J. Howell, Jr., has opened a new bookstore at 105½ Princess Street.

WOODSTOCK, VT.—W. E. J. White, stationer and bookseller, has sold out to H. P. Clark.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC PUBLICATIONS.

THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO has just published the third volume of its "Review of Historical Publications Relating to Canada," edited by George M. Wrong, Professor of History in the University of Toronto, and H. H. Langton, Librarian of the same institution. The work is an important contribution to the bibliography of the historical literature relating to Canada published during 1898. The subject-matter is divided as follows: (1) Canada's Relations to the Empire; (2) The History of Canada; (3) Provincial and Local History; (4) Geography, Economics, and Statistics; (5) Archaeology, Ethnology, and Folklore; and (6) Law and Constitution of Canada. The longer reviews, whether original or selected, are carefully prepared and authoritative. A very full index is appended. (9+225 p. 8°, cl., $1.50; pap., $1.)

FIEDLER'S "Neues Adressbuch des deutschen Buchhandels und der Verwandten Geschäftszweige, mit Gratis-Beilage Verleger-Auslieferungstabelle, 1899," (published by Walther Fiedler, 27 Grenzstr., Leipzig,) maintains its reputation as a handy, complete, and inexpensive directory of the book trade. The arrangement is (1) by firm-names in alphabetical order, (2) firm-names arranged by countries and cities, (3) firms desiring specialties or catalogues of dealers in old books on the subjects designated, and (4) a list of proprietors whose names do not correspond with those borne by their firms. An appendix contains a classified index to manufacturers of and dealers in specialties, stationery, etc. Prefixed to the volume is a short sketch of the poet Konrad Ferdinand Meyer, whose portrait forms the frontispiece. (672 p. + suppl. pl. 8°, leatherette, 4.50 marks.)

CATALOGUES OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKS.—Théophile Belin, 29 Quai Voltaire, Paris, Manuscrits avec miniatures du XIII^e au XVIII^e siècles. (452 titles.)—Francis P. Harper, 17 East 16th St., N. Y., Bibliotheca Americana. (2520 titles, 50 c.)—John Joseph McVey, 39 N. 13th St., Philadelphia, Americana, general history and biography. (No. 17, 353 titles.)—Noah Farnham Morrison, 877 Broad St., Newark, N. J., Miscellaneous. (No. 25, 2211-2017½ titles;) also, Family affairs [genealogies] retailed at The Sign of the Ark. (98 titles.)—John Skinner, 44 N. Pearl St., Albany, N. Y., Miscellaneous. (No. 14, 283 titles.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE DOMINION CO., Chicago, will publish a "Full Official History of the War with Spain," by Murat Halstead.

CRAIG LIPPINCOTT and Horace S. Ridings sail to-day (the 25th inst.) by the Campania to canvass the London market for novelties for the fall season.

CASELL & COMPANY, Limited, are about to reissue their National Library, the earlier volumes from new plates, and to extend it. The price will still remain at 10 cents.

SOME odd illustrations were lately given during the course of a lecture on Jane Austen by E. de Selincourt, of Oxford University. These illustrations took the form of dialogues arranged from the novels, conducted by persons dressed in the costumes of the period.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY has completed the manuscript of his new book "The Cipher in the Plays and on the Tombstone," which he hopes will finally settle the controversy as to the authorship of the so-called Shakespeare Plays. "'Tis a consummation devoutly to be wish'd."

THERE is a movement now in progress to erect a monument to Mrs. Martha J. Lamb, the former editor of the Magazine of American History and the author of "The History of the City of New York." Subscriptions to the monument fund may be sent to Mrs. Edward E. Salisbury, New Haven, Conn.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. will publish shortly "Early Chapters in Science, a first book of knowledge of natural history, botany, physiology, physics, and chemistry for young people," by Mrs. W. Awdry. The book has been edited by W. F. Barrett, Professor of Experimental Physics in the Royal College of Science for Ireland.

JOHN LANE has in preparation a special edition of Kenneth Grahame's "The Golden Age," for which Maxfield Parrish will make a number of illustrations. They have also under way the "Poems of Emile Verhaeren," selected and translated by Alma Strettell. Verhaeren is one of the best known among the younger Belgian writers.

A. C. McCLURG & Co., Chicago, have in press a story by Frances Weston Carruth, entitled "Those Dale Girls," which touchingly depicts the fortunes of a family that have fallen suddenly from affluence to poverty; also, "The Bee People," a charming story of bee life lucidly told for young people by Margaret Warner Morley. Both volumes will be appropriately illustrated.

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish shortly a volume of the collected poems of Harry Thurston Peck, which will be entitled "Gray Stones and Porphyry." They will publish in the fall a second volume of Professor Peck's literary and critical essays, for which the title is not yet settled. It will contain papers on various French and English authors, including Balzac and Tennyson, also some that deal with questions of linguistic usage in English.

TRUSLOVE, HANSON & COMBA, 65 Fifth Avenue, New York, will publish shortly a book entitled "Contemporary Spain as Shown by Her Novelists," compiled by Miss Mary W. Plummer, of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, from the novels of leading Spanish writers. The selections are grouped under "Local Description," "Religion," "Politics," "Manners and Customs," and "Society," and the whole gives a composite picture of the life of the Spain of to-day, as her writers see it.

ON account of the wide-spread dissatisfaction expressed in regard to the arrangement and uncertainty of the General Statutes of 1897 by W. C. Webb, Crane & Co., of Topeka, Kan., propose to publish the "Compiled Laws of 1899," to contain all laws of a general nature, up to and including those of 1899, with references to the decisions of the Supreme and Appellate Courts, to date of compilation. The established arrangement of subjects will be maintained, and all laws will be published as they were passed, without presuming to make any changes or to omit any of them.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT, on the 18th inst., signed the bill appropriating $20,000 for the continuation of the participation of New York in the work of preparing the topographical map of the State of New York, which is being made by the State Engineering Department and the United States Geological Survey. The map will show the outlines of all counties, towns, and extensive wooded areas, as existing at the time of the execution of the survey, the location of all roads, streams, canals, lakes, and rivers, and will contain contour lines showing the elevation and depression for every twenty feet in vertical interval of the surface of the country.

BRENTANO's, New York, have just published Oscar Wilde's "Ballad of Reading Gaol"; an edition of the "Rubáiyát," containing the text of the fourth edition of Fitzgerald's translation, the speech of Col. John Hay before the Omar Club in London, Fitzgerald's sketch of the life of Omar, and brief notes; also an American edition of "French Verbs at a Glance," by Marlot de Beauvoisin. They will publish on April 3 "Trans-Atlantics," a series of short stories by F. W. Wendt, author of "Ocean Sketches"; and an entirely new edition of "Pierre and Jean," by Guy de Maupassant, translated by Hugh Craig, and illustrated by Lynch and others.

AFTER April 3 the price of the facsimile edition of the "Departmental Ditties," published by M. F. Mansfield & A. Wessels, will be raised to five dollars. They announce two other volumes of interest to Kipling collectors, "A Glossary to Accompany Departmental Ditties as written by Rudyard Kipling," which is to be published uniform in size with the edition of "Departmental Ditties" recently issued by this firm. The second volume is "The Religion of Mr. Kipling," by W. B. Parker, the associate editor of the Atlantic Monthly, wherein is set forth an enthusiastic appreciation of some of Kipling's religious views as evinced by his works in prose and verse.

In our Spring Announcement Number, on page 434, in noting the announcement of Alfred J. Ferris's forthcoming book "Pauperizing the Rich," in preparation by T. S. Leach & Co., of Philadelphia, the printer inadvertently added at the end of the paragraph seven lines that ought to have followed the announcement of the "Handbook of Labor Literature," which Helen Marot is compiling with the encouragement of Professors Richard T. Ely, Edward M. Bemis, John R. Commons, Jeremiah W.

Jenks, Frederic W. Speirs, and Henry R. Seager; and also Morrison I. Swift, Benjamin R. Tucker, Mrs. Eliza W. Twitchell, and James F. Rhodes.

AN original idea has recently been put into execution by a group of writers, draughtsmen, and wood-engravers in Paris. They have, according to Literature, conceived a collection of little volumes, at two francs each, entitled "Les Minutes Parisiennes." Georges Montorgueil has begun the series, which is to contain twenty-four volumes, by a delightfully exact little study of the noon-hour, the moment when the boulevards suddenly overflow with the petites couturières hurrying from their work for the few brief moments of rest at neighboring café. Gabriel Mourey will write "1 Heure, La Bourse; M. Gustave Geffray, "2 Heures, La Cité et l'Île Saint Louis;" Huysmans, "3 Heures, Quois, Jardins Publics, Flanerie," while the other twenty-one hours are in equally experienced hands. Paul Ollendorf, of Paris, is the publisher.

A COMPLETE set of the books printed by William Morris at the Kelmscott Press was sold in London on February 13-15, when the library of the late J. T. Delane, sometime editor of the Times, was dispersed. The highest price was the £44 realized by the edition of Chaucer, 1896, which has always been a costly book. The only copy of the Chaucer that has been sold in the United States publicly fetched $157.50 on March 31, 1898. In London copies have brought the following prices: February 28, 1898, £27 10s.; March 21, 1898, £27 5s.; April 4, 1898, £28 10s.; June 27, 1898, £37, £33; July, 1898, £36 10s. The first book printed at the Kelmscott Press, the "Story of the Glittering Plain," 1891, brought £25 10s. at the Delane sale; the second publication, "Poems by the Way," 1891, £11; Shakespeare's "Poems," 1893, £9 5s.; Keats' "Poems," 1894, £19 10s.; Herrick's "Poems," 1895, £11; Shelley's "Works," 1895, £20; the "Earthly Paradise," 1897, £18 10s., and the "Story of Sigurd," 1898, £12 10s.

FRANK M. BUCKLES and George N. Fenno have formed a partnership under the style of F. M. Buckles & Co., to do a general publishing business and act as publishers' agents, with headquarters at 9 and 11 East 16th Street, New York. The new firm will make a specialty of copyright fiction, well printed, bound in paper and in cloth, that will sell at less than fifty cents a volume. They have already on their list the following: "Joan, the Curate," by Florence Warden; "The Real Lady Hilda," by B. M. Croker; "The Good Mrs. Hypocrite," by "Rita"; "Captain Jackman," by W. Clark Russell; and "A Rogue's Conscience," by David Christie Murray. They are also handling a line of Kipling Booklets, including the "Recessional," "Mandalay," "The Vampire," "Fuzzy Wuzzy," "The Betrothed," "Danny Deever," "Belts," "Tommy," and "Gunga Din." These are handsomely printed in two colors on Dickinson deckle-edge paper, with a handsome half-tone frontispiece of the author. Each booklet is encased in an envelope.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have in press "Old Cambridge," by Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the first volume of a series of National Studies in American Letters designed to present the history and development of our literature during its first century in a form sufficiently various and many-sided to comprehend its many phases and their particular relation to historical movements, social conditions, localities, differences of origin, temperament and environment, etc. The volumes thus far announced are: "The American Historical Novel," by Paul Leicester Ford; "The Knickerbockers," by the Rev. Henry Van Dyke; "Southern Humorists," by John Kendrick Bangs; "Brook Farm," by Lindsay Swift; "The Clergy in American Life and Letters," by the Rev. Daniel Dulaney Addison; and "The Flower of Essex," by George Edward Woodberry.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have just ready "Municipal Monopolies," for which the text is furnished by Edward W. Bemis, John R. Commons, Frank Parsons, M. N. Baker, F. A. C. Perrine, and Max West, which is issued as volume XVI. of Crowell's Library of Economics and Politics; and "How Count Tolstoy Lives and Works," translated by Isabel F. Hapgood from the Russian of P. Sergeyenko, which gives very interesting details of the daily life of one whom the author calls "one of the most remarkable men in the history of mankind." The illustrations of this book will be quite new to American readers. An important contribution to the study of literature is entitled "Contemporary French Novelists," by René Doumic, translated by Mary D. Frost. The authors, whose work Doumic analyzes with justice and delicacy, are Octave Feuillet, the Goncourt brothers, Emile Zola, Alphonse Daudet, Paul Bourget, Maupassant, Pierre Loti, Edouard Rod, J. H. Rosny, Paul Hervieu, J. K. Huysmans, and René Bazin. Prof. Edwin A. Grosvenor, of Amherst, has written a volume on "Contemporary History," and he has also translated Duruy's "Ancient History," and both volumes are also now ready for distribution.

DAVIS & HARVEY, auctioneers, 1112 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, under the management of Stan. V. Henkels, will offer during the last week in April a valuable collection of autographs belonging to Honorable Belmont Perry, including the most complete collection ever on sale of autographs of Confederate and Union Generals, signers of Declaration of Independence, Peace Commissioners, etc. Early surveys of New York City, account-books and diaries of Revolutionary times, and rare engraved portraits belonging to the estate of James A. Bancker will also be auctioned off, as well as rare engraved portraits of Washington and other Generals of the Revolution. The catalogue, which is the most elaborate ever attempted by Mr. Henkels, will appear in six distinct pamphlets, with illuminated covers, under one heavy ornamental wrapper. It will be too heavy to send by mail, but copies will be delivered at the addresses given in an advertisement elsewhere in this issue, where they may be called for, or else may be ordered by prepaid express. The edition is limited, and no time should be lost in speaking for them. Mr. Henkels has also in preparation the sales-catalogue of the historical library of the late Bishop William Stevens Perry, which is particularly rich in county and state histories; also of a collection of rare Americana, scarce books printed during the Rebellion, early imprints, etc., that will be sold early in April.

· AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]
MARCH 25, 3 P.M.—Engravings and etchings, including rare dramatic portraits, New York and American views. (179 lots.)—Bangs.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplaced, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

Write In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

House that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

Write Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

PUBLISH THIS WEEK:

LIFE OF EDWIN M. STANTON

By GEORGE C. GORHAM. With portraits, maps, and facsimiles of important documents. 2 vols., 8vo, $6.00.

The life of Lincoln's great war secretary, written with the aid of Stanton's family. Stanton was, perhaps, next to President Lincoln and General Grant, the most important figure in the war for the Union. Mr. Gorham has told the story of his career with much power, and his book is a work of notable value as a contribution to the history of the Civil War and as a memorial of Stanton's great public services.

THE CONJURE WOMAN

By CHARLES W. CHESNUTT. 16mo, $1.25. De Luxe Edition, a beautiful book $3.00 net.

Mr. Chesnutt, who is perfectly acquainted with negro superstitions and dialect, here groups several stories of peculiar interest. He has caught the indescribable Ethiopian, mystic quality in the negro mind, and has embodied it in stories vigorous, vivid, and strikingly dramatic. The story-teller is Uncle Julius, who has much of the genius of Uncle Remus.

PAPIAS AND HIS CONTEMPORARIES

A Study of Religious Thought in the Second Century. By Rev. EDWARD H. HALL. 12mo, $1.25.

A book of great value for students of the first centuries of the Christian faith. Mr. Hall uses Papias to show the method and spirit of early Christianity. He examines the Fathers from St. Peter—Ignatius, Jerome, Marcion, Valentine—down to the third century, reviewing their works and influence. His treatment of the Millennium, the Divinity of Christ, and the other topics which come within his survey is careful, candid, and worthy of most respectful consideration. His book is a contribution of real importance to our knowledge of an era which holds a significant and mysterious place in the history of Christianity.

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN:

Her Letters and Memories of Her Life. By EMMA STEBBINS. New Popular Edition, with portraits. 8vo, $1.50.

Mr. George Ripley, the eminent literary critic of the New York Tribune, when this book was first published said: "The point of view in which the present work assumes an exceeding interest is that of the portraiture of a rare and noble woman rather than of a critical estimate of an illustrious dramatic artist."

A SATCHEL GUIDE

The Annual American Catalogue, 1898

THE ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE for 1898 will contain :

- (1) Directory of American Publishers issuing books in 1898.
- (2) Full-title Record, with descriptive notes, in author alphabet, of all books recorded in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, 1898.
- (3) Author-, title-, and subject-index to same, in one alphabet.
- (4) Publishers' annual lists for 1898.

This volume forms the FOURTH ANNUAL SUPPLEMENT to the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1890-95.

Half leather, $3.50; in sheets, $3.00.

The edition, as usual, is a limited one. The volumes for 1890 to 1893 are all out of print, and orders for those of 1894, 1895, 1896, and 1897, to ensure supply, should be promptly filed. THE ANNUAL ENGLISH CATALOGUE, for which we have the American market, now includes full title entries, after the manner of the American volume, instead of the previous abbreviated entries. It will be furnished at $1.50 paper, or bound with the American in one volume, half leather, at $5.00, net.

The Annual Literary Index, 1898

Including Periodicals, American and English; Essays, Book-Chapters, etc.; with Author-Index, Bibliographies, Necrology, and Index to Dates of Principal Events. Edited by W. I. FLETCHER and R. R. BOWKER, with the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of the Library Journal staff.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX complements the "Annual American Catalogue" of books, published each year, by indexing (1) articles in periodicals published during the year of its issue; (2) essays and book-chapters in composite books; (3) authors of periodical articles and essays; (4) special bibliographies; (5) authors deceased; (6) dates of principal events during the year. The two volumes together make a complete record of the literary product of the year.

"Of great value to all who would keep advised of the topics and writers in the periodical literature of the day."—Universalist Quarterly.

"Good indexing could no further go."—The Nation.

DAVIS & HARVEY, Auctioneers.

A GREAT HISTORICAL SALE

will be held under the management of STAN. V. HENKELS in the Art Salesrooms of

DAVIS & HARVEY, 1112 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,

THE LAST WEEK IN APRIL.

It will include the Valuable Collection of Autographs belonging to

Hon. Belmont Perry,

Embracing the most complete collection ever offered at sale of Confederate Generals, Union Generals, Confederate and Union Statesmen, including the Senate, the Congress, the Cabinet, Peace Commissioners, etc.; also Presidents of the United States, Generals of the Revolution, Signers of the Declaration, Members of the Old Congress, Literary Characters, etc.

N. B.—The Letters of the Union and Confederate Generals are, for the most part, Autograph Reports of Battles, or Autograph Military Biographies of themselves, making the sale the most unique of its kind.

Also the Famous Collection of Portraits, Photographs from Life of Confederate and Union Generals, through which medium the National Government was enabled to get portraits which could not be obtained through any other source. Nearly every letter is followed by a portfolio of clippings from Confederate and Union newspapers, forming unique biographies of the noted participants in the Great Rebellion. To be followed by

The Bancker Papers,

The Valuable Historical Papers belonging to Ewart and Gerard Bancker (respectively Colonial Secretary and Surveyor of the Province of New York), and sold for the Estate of Jas. A. Bancker, Deceased, of New York.

These papers are of inestimable value, as they contain letters of eminent Colonial characters of the greatest rarity, and Early Surveys of New York City and Suburbs, Plans of Revolutionary Ports, Account Books, Diaries of Revolutionary Times, Commissions in Colonial Army, etc. Also and other Generals of the Revolution, Statesmen, Patriots, etc., etc., etc.

READ THIS:—The catalogue, which is the most elaborate one ever attempted by Mr. Henkels, will appear in six distinct Pamphlets, with illuminated covers, under one heavy ornamental wrapper; as it will be too heavy to send through the mail, and as the expense has been considerable, we will be pleased to present our patrons with a copy of the same, but will request of them to send us word to which of the following establishments they would prefer us to send their copy, to await their calling:

Jos. F. SABIN, 80 Nassau St., New York; DODD, MEAD & Co., 149 5th Ave., New York; JAS. S. BRADLEY, Nassau and Liberty Sts., New York; W. R. BENJAMIN, 1125 Broadway, New York; W. B. CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

PUBLISH TO-DAY.

A New Book by the Author of "How to Know the Wild Flowers."

HOW TO KNOW THE FERNS

A Guide to the Names, Haunts, and Habits of Our Common Ferns

BY FRANCES THEODORA PARSONS

With 144 illustrations by Marion Satterlee and Alice J. Smith. Crown 8vo, $1.50 net.

This volume is similar in aim and scope to the author's previous book, "How to Know the Wild Flowers," and is intended as a guide for those who enjoy seeking out and gathering ferns. By means of simple, brief descriptions and accurate illustrations it enables the unscientific lover of nature to identify any of our common ferns.

Anton Seidl

A Memorial by His Friends

With portraits and illustrations. Edition limited to 1000 numbered copies. Quarto, $5.00 net. (The right to advance the price after publication is reserved.)

In this volume Messrs. Lehman, Brandt, Nordica and Eames, and Jean de Reszke, Victor Herbert, and others write of Seidl as a man and musician. Critical appreciations are contributed by Mr. Krehbiel, Mr. Huneker, Mr. Steinberg, Mr. Finck, and others, and a biographical sketch of Mr. Seidl is written by Mr. Finck, with the assistance of Mrs. Seidl.

St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans

A Practical Exposition. By the Rev. CHARLES GORE, D.D. Vol. I., containing chapters I.-VIII. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

The author's purpose is to furnish a more practical and popular exposition of the Epistle to the Romans than is to be found in most commentaries. The style is marked by the same eloquence that distinguishes Canon Gore's previous writings on Scriptural subjects.

"A new work by Canon Gore is an ecclesiastical event."—The Guardian.

The Confounding of Camelia

By ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK. 12mo, $1.25.

A new novel of English life by the author of "The Dull Miss Archinard," which the Boston Transcript called "the most readable novel, pure and simple, of the year," and of which the London Spectator said: "Miss Sedgwick has a gift denied to abler and more experienced writers—that of drawing sympathetic characters."

Sweethearts and Wives

Stories of Life in the Navy. By ANNA A. ROGERS. (Ivory Series.) 16mo, 75 cents.

Various episodes—romantic, sentimental, humorous, and even tragic—in the lives of sweethearts and wives of naval officers form the subjects of these charming short stories by a naval officer's wife.

First Aid in Illness and Injury

Comprised in a series of Chapters on the Human Machine, its Structure, its Implements of Repair, and the Accidents and Emergencies to which it is liable. By Major JAMES E. PILCHER, M.D. Sixth edition, revised. With 175 illustrations. Leather, 12mo, $2.00 net.

This new edition is revised in many particulars, and is now thoroughly abreast of the latest methods of procedure in first-aid work.

WHOLE No. 1418

D. APPLETON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

A. Conan Doyle's New Novel.

A DUET, WITH AN OCCASIONAL CHORUS.

By A. CONAN DOYLE, author of "Uncle Bernac," "Brigadier Gerard," "Rodney Stone," etc. Uniform with other books by Dr. Doyle. 12mo. cloth, $1.50.

This novel is one in which the author has felt a peculiar interest. The scene is laid in London, and the story is one of the present time. The tale opens where the conventional novel ends—with a marriage, and another point of difference from the usual novel is that the marriage turns out happily, notwithstanding the varied experiences of hero and heroine. As a story of wedded love it has an idyllic character which will appeal to every reader not devoid of healthy sentiment. As an adroit interpretation of a true philosophy of wedded life the story contains illustrations and pithy sayings which will enlist the interest of women and men alike.

GENERAL SHERMAN.

By General M. F. FORCE. A new volume in The Great Commanders Series, edited by General James Grant Wilson. With portrait and maps. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

New and Revised Edition.

THE FAIRY-LAND OF SCIENCE.

By ARABELLA B. BUCKLEY, author of "A Short History of Natural Science," "Botanical Tables for Young Students," etc. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

THE CARE AND FEEDING OF CHILDREN.

A Catechism for the Use of Mothers and Children's Nurses. By L. EMMETT HOLT, M. D., Professor of Diseases of children in the New York Polyclinic, Attending Physician to the Babies' Hospital, etc. 12mo, cloth, 50 cents.

"A most excellent guide for nurses and mothers."—Medical Review.

A Striking and Timely Novel.

THE MORMON PROPHET.

By LILY DOUGALL, author of "The Mermaid," "The Madonna of a Day," and "The Zeit-Geist." 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Merely as a story of strange happenings and adventures this novel would enlist the interest of readers, but it has also as really its chief reason for being, the great interest attaching to its portraiture of the character of Joseph Smith. In these pages the peculiar temperament of the "Prophet," the founder of the sect, is placed before readers in a manner which will open to them an unknown chapter in our history. At the present time an intimate interest will be felt in this vivid picture of the Mormon Prophet's origin and career, the steadfastness of his followers throughout ignominy and peril, and the strange modifications introduced in their beliefs in the days of prosperity and material temptation.

LETTERS TO A MOTHER.

By SUSAN E. BLOW, author of "Symbolic Education," "The Mottoes and Commentaries of Friedrich Froebel's Mother-Play," "The Songs and Music of Friedrich Froebel's Mother-Play," etc. The International Education Series. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

SPAIN.

By FREDERICK A. OBER, author of "Puerto Rico and its Resources," "Cruzo's Island," etc. History for Young Readers Series. 16mo, cloth, 60 cents.

A New American Author

OVER two years ago there was published privately in Dayton, Ohio, a small volume of poems by Paul Laurence Dunbar. No one at the time knew who Dunbar was or anything about him. Not until W. D. Howells, in Harper's Weekly, acclaimed Dunbar as a poet, wonderful alike in his literary touch and insight into life, was he known in the faintest degree in the East as a writer of verse. Some while after this, Dodd, Mead & Company published in New York a volume containing the Dayton poems, together with additions, and an introduction by Mr. Howells. Poetry is not a very salable product, but the fact that Mr. Dunbar was a negro and a young man almost entirely without schooling, together with the extraordinary merit of his poems, seemed to promise a considerable success. The publishers' anticipations concerning the book were more than realized, and during the last two years 10,000 copies have been sold, a very remarkable record for a book of verse.

A year after, as if to show that his gifts were not alone for poetry, Mr. Dunbar published, through the same house, a volume of short stories, dealing with negro life and negro character. These were illustrated by Mr. Kemble, and were published under the title of "Folks from Dixie." The book was an immediate success.

Still further to prove that he was an author and not alone a poet, he published, last summer, a novel of Ohio life, entitled "The Uncalled." Critics all over the country (although some of them realized that it was possessed of certain qualities due to youth and inexperience) claimed for it a high place in American fiction.

The fourth of Mr. Dunbar's books has just been published, and is a volume of poetry dealing with the homely and familiar aspects of life. It is entitled "Lyrics of the Hearthside."

While not claiming for PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR a foremost position among English authors, it is perfectly fair to claim for him the foremost position among the living writers of his race, and a very high place among the writers of the day.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Philadelphia, has just published a charming love-story by Caroline Atwater Mason, entitled "A Wind Flower."

GODFREY A. S. WIENER, 662 Sixth Avenue, New York, has just ready a second edition of "Two Summer Girls and I," by Theodore Burt Sayre, with illustrations by Frederic Thornburgh.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. have nearly ready new editions of "At Dawn of Day, Thoughts for the Morning Hour," and "Between the Lights, Thoughts for the Quiet Hour," formerly published by A. D. F. Randolph & Co.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. announce a dashing book for boys by W. Boyd Allen, entitled "Cleared for Action." One of the heroes serves and fights under Dewey, while the other is under Sampson's command, and they have plenty of thrilling adventure during the brief conflict with Spanish forces.

D. C. HEATH & Co., publishers, Boston, have just issued Frommel's "Eingeschnelt" (Snowed In), a very delightful story, taking its origin in the distinguished author's student life. It is provided with introduction, notes, and vocabulary, by Dr. Bernhardt, and is adapted to second-year school classes.

THE F. A. STOKES COMPANY have just ready "Hilda," a new Calcutta story by Sarah Jeanette Duncan (Mrs. Cotes); and "The Sturgis Wager," a detective story by Edgar Morette, in which a murderer who has cleverly blinded the police and the law finally betrays himself through inordinate vanity and a real paternal affection for his beautiful daughter.

C. L. TRAVER, 108 South Broad Street, Trenton, N. J., has just published the "Journal, or Historical Recollections of American Events during the Revolutionary War, by Elias Boudinot, President of the Continental Congress and Commissary-General of Prisoners during the Revolutionary War." The text is a copy made directly from original manuscript. The edition is limited to 290 numbered copies.

E. R. HERRICK & COMPANY will soon publish "The Fight for Dominion," a romance of our first war with Spain, by Gay Parker. The period is about one hundred and fifty years ago, when the Spaniards ruled Florida, and the English, under Oglethorpe, colonized Georgia. The author graphically describes the historical battle of "Bloody Marsh," which is doubtless without parallel in history. The book will be illustrated by G. Bertram Mitchell.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have just ready "The Daughters of Babylon," a novel by Wilson Barrett and Robert Hichen, with the same plot as the play of the same name by Mr. Barrett; "Mr., Miss, and Mrs.," a volume of short stories by Charles Bloomingdale, jr., and "The Taming of the Jungle," by Dr. C. W. Doyle, who was born in 1852 in India, and is said to picture phases of Indian life that will be new even to readers of Kipling.

CASSELL & Co., Limited, will publish shortly "The Life of William Ewart Gladstone," edited by Sir Wemyss Reid, complete in one volume. The work will contain contributions by Canon MacColl, Rev. W. Tuckwell, G. W. E. Russell, Henry W. Lucy, Arthur J. Butler, F. W. Hirst, Alfred F. Robbins, and other writers having a special knowledge of the subject. A chapter on Mr. Gladstone's home life has been contributed by a relative of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone. The volume will be illustrated, and the cover has been specially designed by A. A. Turbayne.

HERBERT S. STONE & Co., of Chicago, announce what is said to be an important biography. It is "The Life of William Makepeace Thackeray," by Lewis Melville. It will be recalled that Thackeray desired that no biography should be written of him for personal reasons, which his family and friends had every cause and wish to respect. Whether Thackeray's wish in this direction has been violated by the present author is not known unless the following topics in the book give some intimation of what the reader may expect: Grub Street and Paris, Journalism, The Tragedy of His Married Life, Club Life, &c.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

The closing days of the reign of George IV. and the troublous days of King William IV. furnished the historical background for a love-tale in which the Reform Bill, and the work of Peel, O'Connell, Sydney Smith, and others are deciding factors. "I" stands for the heir of the dukedom, "thou" for the daughter of his staunch adherent, and "the other one" for a rich young ward of the duke who almost wrecks the happiness of many, but finally marries for love and loses her life in the horrors of the Indian Mutiny of 1857.

methods of treatment are suggested and applied, and the result illustrated by giving pictures of the interiors of eminently good houses. Additional articles are: Portières, their use and misuse, by Donald Warren, who also writes on artificial lighting; Small ornaments; and On the use of soft wood, by Alfred H. Granger.

Cotes, Mrs. Sara Jeannette Duncan, [Mrs. Everard Cotes.] Hilda: a story of Culcutta. N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., [1899.] c. 2+317 p. D. cl., $1.25. [940]

The peculiar conditions of East Indian society bring together Hilda Howe, a gifted actress of sensational plays, and Laura Filbert, a Salvation Army captain. The Salvation methods fall with the emotional actress, who, however, comes under the influence of an ascetic priest. The peculiar methods of an Evangelistic and a Roman Catholic mission are described with the wit and humor and also the pathos that made "The adventures of a Mem-Sahib" and "His Honour and a lady" so delightful. The plot ends in a well-managed surprise.

Crandall, Lathan A., D.D. Some facts concerning Christian science. Chic., Memorial Press, [1899.] 47 p. S. pap., 10 c. [941]

"Believing that the theories of Christian science are erroneous and hence dangerous, the pastor of the Memorial Baptist Church, Chicago, felt constrained to place before his people certain facts concerning this new faith, together with the conclusions which these facts seem to warrant. . . . These addresses are now put into pamphlet form."—Preface.

Diltz, Hanson Penn. Hollow Bracken: a novel. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham Co., 1899. c. 5-584 p. D. cl., $1.50. [943]

This highly sensational romance has for its scene New Orleans and its environment. Hollow Bracken, the heir of one ill-fated house, becomes the guardian of Saddle, the descendant of another doomed family. A gypsy and a maniac are among the gruesome elements of the tale. The mysteries are finally cleared up in London.

Dodd, Ira Seymour. The song of the Rappahannock: sketches of the civil war. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1898. c. '97, '98. 6+254 p. S. cl., $1. [943]

While wholly different from "The red badge of courage," these sketches are in their own way quite as remarkable. "The song of the Rappahannock" is sung by bullets and shot and shell, and the writer discloses his emotions as he found himself for the first time under fire. In the other sketches he gives a vivid picture of the process by which raw recruits are moulded into veterans, describes the life around the camp-fire, and pictures the devotion, heroism, and sacrifice which characterized the young men especially who gave their lives for their country a generation ago.

Donovan, J. W. Tact in court; 6th enl. ed., cont. sketches of cases won by art, skill, courage, and eloquence, with examples of trial work by the best advocates, and hints on law speeches. Rochester, N. Y., Williamson Law Book Co., 1898. c. 7+188 p. D. shp., $1. [945]

Dow, Neal. The reminiscences of Neal Dow (born 1804—died 1897): recollections of eighty years. Portland, Me., Evening Express Pub. Co., 1898. 781 p. il. 8°, cl., subs., $2.50; lib. style, $3.50; hf. mor., $4. [946]

Dresser, Horatio Willis. Methods and problems of spiritual healing. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 2-101 p. D. cl., $1. [947]

The author states that he is not in the practice of mental healing and does not deem himself competent to give advice concerning specific application of the mental cure. He is not a follower of any sect, and does not subscribe to the creed of those who advocate mental remedies in the cure of disease. He is simply a truth-seeker, and his book contains the results of fifteen years of observation, during which he witnessed the successful application of the principles he advocates. The purpose of the book is quite as much to stimulate thought as to offer practical suggestions.

Drexel, Darius D., M.D. Hypnotism made easy. N. Y., Hypnotic Publishing Co., 1899. c. 32 p. il. sq. S. pap., 10 c. [948]

Contents: How to select a subject; Modes of operating; How to awaken a subject; Diseases; Qualifications of a hypnotist; Is the practice of hypnotism dangerous?

Dunbar, Paul Laurence. Lyrics of the hearthside. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1899. c. 8+227 p. por. S. cl., $1.25. [949]

A pretty volume of verse, which includes dialect poems, uniform with the author's "Lyrics of lowly life."

Fielding, H. Works; with introductions by Edmund Gosse. New library ed. In 12 v. V. 1-9. N. Y., imported by C. Scribner's Sons, 1898. il. 8°, cl., per v., net, $2.50. [950]

Contents: Vs. 1, 2, The adventures of Joseph Andrew and his friend Mr. Abraham Adams, 40+371; 9+251 p. V. 3-8, The history of Tom Jones, a foundling; 25+357; 12+391; 8+342; 11+407 p. V. 7-9, Amelia, 14+299; 9+290; 9+209 p.

Fiak, J. Portland, Ore., The J. K. Gill Co., 1899. sq. S. cl., $2 50. [951]

Gore, C., (Canon.) St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans: a practical exposition. V. 1, Chapters I.-VIII. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1899. 8+326 p. D. cl., $1.50. [952]

The method of exposition in this volume is the same as that pursued in its predecessor on the Epistle to the Ephesians. After a general introduction each section of the revised version is taken, or in some cases two sections are taken together, and prefaced by an analysis or paraphrase, as seems most useful, and followed by further explanation of the main ideas or phrases which each section contains.

Gorham, G. C. Life and public services of Edwin M. Stanton. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 2 v., 16+456; 15+502 p. por. facsimiles, il. O. cl., $6. [953]

Although this work contains a sketch of Stanton's early life, his professional career, and his general characteristics its main purpose is to present the record of his relation to the Civil War, and to mark the place in history to which his services to the country entitled him. His public life embraced the secession winter of 1860-61, three years of the Civil War—1862-65, and three years of the reconstruction struggle which followed. Mr. Gorham, who describes President Lincoln's great war secretary, was an intimate friend and great admirer of Mr. Stanton. He has written this work with the sanction and assistance of Stanton's family, and has had the privilege of examining Stanton's personal correspondence.

Griggs, Sutton E. Imperium in imperio. Cin., O., The Editor Publishing Co., 1899. c. 5+285 p. D. cl., $1. [955]

Imperium in imperio is the name of a secret government supposed to have been organized among the better-informed colored people after the Civil War, by which the unruly, ignorant blacks were kept from destroying the whites whom they so dangerously outnumbered. Two young negroes—one pure blooded the other with a white father—are the heroes. They both receive a fine education and labor in totally distinct ways to improve their down-trodden race.

- In 1700, after the death of Charles II. of Spain, the grandson of Louis XIV. of France was called to the Spanish throne under the title of Philip V. He was but seventeen years old, and his queen, Maria Louise of Savoy, but thirteen. The youth of the couple rendered it necessary that they should have a friend and adviser, and the Princess des Ursins, a Frenchwoman of noble birth and of great tact and intelligence, was chosen for this position, though nominally the Camarera-Mayor, or superintendent of the queen's household. For twelve years during the turmoil and chaos of the wars of the Spanish succession her power was almost absolute. Her life was full of contrasts and is of unusual interest. - A romance, told in the first person by a newspaper reporter, who states in the beginning that he is "conscientious." This leads at once to the expectation of a remarkable narrative. And, truly, he introduces us to some curious people and weird things—the "Enchanted stone," around which the story centres, the Yellow Man, the Triple Flame Symbol, the eccentric multimillionaire who changes her religion once a fortnight, and a host of mystical Orientals figure in this fantastic tale which has sombre old London of the present day for a background. - The author is a lawyer of Kentucky, and says the complicated plot of his story is founded on facts. He introduces forgers and fortune-tellers and two men who lead dual lives and mystify people for many years. The scene of the story would seem to be Tennessee and Mississippi. Several law cases lead to an unraveling of the mysteries.

- The time of the story is 1748, its scene being along the seacoast of Sussex, England. The doings here of the "free-traders," as they called themselves, or smugglers, as the government named them, had become so audacious that a revenue cutter with a smart young lieutenant in command, and a brigade of cavalry, were sent down to work together against the offenders. Everybody in the village seems engaged in evading the revenue laws, and the events are very exciting. Joan is the parson's daughter, and so capable and useful in the parish that she is called "the curate." She and the smart young lieutenant are the characters in a romance.

- Joseph Joubert, the French moralist, was born May 6, 1754, and died May 4, 1824. He came to Paris in 1776, and there came under the influence of Marmontel, La Harpe, d'Alembert and Diderot. He became a thinker and critic, but lacked simplicity, and published very little. For many years he was the intimate friend of Chateaubriand. A two-volume edition of his "Pensées" (thoughts) was published in 1842. Matthew Arnold quoted many from them in his essay on Joubert in his first volume of "Essays in criticism," on which Mrs. Ward founded her biographical sketch. The translator has grouped the thoughts under subjects, and they cover all the stirring questions of life, and of art and literature.

An account of the social and political development of England since the opening of the century. No attempt is made at anything like a minute and detailed history of the events that followed each other during that time, the intent being rather to draw something like a picture than to give the reader a chronicle and a record. The writer has described each remarkable political and social development, and, along with them, the statesmen and philanthropists of every order by whom such development was assisted in its progress.

McGrath, T. Francis. History of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, from the earliest period to the joint national convention at Trenton, New Jersey, June 27, 1898; with biography of Bp. Ja. A. McFaul. Cleveland, O., [T. Francis McGrath, 1899.] 8-150 p. pors. il. sq. S. flex. cl., 35 c.; pap., 25 c. [976]

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, as its name indicates, is a society composed exclusively of Irishmen by birth or descent, and practical Roman Catholics, organized in Ireland for the preservation of the Catholic church against English persecution, and the protection of its priests and laity. This is a very thorough history of it from its inception in the seventeenth century to the present day.

Magruder, Julia. A heaven-kissing hill. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. 2+159 p. 1 il. nar. S. cl., 75 c. [977]

A poor artist paints a picture which he gives to an equally poor dealer to sell at any price. After long waiting it is bought by a woman who gives him, through the dealer, $100 and a letter of great encouragement. Soon he makes the acquaintance of a proud society girl who also admires his work. His first customer watches his career and criticises and inspires his work. A picture typifying Shakespeare's words, "new lighted on a heaven-kissing hill," finally brings on the dénouement.

The author, correspondent of the New York Journal, was a participant with the "Rough Riders," and was severely wounded by a Mauser bullet while at the extreme front of the firing line at Las Guasimas. His book is entirely devoted to the Rough Riders, telling with many anecdotes and details of the personalities of its members, and its part in the war in Cuba. The book contains a complete roster of the regiment.

Mason, Caroline Atwater. A wind flower: a novel. Phil., A. J. Rowland, [American Baptist Pub. Soc.] 1899. c. 7+282 p. il. D. cl., $1. [980]

This story, like the author's former stories, "The minister of the world" and "The minister of Carthage," deals with the changing views of clergy and laity regarding orthodox doctrinal religion. Two absolutely sincere men—one an experienced, spiritually-minded old Quaker, the other a poetic, visionary priest in a most advanced ritualistic church—afford fine studies of character, and enable the author to bring out her views on the essentials of religious belief. The scene is New England.

Mickalowitz, Nicolai, [pseud. for Nicholas Michels.] The godhood of man: his religious, political, and economic development, and the sources of social inequality. Chic., published by the author, Nicolai Mickalowitz, [Nicholas Michels,] 1899. c. 5-150 p. D. pap., 25 c. [981]

It was at the dusk of day in the year 9981 that two wanderers from Mars landed on earth. They were in search of the fabled "half-men," whose religion and government they had been sent to investigate. These "half-men" they find are the inhabitants of our planet, whom it takes them but a little time to discover are far behind themselves, intellectually and morally. On this thread of a plot are hung a succession of conversations on religion (the Roman Catholic church furnishing the text) and our many political phases. The whole work is a protest against existing conditions—the working classes being represented as the chief victims of church and state.

After two triumphant seasons in London, Camelia Paton returned to her country home in the old village of Clivebury. She came with the reputation of a wit and a beauty and also of a "spoiled child," old friends saying she inherited much of her father's graceful selfishness and heartlessness. The story is a study of her personality. She is an essentially modern girl, whose chief thought is her own happiness. How her eyes are opened to her own shortcomings is illustrated through her relations with a man friend, whom both she and her homely cousin love. By the author of "The dull Miss Archibald."

Townshend, R. B. Lone Pine: the story of a lost mine. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 8+400 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1006]

John Stephens, an American mining engineer, was living among the Pueblo Indians of Santiago, New Mexico, some time in the seventies. He was trying to locate a valuable silver mine that had not been worked for one hundred years. He was opposed in all his endeavors by the superstitions of the Indians and their inherited fear and hatred of their former Spanish oppressors. The story is one of fresh adventure in this line, and gives a life like picture of the Pueblos, their religion, customs, etc. Stephens' own love-story and a native idyll are rich in color and sentiment.

Veysey, Arthur H: The two white elephants. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham Co., 1899. c. 4-234 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1008]
The white elephants are an unsuccessful romance written by a would-be social reformer, and a philanthropic society started under the auspices of two impractical and wholly lovable old maids. The author first meets the theorizing philanthropists as a snow-shoveller. Many of the "ways that are dark" of book publishing are described in narrating the author's trials.

A worthy successor of Waliszewski's biographies of "Peter the Great" and "Catherine II." He traces the career of Marysienka from the time she left France (as a child of four) in the train of the Princess Marie of Gonzaga (who was married by proxy to Ladislas IV. of Poland in 1645, until the day of her death. Hers was a peculiarly troubled life. She was married as a girl to the Prince of Samosé, and then to John Sobieski, the intrepid fighter of Poland's hopeless battles. The Sobieskis form an interesting study of a family in decay in view of the marriage of her granddaughter Clementine to the Pretender, James Stuart.

Dr. Winslow dedicates his work to Prof. Cesare Lombroso. His aim in writing it has been to show that the increase of insanity, which has been of a progressive nature for many years, is real and not apparent. He believes that this increase is due to indulgence in alcohol. He compares the condition of the insane as it existed a century ago to what it is at the present time. He draws attention to the more common forms of mental disorder, and gives a large number of examples. All legal and medical considerations of the subject have been avoided, the work being also free from technicalities.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 1, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE HOPE OF THE RETAIL BOOK TRADE.

THE career of William W. Howe, briefly outlined in the obituary notes elsewhere in this issue, emphasizes the fact that the one hope of the retail trade in these days of the passing away of the middle-man rests in a well-trained, interested, and faithful personnel. From the beginning, Mr. Howe made himself indispensable to his employers by his capacity, energy, and personal popularity. Wherever he went he brought with him a following of buyers of good, standard works, such as first and last must pay the rent and the salaries of a bookstore. The same methods which had made him this following in one section of the country were put to the work in every new environment, and to the last his employers appreciated and rewarded his faithful services. In these days of fierce and oftentimes unfair competition profits have gradually narrowed down, and the retailer, forced to keep himself before the public in a store so situated that his rent is often out of proportion to all of his other expenses, frequently is tempted to adopt the short-sighted policy of saving money on the salaries of his clerks. Young men who have love for, and knowledge of, books go less and less into the book trade as a profession, because they see but little future for them when booksellers, especially in the larger cities and towns, are willing to put up with incompetent help.

The fault is undeniably on both sides. The employer trusts too much to the location and attractiveness of his store and to the chance customer, who, as a rule, only buys the newest novels, on which the competition is always at the fiercest and the profits at the lowest; the clerk, whose chief work is selling to these unreliable chance customers, does not put his mind on studying the better and more profitable portion of his stock and on forming connections to place it properly. It is, unfortunately, all of a piece with much of the present scheme of city life—rush, chance, superficiality, and imitation. As long as books are published there is room for good business methods to get them to the knowledge of the special readers interested in their subjects. The first requisite is for the man who sells them to know what is in them. The true reader and book-lover will often go a considerable distance from the great thoroughfares to get a book he has long been looking for. Rent spent for him is wasted. He must be sought, and he does not patronize department stores.

The great question of employer and employed can be solved in a bookstore as well as in a factory. The employer needs a good employee, and after he has had an experience with incompetent, self-seeking makeshifts is generally willing to pay for a good clerk, and knows him when he has had him twenty-four hours in his store. The clerk must get out of the way of feeling injured and giving less and less for the wages with which he is dissatisfied, if he wishes to succeed. The record of the good and well-rewarded work of a man like Mr. Howe should awaken many an eye-servant to his duties, responsibilities, and most encouraging opportunities.

SUIT OVER "A TROOPER GALAHAD."

JUSTICE SCOTT, in the New York Supreme Court, has granted an order returnable on April 4, on the application of F. Tennyson Neely, directing the J. B. Lippincott Company to show cause why it should not be restrained from continuing to advertise a novel entitled "A Trooper Galahad," as a new work by Brig.-Gen. Charles King, of the United States Army.

The plaintiff claims that he is the owner of the copyright of a book which was published in May 1898, and written by General King. He alleges that in January or February, 1898, the defendant published a novel entitled "A Trooper Galahad." General King is now, it is alleged, in the Philippine Islands, and is engaged in writing a new novel, which has been purchased and will be published by him, and that he has advertised this fact.

He complains that on March 18 last the defendant published in periodicals circulating among the book trade and the public an advertisement containing the words: "Just published, Brigadier-General King's New Novel, A Trooper Galahad. For Sale by all Booksellers. J. B. Lippincott Company." He alleges that the novel is the same as that published in the early part of 1898, and that it was not written by General King, but by Capt. Charles King, and was, at the time of the publication, advertised as by Captain King. Captain King was promoted to be brigadier-general after his arrival in the Philippines.

AMERICAN BIBLIOGRAPHERS.

We shall print from time to time, under the above heading, sketches of the men who during the present century devoted their lives to the service of American bibliography. The following, from the volume on "Book-trade Bibliography in the United States in the sixteenth century,"* by A. Growoll, is the first adequate sketch to be published of one to whom the book trade is indebted for its first trade catalogue:

ORVILLE A. ROORBACH.

The pioneer among American bibliographers was Orville A. Roorbach, born at Red Hook Landing, now Tivoli, on the Hudson, in the State of New York, January 20, 1803. His forefathers were Dutch farmers, who settled in this country in the eighteenth century, and were remarkable especially for their indomitable perseverance and intellectual ability. His boyhood was spent on his father's farm; he was sent to Albany to be educated, and in 1817 he came to New York. He was employed by Evert Duyckinck, then one of the leading booksellers of New York, whose bookstore was at No. 68 Water Street, in the rear of his dwelling at No. 9 Old Slip. He served his apprenticeship with Mr. Duyckinck, and when the latter retired in 1825, Roorbach became, in a measure, his successor by the purchase of a large portion of his stock. He was one of the first to encourage stereotyping in this country, his initial attempt in this direction being "Evenings at Home," and several of the works of Mrs. Holland.

Attracted by the rich field which the South then offered to the bookseller, Roorbach removed to Charleston, S. C., in 1830. There his genial disposition and courtly manners, combined with his knowledge of books, soon won him many friends and well-wishers, and for nearly twenty years his store, "At the Sign of the Red Bible," was a favorite resort for the literary people of what was in those days the richest commercial city in the South.

Soon after Roorbach began his career as a bookseller, he devoted himself to making a catalogue of all books in the American market of which he could obtain the titles. This material he began to digest and complete while in Charleston, though it was not until 1849, and after he had returned to New York, that he succeeded in publishing the first volume of his "Bibliotheca Americana—Catalogue of American Publications, including reprints and original works, from 1820 to 1848 inclusive," with the imprint, "New York: Orville A. Roorbach. For sale by G. P. Putnam." To form an idea of the industry of Roorbach, it need only be pointed out that this volume contains nearly 25,000 titles. When it is further borne in mind that the compiler was obliged to collect his data chiefly from the most uncertain sources—as he was for many years at considerable distance from the publishing centres—one can easily imagine how laborious the task must have been, and condone the more readily all the shortcomings of the work. Many as they may be, his untiring industry supplied a work of lasting usefulness.

In 1850 Mr. Putnam published the first "Supplement," which contained 2000 more titles than the original work, and a list of periodicals. In October, 1852, Roorbach published in one volume the original work of 1849 and the supplement of 1850, to which he added the titles of books issued during the intervening two years, making in all a record of 24,000 books. In May, 1855, his son, O. A. Roorbach, Jr., who had been, volens volens, pressed into the service for his father's hobby, published a "Supplement" including works published from October, 1852, to May, 1855, and also "a repetition of such books as have either changed prices or publishers during that period." In March, 1858, Wiley & Halstead, who were then Roorbach's backers, published "Addenda" to the "Bibliotheca Americana," covering the period from May, 1855, to March, 1858. In 1861, the year in which Roorbach died, his son published "Volume IV. of the Bibliotheca Americana," from March, 1858, to January, 1861. This last part has become exceedingly scarce, owing to the fact that most of the sheets were sent by mistake to the paper mill and were there destroyed before the error was discovered. As already noted, Roorbach's work bristles with surprising errors and no less surprising omissions, besides following, save in a few cases, the bad precedent of the "London Catalogue" in omitting the dates of publication. But it would, perhaps, have been too much to expect a first attempt to be more complete or perfect than Roorbach's. On almost every page the lack of knowledge of the subject is apparent, which accounts for many shortcomings of the work.

After Roorbach's return to New York, circa 1848–1849, he took charge of the wholesale department of Wiley & Putnam; when they dissolved partnership he joined fortunes with his old friend, George Palmer Putnam. In 1852 he went into business on his own account as a book jobber and publisher. His first stand was at 12 Vesey Street, but he shortly removed to 18 Ann Street. After his failure in 1857, the business was transferred to Edward P. Rudd, who, with his father, Rev. George R. Rudd, had been the "Company" of the firm of J. C. Derby & Company, at Auburn, New York. Rudd shortly after took into partnership George W. Carleton, who, up to that time, had been in the employ of Burnham, Plumb & Co., then the largest and most important book importing and commission house in New York City. The firm became Rudd & Carleton; after Mr. Rudd's death, in 1861, George W. Carleton; and since Mr. Carleton's retirement, George W. Dillingham, or, more recently still, G. W. Dillingham Co.

After his failure in business Roorbach began the publication of the Booksellers' Medium and Publishers' Advertiser, of which he issued three volumes from July, 1858, to April 15, 1861.

Roorbach, after 1857, was also employed at various times by Dix & Edwards, (with whom George William Curtis was associated,) publishers of the ill-fated Putnam's New Monthly Magazine; then by Wiley & Halstead, D. Appleton & Co., and Harper & Brothers.

While travelling for one of these firms he was stricken with paralysis on June 19, 1861, in Schenectady, N. Y. He was found unconscious on a doorstep; when taken to a police station it was found that he was dying, and on searching his clothing his identity was revealed. His family, living at that time in Yonkers, N. Y., was notified at once by telegraph, but he was dead before his wife and daughter could reach him. On the 25th of June, 1861, his body was buried in Greenwood Cemetery, in Brooklyn, N. Y.

His was the fate of all pioneers—scant recognition during his lifetime, and a perfunctory obituary notice (of nineteen lines) in the American Publishers' Circular and Literary Gazette on the 29th of June, 1861. With the fatuity of all inventors and reformers, Roorbach spared neither himself nor his family in bringing his work to conclusion. Everything was sacrificed, even his health; and in the end his pecuniary reward was a pittance. Yet, even so, he was satisfied; for he lived in the consciousness of having done a necessary work for his fellow-men to the best of his ability, and he died in the hope of the greater glory—the gratitude of the generations which followed after.

NEW YORK STATE HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION.

THE NEW YORK STATE HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION, which held its first meeting for the purposes of organization at Glens Falls, N. Y., March 21, is a corporation formed for the following objects: (1) To promote and encourage original historical research; (2) To disseminate a greater knowledge of the early history of the state by means of lectures and the publication and distribution of literature on historical subjects; (3) To gather books, manuscripts, pictures, and relics, relating to the early history of the state, and to establish a museum at Caldwell, Lake George, for their preservation; (4) To suitably mark places of historic interest; and (5) To acquire by purchase, gift, devise, or otherwise, the title to or custody and control of historic spots and places.

The territory in which the operations of this association are to be principally conducted includes Warren, Washington, Essex, Clinton, Saratoga, and Hamilton counties in the State of New York. The principal office of the association is to be at Caldwell, on Lake George, County of Warren, N. Y.

DUTCH COLONIAL RECORDS OF NEW YORK.

AN appropriation of $5000 is contained in the Supply bill, to enable Dr. Corwin to translate and publish the valuable Dutch records relating to the colonial history of New York State which he has gathered. This movement was begun a number of years ago by the General Synod of the Reformed Church, and is still carried forward by a special committee that has been appointed by the Synod, and which is composed of representative men who are interested in the early history of New York and our country.

About two years ago the committee selected the Rev. Dr. E. T. Corwin, an accomplished Dutch scholar, to visit Holland, the funds for the work having been voluntarily contributed. After fourteen months of diligent labor Dr. Corwin returned to the United States, bringing with him documents whose existence had never been divined, even by those who were experts in Dutch history.

"When the State of New York sent J. Romeyn Brodhead to Europe in 1841 for Dutch, French, and English records relating to the colonial history of the State, his first efforts," according to the New York Sun, "were very much discouraged by the discovery that 80,000 pounds weight 'of all the books, documents, and papers of every kind belonging to the West India Company, of a date anterior to the year 1700, had been publicly sold in the year 1821, by order of the Government.' In a public address Mr. Brodhead asserted that 'the mortifying conviction is now forced upon us that the valuable papers of the West India Company relating to New Netherland (and if what is heard of them at Amsterdam be true, they were very valuable), which, until the year 1821 were easily attainable by our State, are now irrevocably lost.'"

"The investigations of Dr. Corwin lead to a modification of the discouraging conviction that was forced upon Mr. Brodhead. It is known now that in 1851 a great portion of the records belonging to the Chamber of Zeeland, one of the boards of the West India Company, was discovered at Middlebury and sent to Amsterdam, where they are confided to the care of Mr. Van Dyck, an official of the Department of Colonies, specially charged with the examination and arrangement of these archives. In 1891 a number of these old West India papers were discovered among the papers belonging to the estate of Carson Brevoort of Brooklyn. It was these discoveries that prompted the General Synod of the Reformed Church to send their own agent to Holland. While many of the documents which Dr. Corwin has collected relate to the churches of the various denominations during the colonial period, they also reflect to a very large extent the social and political conditions of the time." The valuable material gathered by Dr. Corwin will be published as an appendix to the work begun under Mr. Brodhead and Dr. E. B. O'Callaghan and published as the "Documentary History of New York" and the "Colonial Documents Relating to the State of New York." Under the terms of the bill, the general direction of the work is entrusted to the State Historian.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A SUGGESTION TO THE CONTRIBUTORS TO THE TRADE LIST ANNUAL.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1899.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: Please allow me to make a suggestion or two to the publishers who contribute to the "Trade List Annual," aside from the fact that it is to the interest of EVERY publisher, large or small, to be represented in that publication. It will add greatly to the convenience of every one who consults the "Annual"—and their name is legion, remember—to have the name of the publishing house on at least every alternate page of his catalogue, say every right or every left hand page, so that one may know at once whose catalogue it is without referring to the title-page. Again, if the publications are given in series, it would be an accommodation to have a brief author and title index at the end, so that the one book wanted could be found in the least possible time.

MARTIN HENSEL,
Librarian Public School Library.

OBITUARY NOTES.

BIRKET FOSTER, the artist and illustrator, died in London, March 28. He was born at North Shields, Eng., February 4, 1825. At an early age he was placed with E. Lendell, the wood engraver, by whose advice he became a draughtsman. At the age of twenty-one years he started out on his own account as an illustrator, and soon obtained plentiful employment from the publishers of children's books. He also did a great deal of work for the London Illustrated News. He illustrated Longfellow, Goldsmith, and others, and furnished the pictures for a handsome volume on English scenery, for which Tom Taylor wrote the text.

COMTE ALEXANDRE DAMAZE DE CHAUDORDY, the French diplomatist and author, died in Paris March 26. He was born December 4, 1826. As a representative of the French Foreign Office he published a series of remarkable circulars in response to notes addressed to the Powers by the late Prince Bismarck refuting the accusations of the Chancellor respecting alleged violations by France of the Geneva convention. He protested at the same time against excesses committed in France by German troops. He published several works, among them "The Political Status of the French Nation," "France Following the War of 1870-71," and "France in 1880."

H. W. HAGEMANN, the well-known bookseller, died suddenly on March 18. He was born in Pomerania about fifty years ago, and came to this country when a young man. He was first employed in the retail department of D. Appleton & Co., and then went into business on his own account. Being unsuccessful, he took a position with Scribner, Armstrong & Co., with whom he remained until R. Worthington bought out the remainder of the retail stock of D. Appleton & Co., when Mr. Hagemann cast his lot with Mr. Worthington. Mr. Hagemann remained with the Worthington business until it was closed out, when he again started in business for himself in the Mohawk Building, 160 Fifth Avenue.

THE REV. DR. JAMES ORMSBEE MURRAY, Dean of Princeton University, died at Princeton, N. J., March 27. Dr. Murray was born at Camden, S. C., November 27, 1827. In 1874 he resigned his pastorate of the Brick Presbyterian Church in New York to become Holmes Professor of Belles Lettres and English Language and Literature at Princeton. His best-known works are "Life of Francis Wayland," "George Ide Chace: A Memorial," "Introduction, with Bibliography, to Cowper's Poetical Works," "William Gammell: A Bibliographical Sketch, with Selections from His Writings," and "Lectures on English Literature." He was also editor and compiler of the church hymnal, "The Sacrifice of Praise."

JOHN M'NALLY, one of the oldest booksellers in the West, died at his home in Chicago, Ill., March 13. He was born in County Meath, Ireland, April 4, 1815, and came to this country in 1837, making his home in New York City. In 1844 he went to Chicago, associating himself with J. B. Rice, proprietor of Rice's Theater. In 1848 he opened the first large bookstore in the city in the theater building. Besides his book business, M'Nally was treasurer of Rice's Theater, and booking agent for all the theaters in the city, which position he occupied until after the fire. He was burnt out in 1871, but soon reopened in one of the shanties that were built in Congress Street. He remained in the book business till 1876, when he retired. Since that time he had been employed in the Chicago post-office.

GOTTLIEB WILHELM LEITNER, a well-known Orientalist and linguist, died at Bonn, March 24. He was born in Pesth in 1830. He was for a time professor of Arabic language and literature at the Royal College, London; then he was rector of the College of Lahore. Returning to London after twenty years' absence, he founded near that city an Oriental Institute for the purpose of enlightening Europeans on the subject of the languages of the East. He also engaged in scientific research and accumulated a very valuable collection. Among other works he was the author of "The Theory and Practice of Education," "The Races of Turkey," "Results of a Voyage in Dardistan, Cashmere, and Little Thibet," "History of Dardistan, Its Poetry and Legends," "Græco-Buddhist Discoveries," and "National University of the Punjab."

WILLIAM W. HOWE, for thirty-five years identified with the retail book department of E. P. Dutton & Co., died at his home, 180 West 94th Street, New York, March 23, fifty-eight years of age. Mr. Howe was born in 1841 in New Bedford, Mass., where his father kept a bookstore. At an early age he was apprenticed to Taber Brothers, of New Bedford. At the first call of the President for volunteers Mr. Howe, then hardly of age, enlisted as private in Company E of the Third Massachusetts Infantry, and took part in the battles of Goldsboro, Kingston, and Whitehall. At the close of the war he entered the employ of Ticknor & Fields at the "Old Corner Book-Store" in Boston. He remained with them until E. P. Dutton & Co. succeeded to the business. When his new employers, in 1869, removed to New York he came with them. As a salesman Mr. Howe was very popular, numbering many friends among his customers. He was attentive and painstaking in filling the wants of a customer; if a book was out of print, or difficult to secure, he did not rest until he hunted it down, though the search might involve considerable personal inconvenience and expense. His acquaintance with books, his knowledge of authors and editions, and his familiarity with all things literary made him a most valuable man to his employers. To the last he was of a jovial disposition, sanguine and disposed to look upon the bright side of things. Being intensely patriotic, he was one of the delegation sent to Albany to protest against the inroads of the railroad companies on Amsterdam Avenue. On the evening of March 13 he attended a mass-meeting at Durland's Riding Academy, where he took the cold that proved fatal. He was a charter member of The Booksellers' League, signing the call for the first meeting at which the League was organized and at which he was elected to the Board of Managers, on which he served until his death.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

QUILLER-COUCH's new novel, "The Ship of Stars," which is to be published serially in Scribner's, is a tale of the Cornish coast. The first chapters will appear in the April number.

JOHN HOUSTON FINLEY, president of Knox College, at Galesburg, Ill., will become the editor of McClure's Magazine some time in the fall. Mr. Finley was born near Galesburg in 1860, and was elected to the presidency of Knox College when he was but twenty-eight years old. The institution under his direction grew stronger every year, and is now in an excellent financial condition, with a larger number of students than ever.

LADY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL's much-talked-of guinea quarterly, (to be published in this country by John Lane,) will be called The Anglo-Saxon, and will deal with public affairs, and literature, science, and art. The contributors include statesmen, savants, poets, novelists, and essayists of England and America, and of the colonies. Lord Rosebery will probably write an article for the first number, which is expected in June. Each issue will be permanently bound in the reproduction of some historic binding.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ARDMORE, I. T.—Boyd & Stowe, booksellers, have been succeeded by N. E. Fain.

BOSTON, MASS.—Fred S. Collins, bookseller, has gone into voluntary bankruptcy.

BOSTON, MASS.—We regret to hear that Copeland & Day, the publishers of high-class books, exquisitely made, are contemplating retiring from business.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Daniel A. Allen, dealer in school-books, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

CHICAGO, ILL.—A. C. McClurg & Co. have taken a fifteen-year lease of the new Ayer Building, Nos. 215 to 221 Wabash Avenue. The building is nine stories high, with a front wall of white glazed tile, and is very well adapted to the purposes of a bookstore and publishing house. The retail department of the McClurg establishment is to occupy the entire space on the first floor and probably a part of the second floor. The avenue frontage is eighty feet. The building is to be renamed the McClurg Building. The firm has been incorporated with capital stock of $600,000. Alexander C. McClurg, the president of the corporation, holds the controlling interest. Frederick B. Smith is the vice-president, and John Ryerson is the secretary.

DAYTON, O.—Cunningham & Sullivan, booksellers, have been succeeded by Sullivan & Eyer.

DULUTH, MINN.—Articles of incorporation have been filed here by the Albertson Book and Stationery Company. The incorporation is to run thirty years. Its capital is $10,000, and the incorporators are: D. L. Davis, of Pontiac, Mich.; A. T. Albertson, W. S. Albertson, and J. H. Norton. The officers of the company will be W. S. Albertson, president; D. L. Davis, vice-president; and A. T. Albertson, secretary and treasurer.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—J. D. Van Winkle & Co., booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

GALESBURG, ILL.—Carey & Wing, of the Carey Book Store, have been succeeded by T. L. Good.

LA JUNTA, COLO.—A. M. Palmer has established a book and stationery store here.

NEW YORK CITY.—William Helburn, publisher and importer of architectural and art industrial books, has removed to 10 East 16th Street.

NEW YORK CITY.—John Lane is on his way to New York. He has appointed Hunter Robinson, who has been for seventeen years connected with Sampson Low, Marston & Co., to take charge of his business here, and especially to push The Anglo-Saxon, Lady Randolph Churchill's guinea quarterly.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—W. C. Edwards, bookseller, has removed from 174 Alexander Street to 389 Monroe Avenue.

ROCKLAND, ME.—Spear, May & Stover, booksellers, have been succeeded by Spear & Stover.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The Dodge Stationery Company opened their new store, at 123 Grant Avenue, near Post Street, on March 21.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE MACMILLAN Co. will publish next month in their well-known Globe Library a complete edition of Tennyson's "Poetical Works" (exclusive of the dramas.)

It is now definitely announced that Mrs. Voynich's own dramatization of her novel, "The Gadfly," of which Henry Holt & Co. have recently issued the seventeenth impression, will be performed in this country next fall.

A. P. WATT, Mr. Kipling's literary agent, will arrive in New York on the 3d inst. from London. It would be interesting to know if his visit has anything to do with the swarm of editions of Kipling's works put upon the market since his illness, some of which, it is said, have transgressed the copyright law.

"If confession is good for the soul in proportion to its honesty, the benefit to Mr. Elbert Hubbard's," according to the Boston Literary World, "must be astonishingly great. He tells Book News that he wrote 'Little Journeys to the Homes of American Statesmen' because he was out of a job, and G. P. Putnam's Sons, thinking the book would sell, gave him $1.75 a day to do the work. The pleasant audacity of the statement is not uncharacteristic of its author."

JOSEPH J. LITTLE, the well-known printer, in his capacity as President of the Board of Education of the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, New York, has brought suit against Henry Holt and Charles Holt, of the firm of Henry Holt & Co., publishers of The Educational Review, and its editor, Prof. Nicholas Murray Butler, for libel. The article of which Mr. Little complains appeared in the February number of The Educational Review, and after the heading, "Tammany in the Saddle," it starts off by referring to Mr. Little as "that fine old educational mastodon," and continues to refer to him in terms that he says are libelous and liable to bring him into public contempt and ridicule.

"AMERICA and the Americans, from a French point of view," published anonymously by Charles Scribner's Sons in March, 1897, is now admitted to have been written by Price Collier, a well-known society man of New York City. This caustic but truthful picture of our social and political shortcomings has gone into many editions, and has been thoroughly enjoyed. Much light is now thrown upon its revelations in the knowledge that its author is an American, and not a Frenchman, as his readers were led to suppose. None but an American could have so accurately photographed the national character and national conditions. Mr. Collier is a man of wealth and culture, and of wide observation gained in extensive travel, and is still young in years. "America and the Americans" is his first and only venture thus far into authorship.

ALEX. GROSSET & CO., 11 East 16th Street, New York, call attention to their dainty editions of Kipling's "Recessional," "Vampire," "Betrothed," "Mandalay," "Fuzzy Wuzzy," "Tommy," "Gunga Din," "Danny Deever," "Belts," and "Oonts." Of the "Recessional" they have made a special Easter edition in purple and white, and the "Vampire" contains a facsimile of Burne-Jones's famous painting. The booklets are printed in two colors, on laid paper of good quality, and are attractively bound in Durham covers. They also have a neat edition of Fitzgerald's translation of Omar Khayyám's Rubáiyát, to retail at fifteen cents. They announce for early publication a fine illustrated edition of "The City of Dreadful Night," by the celebrated translator of the Rubáiyát, which was suppressed in India immediately upon publication, and was never circulated in this country.

THE Book Branch of the H. B. Claflin Co. have made arrangements to control the sale of good paper-covered editions of Barrie's "Little Minister," Stephens's "An Enemy to the King" and "The Continental Dragoon," Miss Evans's "Beulah," Robert Barr's "Tekla," Ingraham's "Prince of the House of David," and Hugo's "Misérables." They also have a cheap edition of several of Sienskiewicz's novels, and by special arrangement with the English publisher they can furnish the complete works of Shakespeare at 20 cents net. Their Majestic Series includes 500 titles of standard fiction, and their Victor Series 250 selected titles. In the announcement made elsewhere in this issue by this firm a bookseller should be able to pick out some books, that undoubtedly, with a limited edition of 50 or 100 thousand, will remain in stock but a short time. Under an arrangement with Charles Scribner's Sons, The Claflin Co. will also have the exclusive market for a 50-cent paper edition of "A Lady of Quality," by Frances Hodgson Burnett.

BENJ. H. SANBORN & CO., Boston, have in preparation in the Cambridge Literature Series: Addison's "Sir Roger de Coverley Papers," edited by Frederick L. Bliss, principal of Central High School, Detroit, Mich.; Burke's "Speech on Conciliation with America," edited by Anna A. Fisher, Professor of English Literature in the University of Denver; Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner," edited by John Phelps Fruit, Professor of English in the William Jewell College, Mo.; Goldsmith's

"Vicar of Wakefield," edited by Robert John Peters, Professor of English Literature in the Missouri Valley College; Longfellow's "Evangeline," edited by Agnes M. Lathe, late instructor in English in the Women's College of Baltimore; Lowell's "Vision of Sir Launfal," edited by Ellen A. Vinton; Macaulay's "Essay on Milton and Addison," edited by J. Griffith Ames, late Professor of English Literature in Kenyon College; Milton's "L'Allegro," "Il Penseroso," "Comus," and "Lycidas," edited by Edward S. Parsons; Pope's "Translation of the Iliad, Books I., VI., XXII., and XXIV.," edited by Philip J. Gentner; Shakespeare's "Macbeth," edited by James T. Akers; Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice," edited by John Goddard Hart, instructor in English in Harvard University; and Tennyson's "Princess," edited by Lewis W. Smith, Ph.D.

FOREIGN NOTES.

FRANKFORT MOORE's new novel is entitled "Well, After All."

GEORGE EGERTON's new book, "Cross Currents," will not be published until the fall.

ADAM & CHARLES BLACK will publish a supplement to the "Encyclopædiæ Britannica," bringing a number of articles up to date.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE, London, will publish Fiona Macleod's new volume of Celtic and other tales, entitled "The Dominion of Dreams."

METHUEN & CO., London, have in preparation an elaborate edition (in five or six volumes) of the works of Charles Lamb, edited by E. V. Lucas.

PIERRE LOTI's protest against his superannuation (as Lieut. Viaud) from the French navy has been successful, and he returns to active service. One result is that he will have to abandon for the present his projected journey through Persia and Afghanistan. The book upon which he is now working is an account of Easter Island in the Pacific.

ARMAND COLIN & CIE., Paris, have just added to their valuable Bibliothèque du Musée Social "Les Congrès Ouvriers en France," (1876-1897), by Leon de Seilhac, which gives a résumé of the proceedings of the various congresses of workingmen held in France during the past twenty years. The book is a very valuable addition to the libraries of those who are studying the socialistic movement in France under its various special names, and will enable students of political economy to figure on the chances of success of the many schemes the book so clearly outlines.

ARCHIBALD LAMPMAN's complete works will shortly be published in Canada. Duncan Campbell Scott, the well-known Canadian poet, and an intimate friend of Lampman's, is editing the poems. He is assisted by Dr. S. E. Dawson, Queen's Printer. The subscription edition will be in two volumes, and will include the two previously published collections, "Among the Millet" and "Lyrics of Earth," as well as "Alcyone," which is now in press, and other unpublished poems held by Lampman's literary executors. A portrait of the author, a biographical sketch, and a facsimile of one of the "Sonnets" will be interesting features of the proposed publication. The profits of the edition will be for the benefit of the widow and two young children of the poet, who are otherwise but slenderly provided for. An easy opportunity is thus offered the public of testifying in a tangible way their appreciation of the late Mr. Lamppman's inestimable services in the cause of letters in Canada. W. D. Le Sueur, of Ottawa, will receive subscriptions for the poems, the price of which has been put at $2.25.

THE most striking feature in the bookselling world in England at the present moment, according to Literature, "is not the discovery of a new poet, not the appearance of a novel for which the world has been waiting twenty years, or of the sensational record of travel real or fictitious, but the unprecedented sale of a religious tract written by the pastor of a church at Topeka, Kansas. There are one or two very curious things about the publication and the success of 'In His Steps, or, what would Jesus do?' One is its extraordinary origin, which supplies rather an alarming precedent. Instead of completing it and then publishing it in the ordinary way, Mr. Sheldon, the writer, tried it on his congregation first, and read it out to them on successive Sunday evenings—presumably in the place of a sermon. Another fact which will, we fancy, have some bearing on the vexed question of international copyright is that the book, having been published and circulated somewhat in America, has been caught up in England, and sold out to the public in an immense number of editions—seventeen, we believe, of which eleven appeared in one week—religious and secular publishers competing keenly with each other in the enterprise."

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

THE Smithsonian Institution has published the first Supplement to Henry Carrington Bolton's "Select Bibliography of Chemistry, 1492-1897." The original work was published in 1893; this Supplement includes works omitted in that volume and brings the literature of chemistry down to the close of the year 1897. The Supplement does not embrace academic dissertations, a catalogue of which is nearly ready for the press. (Smithsonian Miscellaneous Collections, No. 1170. ix+489 p. 8°.)

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

[In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.]

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

LETTERS FROM JAPAN:

A Record of Modern Life in the Island Empire

Superbly
Illustrated

By Mrs. HUGH FRASER, author of "Palladia," "The Looms of Time,"
"A Chapter of Accidents," etc.

Two Volumes
Cloth, $7.50

Clever letters to her home people from the wife of a British Minister during a three years' residence in the empire. Exceptional opportunities have been ably used, and a remarkable collection of original photographs gives the illustration also that quaint charm peculiar to Japan.

"The letters are not too serious, and never flippant; they faithfully reflect in graphic and colorful phrases each passing phase of life as it stamped itself on a receptive mind. . . . Really charming pen-pictures of the country are diversified by delightful character sketches."—Evening Transcript, Boston.

THE BOOKMAN ADVERTISER

A Series of Brief Memoirs by Eminent Americans

The Beacon Biographies

M. A. DEWOLFE HOWE, EDITOR

MESSRS. SMALL, MAYNARD AND COMPANY beg to announce that they will publish on April 15 the first five volumes of THE BEACON BIOGRAPHIES, as follows:—

PHILLIPS BROOKS, by the Editor

DAVID G. FARRAGUT, by JAMES BARNES

ROBERT E. LEE, by W. P. TRENT

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, by EDWARD EVERETT HALE, Jr.

DANIEL WEBSTER, by NORMAN HAPGOOD

They are also able to announce the following volumes as in preparation:—

JOHN JAMES AUDUBON, by JOHN BURROUGHS

EDWIN BOOTH, by CHARLES TOWNSEND COPELAND

AARON BURR, by HENRY CHILDS MERWIN

JAMES FENIMORE COOPER, by W. B. SHUBRICK CLYMER

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, by LINDSAY SWIFT

The reasons which have persuaded the Editor and the Publishers to believe that The Beacon Biographies make their appeal to a fairly general public are these:—

The Beacon Biographies, it is thought, are the most beautiful small books ever issued in this country. The cover (in blind and gold on blue cloth) is by MR. BERTRAM GROSVENOR GOODHUE, who has done also the standing title-page for the series, which has been engraved on copper. The size is 24mo ($3\frac{3}{4}$ by $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches), with an average of 140 pages to the volume. The frontispiece portrait which accompanies each is in photogravure. The paper has been selected with great care, and the type used is a new face specially cut.

The subjects of the various Biographies as they appear are to be men of the most various significance in American life, so that the series as completed will give biographically the history of American life and character in all its important phases.

The normal extent of a Beacon Biography is around 20,000 words. Sixty or seventy years ago books of American biography thus briefly expressed could be obtained generally throughout the country, but they have since been crowded out by the longer Memoirs and formal lives. From these, now, and from the wealth of related material which has been accumulated in the research of a generation, it is proposed to condense once more the brief statement of essential facts which alone can appeal to the busy American interested in his country's history.

The writers who have consented to contribute to the Series are uniformly men who have the point of view of the present generation. With full critical and historical knowledge of the subjects of which they treat, they have not thought it necessary to produce dull books, or books without the proper popular appeal. Those who care for biography will find in The Beacon Biographies, it is hoped, the solution of a real want—books at once entertaining, brief, and authentic. Each volume, moreover, is to include a bibliography for further reading, and a strict and full list of important dates in chronological order.

NOTES IN SEASON.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited, have just ready "Dewey and Other Great Commanders," containing biographies of fifteen celebrated naval commanders, with portraits.

D. APPLETON & Co. publish this week "The Mormon Prophet," by Lily Dougall, a remarkable historical novel which depicts the actual beginnings of Mormonism, the character of the first revelations and of those who accepted them, and the extraordinary experiences and persecutions of the early members of the sect; "Pharos the Egyptian," a romance, by Guy Boothby, a new volume in the Town and Country Library; and in the History for Young Readers series a history of Spain, by Frederick A. Ober.

THE CENTURY COMPANY have just ready an American edition of "No. 5 John Street," by Richard Whiteing, a romance of the "other half" in London, with side-lights on the life of the "Upper Ten." The book has met with great success in England, the first large edition having been exhausted immediately upon publication. They call attention to the fact that 106,000 copies have already been published of Kipling's "Jungle Books," and that the demand for his "Captains Courageous" is unabated.

THE DOUBLEDAY & MCCLURE Co. will publish immediately, under the title of "From Sea to Sea," an authorized edition of the collected letters of travel which Rudyard Kipling has written at different times between 1889 and 1898. The book will include hitherto unpublished matter as well as an accurate text of the "American Notes" with "Letters of Marque," "City of Dreadful Night," etc. They have been obliged to postpone the publication of Miss Wilkins's new book, "The Jamesons," in order to insert some fine pictures in colors. The book is now scheduled to appear either April 29 or in the first week in May.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish to-day "The Stolen Story, and other newspaper stories," by Jesse Lynch Williams, author of the very successful "Princeton Stories," which give true pictures of human nature under unusual conditions; "In the Klondyke," by Frederick Palmer, with illustrations from photographs; and "A Literary History of Ireland," by Dr. Douglas Hyde, forming the second volume in the Library of Literary History, inaugurated with Frazer's "Literary History of India." New and cheaper editions are also ready of Dr. William Reed Huntington's (Rector of Grace Church, New York City) "The Church Idea," "The National Church," and "The Peace of the Church."

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready "Fragments of an Autobiography," by Felix Stone Moscheles, a handsome volume, as it is also a most interesting one, full of intimate personal recollections of such men as the author's famous father, Ignaz Moscheles, the teacher of Mendelssohn, and of Joachim Mazzini, Dupont, Rossini, Rossetti, and many others who have made their mark in art and literature. All through these stories of life-long friends are woven pictures of human life as the artist-author saw it in England, on the Continent, especially in Paris, in New York, and in Chicago. They have also just ready "The Span o' Life, a tale of Louisbourg and Quebec," by William McLennan and J. N. McIlwraith, with illustrations by F. de Myrbach.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have just ready "Pastor Naudie's Young Wife," by Edouard Rod, a study of French Protestantism of the present day, of which the scenes are laid in Montauban and La Rochelle, the two great Huguenot strongholds in the past. The book is full of tolerance, and it is said to puzzle both Catholics and Protestants by its arguments and explanations, which would seem of equal force in protecting or disparaging the methods of both religions. The translation is well done by Bradley Gilman, who also furnishes a biographical sketch of the author. "Each Life Unfulfilled," by Anna Chapin Ray, the author of "Teddy, Her Book," is an American novel of which the chief characters are a young author and a girl studying for a musical career.

The death of Kissie Gordon's father, who was a clergyman, deprives Kissie and her mother of almost their only means of support, and forces them to accept the hospitality of Mrs. Gordon's sister, Mrs. Merchant. Mrs. Merchant is a worldly woman, enjoying life in the conventional way, and encouraging her children to do likewise. Kissie for a time is drawn into the whirl, but the strong views of her father and mother against dancing, cards, extravagance in dress, etc., that had been early instilled into her, come again to the front and a conflict ensues. This is the motive of the story and the reason of Kissie's sacrifice.

Author is assistant constructor, English Royal Navy. This book was prepared by him in order to provide students and draughtsmen engaged in shipbuilders' and naval architects' drawing offices, with a text-book which should explain the calculations which continually have to be performed. It is intended, also, that the work, and more especially its later portions, shall serve as a text-book for the theoretical portion to the examinations of the science and art department in naval architecture. This refers to English offices and schools.

With the assistance of Mr. Hichens Mr. Barrett has put into novel form the drama in which, in England, he played the leading part. It has its scene chiefly in Babylon, during the time of the Jewish captivity—Israel's attempts to break her bonds being a strong element of the story. At the end the scene changes to the tents of Zoar, an illustration being given of Israel's cruel adherence to the letter of the law. Love, hate, and revenge are the motives of this dramatic story. There are graphic character sketches and fine descriptions of Babylonian life and gorgeousness.

The incidents are the outcome of forcing two boys—one a German, the other having an English father, but a German aunt, in whose house he has been educated—to serve in the French army in Napoleon's time. They desert, and are aided in their escape by a girl cousin and their aunt. In making their way to the Prussian army they have many adventures, being finally with Blücher at Waterloo. The historical portions of the story are in accordance with facts.

The book claims to give a clear scriptural and common-sense explanation of the origin of sin. As a sequence to this it aims to show that the theory of evolution, in its attempt to account for the sinfulness of mankind and the commonly accepted doctrine of hereditary depravity, both fail to give a satisfactory explanation of the problem considered. He believes man a free moral agent, and the doctrine of endless punishment a necessity. The book is aimed mainly at the doctrine of universalism.

Dougall, Lily. The Mormon prophet. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. 8+427 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1056]

A historical novel devoted to the beginnings of Mormonism and to a description of the peculiar temperament of Joseph Smith, the "prophet" and founder of the sect. The author has studied his character in the light given by modern psychological research, and the results will probably be accepted as a true interpretation of an extraordinary character. The story shows what Mormonism was at the outset, and traces the changes which showed themselves clearly at Nauvoo City, where polygamy, which was nowhere present in the original creed of the sect, is said to have had its origin.

Doumic, René. Contemporary French novelists; authorized tr. by Mary D. Frost. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1899.] c. 8+402 p. por. O. cl., $2. [1057]

The authors whom M. Doumic selected as representative not only of modern French fiction, but also of his own best work in criticism, are: Octave Feuillet; the Goncourt Brothers; Emile Zola; Alphonse Daudet; Paul Bourget; Guy de Maupassant; Pierre Loti; Edouard Rod; J. H. Roany; Paul Hervieu; J. K. Huysmans; René Bazin.

Doyle, Arthur Conan. A duet, with an occasional chorus. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 4+386 p. il. D. buckram, $1.50. [1058]

The story of one year in the married life of a middle class young Englishman and a middle-class English girl. These two people, with their little every-day affairs, afford material for a very amusing narrative. The book begins with their wedding, and ends with the birth of a son. Their evenings are often spent in reading and their days in sight-seeing. Pleasant talks and descriptions are thus introduced of Westminster Abbey, Mr. Samuel Pepys, Carlyle's London home at No. 6 Cheyne Row, etc. There is an amusing chapter on the establishment of a Browning Society.

Doyle, C. W., M.D. The taming of the jungle. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1899. c. 200 p. nar. S. cl., $1. [1059]

A strong story of India, of the simple, primitive folk of the Terai—the great tract of jungle that skirts the foot-hills of the Himalayas, in the Province of Kumaon. The author, Dr. Doyle, was born in 1852, at Landour, a little hill station in the Himalayas. His father was killed in action in the Sepoy war of 1857-58, while leading a regiment of native cavalry which he had been commissioned to raise by the government of India. Dr. Doyle lived in India for a number of years; proceeding later to England, he studied medicine and graduated with honors. For several years he has practiced in America.

Gifford, Mrs. Augusta Hale. Germany, her people and their story: a popular history of the beginnings, rise, development, and progress of the German empire from Arminius to William II.; told for Americans. Bost., Lothrop Pub. Co., [1899.] c. 8+604 p. il. D. cl., $1.75. [1064]

Mrs. Gifford has prepared herself for this book by the experiences of a long residence abroad and by a faithful study of all phases of German life and history from the earliest times to the present day. It is the first popular story of Germany especially prepared for American readers and studied from an American standpoint. While the narrative is generally condensed, such as that of the Reformation, the Thirty Years' War, Frederick the Great's martial career, the time of Prussia's oppression ending in the war of liberation, and the Franco-Prussian War with its galaxy of illustrious characters, have been treated with satisfactory fulness.

Grandin, Egbert H., M.D., and Jarman, G: W., M.D. A text-book on practical obstetrics. 2d ed. rev. and enl. Phil., The F. A. Davis Co., 1898. c. 14+461 p. il. O. cl., net, $4; shp., net, $4.75. [1065]

This revision, carefully made by Dr. Grandin, necessarily pertains chiefly to obstetric surgery and the puerperal state, since it is in these departments that progress has occurred. Such new plates and illustrations have been added as has seemed wise in order to carry out the aim of the work, that of teaching graphically, thus enabling the practitioner at a distance from the medical centres to acquire his knowledge clinically.

In the letters Herbart is seen in his workshop, engaged as tutor to three boys of different ages and capacity. It is interesting to see how the problems of education gradually force themselves upon him, and how the germs of his later theories were formed in this period. The lectures are on: The basis of education, Outlines of the general science of education, and On special branches of education. List of the German editions of Herbart's works (1 p.).

- A romance of the French and Indian war. The story opens in England after the battle of Culloden and the fall of the young Pretender. The hero is a soldier in the Scottish army, and is forced to flee to France, as the Pretender's cause is hopeless. He is offered a commission in the French army, and is transferred to Louisbourg, in Canada, on garrison duty. He is in love with his cousin, who comes to the new world to seek him at the outbreak of the French and Indian war. The story of her wanderings and the story of the dramatic capture of Quebec is told in a most picturesque way. Mr. McLennan is the author of "Spanish John."

Moscheles, Felix Stone. Fragments of an autobiography. N. Y., Harper, 1899. 8+ 864 p. por. O. cl., $2.50. [1106]

The author's special gift as a writer of reminiscences was shown in his "In Bohemia with Du Maurier." The godson of Felix Mendelssohn associated all his life with artists of all kinds—musicians, painters, authors, actors. The celebrated portrait painter tells of his student life in Paris, of his love affairs, of sketching tours with Claude Raoul Dupont, ocean travel with Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, life in New York and Chicago, and meetings with Mazzini, Rosini, and Robert Browning. The volume is illustrated with portraits of the author's mother, of Mazzini, and Browning, reproduced from the author's paintings.

Two rivals for the hand of a fair German beauty, who looked with equal favor upon both, agree to decide which one of them shall quit the field by fighting a duel—not with swords or pistols, but with a game of chess. The story deals with the circumstances which lead up to this arrangement, the complications in which it becomes involved, and the startling dénouement with which the contest ends.

Ray, Anna Chapin. Each life unfulfilled. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. c. 2+257 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1120]

A novel of to-day dealing with American life. The principal characters are a young girl studying for a musical career and a young author. Having become acquainted at a western lake, the two meet again two years later in New York. In the course of the story a vivid picture is given of the début of the singer.

Robertson, A. Fraser. Maidens three. Bost., A. I. Bradley & Co., 1899. 3-255 p. il. D. cl., $1.25. [1123]

A story for girls. It deals with the lives of three English girls after leaving a finishing school. The story is told by one of them, who naturally gives her own affairs the first place. She is a doctor's daughter who has lost her mother. She comes home full of confidence in her ability to manage her father's house and her younger brothers and sisters. Her experience is full of value to young people. [1124]

Rod, E.: Pastor Naudie's young wife; from the French by Bradley Gilman. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. c. 16+356 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1124]

In this novel the author has made a study of French Protestantism; its scene is laid in La Rochelle and Montauban, the two Huguenot strongholds. It was first published in 1898 in the Revue des deux mondes and attracted immediate attention. Its French title was Le ménage du Pasteur Naudie. Bradley Gilman, in his introduction to the volume, writes of it as follows: "It is a study of life in the historic town of La Rochelle, and is wholesome in its moral atmosphere, even reminding some critics of Mrs. Humphry Ward's novels. The author throws a shaft of light down into that obscure old Protestant bourgeois community, as it is sometimes thrown down through the water upon a seabed; and every living creature within the circle of illumination stands as clearly defined as do the figures in one of Meissonier's pictures." Sergeenko, P. A. How Count L. N. Tolstoy lives and works; from the Russian by Isabel F. Hapgood. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1899.] c. 2+100 p. por. il. facsimile, O. cl., $1.25. [1134]

The Russian authorities forbid any demonstration on the occasion of Count Tolstoy's seventieth anniversary last September. The only public notice of the event was the appearance of these desultory descriptions of Tolstoy's daily life. The writer first met the great Russian author in 1892, but during the last few years has come into very intimate relations with him. The translator has also visited the Tolstoys. Many items of interest are told about the vegetarian life led by Tolstoy and his eldest daughter, and the more conventional life of Countess Tolstoy and her other children. [1135]

- Whitelock, L. Clarkson. How Hindsight met Provincialitis. Bost., Copeland & Day, 1898. c. 5+294 p. S. cl., $1.25. [1160]
- Hindsight stands for a typical remote New England spot; Provincialitis for a southern country-side that the war devastated without changing the sunny, easy-going nature of its well-born inhabitants. In stories which may be read separately, but which in many instances introduce the same characters, the contrasts of northern and southern natures are shown. The burden of all seems to be that Hindsight could not, and Provincialitis would not, thirty years ago.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 8, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament therunto."—LORD BACON.

THE NET SYSTEM IN ENGLAND.

At the third annual meeting of The Publishers' Association of Great Britain, held towards the close of last month, the president, John Murray, made some remarks based upon the annual report that would seem as practicable for the American as for the English book trade. In the first place, he brought out the excellent work the Association is doing in a manner to make all who have the interests of their trade at heart turn their thoughts earnestly once more to a practical plan for bringing together the publishers of the United States to consider trade reform, and to adjust prices and discounts that will neutralize unfair competition and stimulate the growth of the book trade; and that should stimulate the booksellers of this country to organize associations which may deal intelligently and authoritatively with individual members who break pledges, and to use their influence to educate members to understand that the best good of the whole trade is in the end the best good of each individual member of it. Mr. Murray specially dwells upon the importance of the fact that The Publishers' Association of Great Britain, in considering reform measures, is "dealing now not with individual booksellers, but with organized associations on both sides, which very much strengthens the position."

Three questions stood out during the year in the council meetings of the English association, from which there were rarely any members absent, and never more than one or two: the question of trade terms, the question of copyright, and the question of the draft agreement. The copyright and the draft agreement questions, naturally, are much influenced by conditions peculiar to England, her laws and her Colonial interests, and therefore may be considered in a measure rather of local than general interest; but the question of trade terms, as we have already pointed out, would seem as practical for the American as for the English trade, and we therefore print in full, elsewhere in this issue, the scheme which has been circulated among members of the Association, and that now promises to lead to a settlement which will temporarily give satisfaction, for finality in such matters is impossible.

The English booksellers gave a cordial and very remarkable reception to the proposals of the publishers. The scheme seems to have met with unanimous support. The publishers have made it clear to the booksellers that they did not enter on this step through any wish of their own. Publishers might be content to let things go on as they were. But the booksellers requested the action, and their interests were considered in all discussions. The scheme keeps in view the strict rule that, with a few exceptions scarcely worth mentioning, books shall be net books throughout the United Kingdom. The booksellers desire that the rule may be adopted before July 1, so that it may get in working order before the busy season. Some of the leading booksellers of London, and the libraries, which have great and growing power, are still opposed to the scheme. These say: "Net books or no net books, we must have our very large reduction or else we shall not take your books." It is human nature that when a number of people maintain rates there is a temptation to others to go below them. Whether this propensity can be successfully curbed in enough members of the trade to encourage the publishers to extend protective measures only time can teach.

KIPLING GETS AN INJUNCTION.

RUDYARD KIPPLING and his publishers, S. S. McClure & Co., of New York, filed a bill in the United States Circuit Court at Chicago, on the 5th inst., for an injunction against the alleged infringement of his rights to "The White Man's Burden," by Frank B. Whipple & Co., publishers, at 48 Dearborn Street. A temporary injunction was granted on recommendation of Master in Chancery and the hearing was set for April 10. The defendant is known as the Progressive Publishing Company, and the infringement is said to have been committed in a volume entitled "Explanation, Parody, and Criticism of Rudyard Kipling's celebrated poem, 'The White Man's Burden.'" In this parodies and criticisms which have appeared at times in the newspapers are printed in the book. The restraining order issued will remain in effect until the hearing of the case, April 10.

THE ENGLISH PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE third annual meeting of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain was held at Stationers' Hall, London, March 23. There were present the principals or representatives of nearly forty of the leading firms, and President John Murray was in the chair. The president, in presenting the report of the Council for 1898-99, reviewed with satisfaction the work of the association since it was organized three years ago, and complimented its members upon their loyalty to it. Referring to the question of trade terms, which has been before the Association from the beginning—that led, in fact, to its organization—Mr. Murray said he thought “that very difficult and very important question is now happily reaching a stage, I won't say of finality, because there is no finality in such matters, but to the stage of a satisfactory settlement. The reception which was accorded to our proposals by the booksellers on two occasions when we met them here in conference was very cordial and very remarkable. Throughout the trade we may practically say that the scheme has met with unanimous support, and I have had some very gratifying letters from various parts of the country in regard to it. We have also the important fact that we are dealing now not with individual booksellers, but with organized associations on both sides, which very much strengthens the position. I wish to explain to you that we made it very clear to the booksellers that we did not enter on this step through any wish of our own. We should be content to let matters go on as they are. It is in their interest and at their request that we have entered on this discussion, and I hope they appreciate this, and I believe they do appreciate the fact. Now the scheme is, I think, as simple a one as could be arranged. The draft agreements which are alluded to in the report have been handed in since that report was presented, and they do not differ, in any notable respect, from the drafts which we printed in our scheme. They have been submitted to eminent counsel, and he passed them as sound in law and practice. Well, now we come to a very important point. If we launch on a scheme for the extension of net prices we know both among publishers and booksellers there will be opponents to this scheme, and the reason we come before you with a strong recommendation for this extension is that we are acting together, and the only possible power which can bring this scheme to success is loyalty to one another. Unless we can keep it a strict rule that books shall be net books throughout the kingdom without exception, or with such few exceptions as not to be worth mentioning, this scheme, and all schemes, must fail, and therefore I hope each one of us will enter into it with that idea. I am going to ask presently that this scheme may be adopted, and that it may be remitted to the Council to work out certain details before it is finally put into practice. The booksellers desire the scheme to come into practice on July 1, so that they can get it into working order before the busy season comes on. There are opponents to the scheme amongst some of the leading booksellers of London. We have asked them to come to the conference, and they have declined. Now, obviously that is a matter which calls for serious consideration, and I hope, in loyalty to one another, when we have thrashed the matter out as to what shall be allowed, that we shall see that the libraries do not get unreasonable terms, and that we shall stand up loyally and stick to the system.”

After referring to the work of the Association on behalf of the Copyright Bill, the Paris Exhibition, and the International Congress of Publishers, the report was offered for a vote.

REPORT OF THE COUNCIL FOR 1898-9.

The work which has come before the Council during the past year has diminished neither in quantity nor importance as compared with previous years; twelve meetings of the Council have been held, in addition to many meetings of the Trade Terms Committee and the International Congress Committee, and two conferences have been held with representatives of the Booksellers' Associations.

Committee on Trade Terms.—We have much pleasure in announcing that at length a scheme has been formulated which has met with a most favorable reception from the representatives of the various Booksellers' Associations throughout the kingdom, and affords reasonable hope that a satisfactory solution of a long-standing difficulty may now be in sight. The scheme, which has been circulated among members of the Publishers' Association is as follows:—

Scheme.

It is recommended :

1. That a more general trial of the net system is advisable, especially in the case of books above 6s.; and that (a) New books should be issued as far as possible at net prices; (b) Existing books should, where it is practicable, be converted into net books, by taking off one-sixth of the present price.
(In the case of books thus converted to net prices royalties to authors would, of course, remain as now: e.g., if 2d. in the shilling is paid on a 12s. book, the royalty would remain at 2s., though the published price is reduced to 10s.)
2. That in the case of net books the same trade terms as are now offered should be given to those booksellers only who agree to sell them at full price, and to those wholesalers who agree to enforce similar conditions with their customers; and to others net books should only be supplied at the full published price.
3. That a form of agreement between publishers and booksellers who assent to these proposals be drawn up, along with a list of the publishers thus assenting, and that this form be circulated by the Publishers' Association among the booksellers for signature by them.
4. That booksellers refusing to accept this agreement shall be treated alike by all the assenting firms of publishers.
5. That the foregoing recommendations shall not apply to bona fide remainders or to dead stock.
6. It is understood that the Publishers' Association cannot undertake the responsibility of detecting instances of underselling. This scheme is drawn up in the interest of the booksellers, as urged by the majority of them and their representatives, and it is clearly understood that the onus probandi in case of default rests with the various Booksellers' Associations.

A draft of the form of agreement referred to in Clause 3 has been submitted to counsel. The opponents of this proposal are exclusively, or almost exclusively, confined to a few prominent members of the trade in London.

This scheme will be communicated to the Authors' Society, but inasmuch as it is presumed that no book will be made net without the express permission of the owner of the copyright, no formal approval by that Society is requisite.

Publication Agreements.—At the general meeting last year it was reported that draft forms of agreement between publishers and authors had been drawn up after long and careful consideration, and had been submitted to counsel, whose opinion was duly laid before our members.

These drafts were completed and circulated among our members last April. A copy was also officially sent as a matter of courtesy to the Authors' Society, in accordance with the intention expressed by Mr. Longman in his presidential address in 1896. Our members are all aware that the drafts were never intended for use in the exact form in which they stand, but were regarded as a collection of clauses adaptable to different cases, drawn up in an approved legal form. It had always been the hope of your Council that, if the authorities of the Authors' Society found anything objectionable in these drafts, they would ask for an explanation, and would probably propose a conference between representatives of the two societies to discuss, and if necessary to modify, the forms of agreement. The Society, however, took another view of the case, and have, we believe, issued a very severe criticism of the drafts. No copy of this criticism has been communicated to your Council.

Copyright Bill.—The Amending and Consolidated Bill drafted by a Joint Committee under the auspices of the Copyright Association was presented in the House of Lords, in February, 1898. Having been read a first time, it was referred, along with the Amending Bill promoted by the Authors' Society, to a Select Committee, which held eleven meetings during last session, and took a large amount of evidence. It is believed that the Select Committee are engaged on preparing an amended draft embodying the results of this evidence, and that in due course this Bill will be reintroduced with reasonable prospects of becoming law.

The following officers were elected: President, John Murray; Vice-President, C. J. Longman; Honorary Treasurer, Frederick Macmillan; Council (from the following firms), George Bell & Sons, A. & C. Black, William Blackwood & Sons, Cassell & Co., Ltd., William Heinemann, A. D. Innes & Co., Ltd., Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Ltd., Smith, Elder & Co., T. Fisher Unwin; Two Auditors, M. H. Hodder and Harold E. Warne.

FOR EQUAL COPYRIGHT.

THE London morning papers on the 6th inst. commented with sympathy and approval upon a long letter which Alfred Austin, the poet laureate, addressed to Col. John Hay, Secretary of State, from Florence, Italy, on March 25, appealing, on the ground of the unity of the English-speaking peoples, for equal copyright in all English-speaking countries for all books written in English.

The Standard, in an editorial note, urges that copyright between Great Britain and the United States should be absolutely reciprocal, and suggests that the moment is propitious for an international convention with the United States.

The Times, commenting upon the "ingenious and genial manner in which Mr. Austin introduces the question by pointing to the demonstration occasioned by Mr. Kipling's illness as a proof of the literary sympathy between the two countries," says: "It will be interesting to hear Mr. Hay's reply, for he is a man of letters with an audience on both sides of the Atlantic. We rather suspect that an attempt to disturb the existing arrangement might only disturb a hornet's nest. Perhaps Mr. Hay's reply will throw light on this important point."

Mr. Austin advocates the repeal of the copyright law, the recent modifications of which, he says, are wholly inadequate if they are judged by the canons of literary equity. He urges that every vestige of discrimination between American and English writers ought to be abolished on each side of the Atlantic. This should not be effected by negotiation or bargaining, but should be the free gift of a great and magnanimous people. He adds: "Let vested interests be by all means considered, but the prosperous, open-handed people who have just voted $20,000,000 for the liberation of an enslaved race would surely have no difficulty in finding as many thousands for the purpose of performing an act of justice to the friendliest and worst remunerated of all their working kindred."

THE INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF PUBLISHERS.

SUPPLEMENTING our semi-official report of the rules and regulations drawn up for the organizing committee of the International Congress of Publishers we give below the official document as published by the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, through its secretary:

(1) The Third Meeting of the International Congress of Publishers will take place on the 7th, 8th, and 9th June, 1899.

(2) The arrangements for the Congress are in the hands of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland.

(3) Delegates from all the National Publishers' Associations, representing publishers of books and periodicals (reviews, magazines, and illustrated papers), are eligible as members of the Congress.

(4) This Third International Congress will last three or four days, with two meetings on each day, and shall be held at the Stationers' Hall, London.

(5) The programme of the meetings will be published in due course by the Committee of Organization.

(6) At this Third Congress all subjects which bear directly or indirectly on the profession of publishing, together with certain questions concerning the value of artistic and literary property shall be open to discussion.

(7) A list of such subjects as shall be selected for discussion will in due course be sent to all delegates and other members of this Third Congress.

(8) Any members of this Congress who desire to read papers or to submit subjects for discussion shall give notice of such intention to the Committee of Organization. The Committee will then decide which of these questions shall appear on the programme of discussions, and will communicate with those delegates who desire to present written reports thereon.

(9) Such reports, written in English, shall be sent to the President of the Organizing Committee not later than the 1st day of May, 1899.

(10) Papers may be submitted in any language to the President of the Committee of Organization, but any such papers which are not in English must be accompanied by an English translation. They will be printed in English, but the Committee reserve to themselves the right of also printing them in any other language if requested by the author to do so.

(11) The expenses of this Congress shall be borne by the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland.

(12) The Officers of the Congress shall consist of:—

An English President (Mr. John Murray);
Vice-Presidents chosen from the national delegates, among whom shall be the President of the preceding Congress, ex-officio.

An English General Secretary (Mr. E. G. Fairholme).

Secretaries of the various national departments.

(13) The President and Secretary of the Congress shall be elected before the meeting takes place, in order that they may make all the necessary arrangements beforehand.

(14) The subscription of £1 (25 francs or 20 marks) should be forwarded to the Secretary, together with the acceptance form.

(15) The Congress shall, before the close of their Session, decide the date and place of Meeting of the Fourth Congress.

All communications should be addressed to E. G. Fairholme, Secretary of the International Congress of Publishers, Stationers' Hall, London, E.C., England.

KIPLING'S LETTER OF THANKS.

RUDYARD KIPLING on the 2d inst. wrote the following note of thanks to the press:

HOTEL GRENOBLE, Easter Day, 1899.

DEAR SIR: Will you allow me through your columns to attempt some acknowledgment of the wonderful sympathy, affection, and kindness shown toward me during my recent illness, as well as the unflinching courtesy that controlled its expression? I am not strong enough to answer letters in detail, so I must take this means of thanking as humbly as sincerely the countless people of good-will throughout the world who have put me under a debt I can never hope to repay. Faithfully yours,

RUDYARD KIPLING.

Mr. Kipling on Sunday for the first time since his illness began to get out of bed and to sit up for a few hours.

PAD AND PAPETERIE TRUST FORMING.

A MOVEMENT is on foot for organizing the pad and papeterie manufacturing interests into a big combination that will foot up into the millions. Although the capitalization has not yet been decided upon and no formal options have been made, all of the large firms in the vicinity of Holyoke, Mass., are said to have given the matter favorable consideration and will very likely agree to enter the combine.

THE WORD "BATH" ON NOTE PAPER.

It is likely that many of the older generation of our readers will remember having wondered at the meaning of the word "Bath" stamped on the top left-hand corner of the fine note and letter paper sold fifty years ago and earlier. Singularly, this stamp occurred on French and English papers only, and was never found on paper of English make, though it was commonly supposed to have taken its name from the famous English city of Bath. Recent inquiries have led to the discovery that the word "Bath" had no connection whatever with the chief town of Somersetshire, in England; that, in fact, the word so used is not even English, but Parisian argot. C'est bath means "that suits me," or "that is fine" or "good," and its application to fine note paper is therefore easily accounted for. A similar expression is used in Africa, and it is supposed that the word was carried into France by the Zouaves in the Foreign Legion.

OBITUARY NOTES.

HENRY J. WEHMAN, a music publisher at 108 Park Row, New York, died March 20. He was born in New York forty-three years ago. He was the originator of the one-cent (or so-called penny) ballad, which was first sold in New York streets in 1878.

ANDREW J. RICKOFF, a well-known educator, and author of Appleton's "Reader," died at the home of his daughter in Berkeley, Cal., on March 30. Professor Rickoff was for many years Superintendent of Schools in Cleveland. He had a national reputation as an educator.

EUGENE C. LEWIS, a well-known New York bookblader, died at his home in Brooklyn, March 26. He was a member of one of the oldest families on Long Island, his ancestors having lived in Northport for several generations. He started in business in the employ of the J. Ottman Lithograph Company, in which he later became one of the largest stockholders. In 1892 Mr. Lewis purchased an interest in a large bookbinding establishment, of which he later became sole owner. His business will be continued by his estate.

ADALBERT PEPPMÜLLER, who for twenty-five years was the superintendent of the German and French department of the International News Company, died at his residence, 392 Fourth Street, South Brooklyn, N. Y., on the 3d inst. Mr. Peppmüller was born in Minden, Westphalia, in 1836, and after a thorough education became a merchant, in which capacity he gained intimate experience of foreign methods in Vienna, Paris, and London. In 1866 he came to this country and obtained employment at E. Steiger's store. In 1871 he took a position in the American News Company's foreign department. A year later, when the Willmer & Rodgers News Company was absorbed by the American News Company, and the International News Company was formed, Mr. Peppmüller was placed at the head of the German and French department. In a short time he developed this branch to almost gigantic proportions, procuring for it the exclusive agency for such firms as Hallberger, Bibliographisches Institut, Braun & Schneider, and others of equal importance. Mr. Peppmüller was a man of charming personality. He was an honored and welcome guest at the public entertainments given by fellow German-Americans, and was himself a member of many organizations. He was especially active in furthering educational interests, and was one of the founders of the Staten Island Academy. Mr. Peppmüller leaves a widow and two sons, the younger of whom—Ernest—has been associated with him since 1894 in the International News Company.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden," who is writing a new work of the same character, is said to be the Countess von Arnim, formerly Miss May Beauchamp.

SOME interesting notes left by Alfred Lord Tennyson, in elucidation of his "In Memoriam," have been placed in the hands of a well-known scholar to prepare for early publication.

It is stated that the French Government has issued a decree of exile against Mr. Le Queux, the well-known novelist, on account of his letters to the London Daily Mail exposing the bad drainage, exorbitant charges, and other drawbacks of life on the Riviera.

It is rumored that William George Jordan is about to retire from the editorship of the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post, which he started so auspiciously on its new career. Mr. Jordan, it will be remembered, built up Current Literature, which he left a few years ago to become managing editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. When the Curtis Publishing Co. purchased the moribund Saturday Evening Post Mr. Jordan was induced to become its editor. In a short time his enthusiasm and genius quickened the Post into new life, until it bristled with new ideas that rapidly made for it hosts of new friends and subscribers. Among the innovations introduced by Mr. Jordan was an editorial page in which leading writers and authorities discussed, over their names, timely questions and topics of general interest. Among these contributions those by the editor were by no means the least interesting and instructive—indeed, his personality was apparent in the whole editorial conduct of the Post, which at the present is a unique weekly paper.

THE Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, who succeeded Dr. Lyman Abbot to the pastorate of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., began, on the evening of the 1st inst., a series of sermons on the general theme "Great Books as Interpreters of the Christian Life, and Great Authors as Prophets of the New Era." The first sermon was on George Eliot's Tito in "Romola," and was treated as a study of the peril of tampering with conscience and the gradual deterioration of character. The second will be Victor Hugo's battles of the angels and demons for man's soul in "Les Misérables." How Jean Valjean passed from passion and sin into Christian service and self-sacrifice. The third, Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter." A study of the retributive workings of conscience. An outlook upon the nature, necessity, and nobility of repentance. The fourth, Browning's "Saul," and the wrecking of great souls. A study of the tragedy of ten-talent men. The fifth, the "Seven Scars" on Dante's forehead. A study of the poet's "Seven Deadly Sins." The sixth, John Ruskin's "Seven Lamps of Architecture," as interpreting the seven laws of life and happiness. A study of the principles of character building. The seventh, the poet as a prophet of Christianity. How Tennyson passed from doubt to faith in Jesus Christ. An outlook upon the memoirs of Lord Tennyson. The eighth, the biographies of Drummond and Romanes. An outlook upon the new friendship between science and religion. The ninth, Henry Thoreau's "Walden" and the ministry of the external world. The tenth, the new times and the poets and essayists as prophets of a new era. The series will be followed by a similar one in the fall.

BUSINESS NOTES.

AUGUSTA, GA.—Allen & Constantine have opened a branch bookstore here.

BISMARCK, N. DAK.—R. D. Hoskins has opened a book and stationery store here, which he calls the "Capital" Bookstore.

BOSTON, MASS.—Silver, Burdett & Co. have moved their offices to 219-223 Columbus Avenue, next door to the Youth's Companion building.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—A. F. Farnell & Son, after occupying the store 40 and 42 Court Street for the past twenty years, have removed to a larger store on the corner of Court and Joralemon Streets.

BUCKHANNON, W. VA.—W. S. Foster has opened a book and stationery store on Depot Street.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Peter Paul Book Company have removed into a much larger store half a block further up Main Street than their old quarters.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Charles MacDonald & Co. will remove on May 1 from his old stand at 69 Washington Street to larger and more convenient quarters at 53 Washington Street.

CITY OF MEXICO, MEX.—W. W. Blake has opened a bookstore on Gante Street.

DOVER, N. H.—E. B. Lane has closed out his book and stationery business. Lane's bookstore has been well known for 67 years in Dover and vicinity. The late E. J. Lane was in trade from 1832 to 1884, having been 26 years in a store on Washington Street, and 26 years on Central Avenue. His son, E. B. Lane, has continued the business to the present time, and has been identified with its interests for nearly forty years.

ELLSWORTH, MO.—Miss A. J. Thompson has bought F. A. Coomb's book and stationery store.

EL RENO, KAN.—T. J. Murphy has sold his bookstore.

HACKENSACK, N. J.—M. Fast, bookseller and newsdealer, has moved into the store in his new building.

JOPLIN, MO.—E. Felix, bookseller, has been succeeded by Felix & Duckett.

LEXINGTON, KY.—The well-known book and stationery firm of King & Worthington has been dissolved by mutual consent, but will be continued on under the name of Bruce E. King & Co., the second member of the firm being R. D. Norwood. The old firm has made a splendid reputation for itself, and the withdrawal of Mr. Worthington is due only to the increasing demand on his time by his law practice.

MURPHYSBORO, ILL.—Howell Brothers have sold their stock of school-books and stationery to W. A. McKee.

NATCHEZ, MISS.—Dunbar & French have opened a fine book and stationery store at the corner of Main and North Commerce Streets.

NEW YORK CITY.—William B. Harison was discharged from bankruptcy proceedings March 29. The liabilities were $29,382.

NEW YORK CITY.—Hinds & Noble will extend their quarters on May 1 by adding two more stores in Cooper Institute, which will give them three full fronts on Third Avenue and the same space on Fourth Avenue, making six stores in all.

NEW YORK CITY.—Hannibal I. Kimball, of 25 West Eleventh Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $22,412, and assets of $225 debts due him. There is also a possible legacy from James Kimball, of Portland, Me., the amount of which is unknown, and is subject to a life interest. Of late Mr. Kimball has been in the printing line. He was recently a publisher, and was formerly president, treasurer, and general manager of Stone & Kimball, a corporation which went into the hands of a receiver in November, 1897. Of the liabilities $11,084 are secured by $15,000 stock of that corporation, which is put down at no value. The largest creditors are Charles

B. Farwell, Chicago, $5900; S. D. Warren & Co., Boston, $5184; and Nancy A. Kimball, $4568.

NEW YORK CITY.—F. M. Lupton Pub. Co. will remove May 1 to the new building at the southeast corner of Duane and Elm Streets.

NEW YORK CITY.—M. F. Mansfield & A. Wessels have removed to more modern quarters in the St. James building, at Broadway and Twenty-sixth Street. The change has been necessitated by their steadily growing business which made demands for increased space in a more convenient neighborhood.

NEW YORK CITY.—E. & J. B. Young & Co. will remove about May 1 to 7 and 9 West Eighteenth Street, near Fifth Ave.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Richard de Logerot, the Marquis de Croisic, proprietor of the Cosmopolitan Library and book and stationery store, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

PEKIN, ILL.—W. H. Ward has opened a bookstore on Fourth Street, near Elizabeth.

STAMFORD, CONN.—Sylvester B. Wilson, who recently bought R. E. Lee & Co.'s book and stationery business, is selling out.

TROY, N. Y.—Arthur M. Allen, who has been for the past five years with the D. Van Nostrand Co., of New York, has taken personal charge of the business, which has been conducted for the past year under the name of Arthur M. and Chas. C. Allen, 412 River Street.

UTICA, N. Y.—A. S. & T. Hunter have succeeded to Hugh Glenn & Co.

WICHITA, KAN.—Ora McKinney, proprietor of the Rock Island Bookstore, has purchased the Bayless three-story brick block in this city.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

ELLIOT STOCK, London, will publish at once "In Modern Spain," by Reginald St. Barbe.

CHAPMAN & HALL, London, will publish shortly W. H. Mallock's new novel, "The Individualist."

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY have just published a story entitled "That Duel at the Chateau Marsanac," by Walter Pulitzer.

BENJ. R. TUCKER, New York, has in preparation "Anarchy is Order," by A. Bellegarigue; also, "Are Anarchists Thugs?" by Benj. R. Tucker.

A NUMBER of Chicago newsdealers have issued a call to the trade to meet and organize. Charles McDonald, the well-known newsdealer, is chairman of the committee issuing the call.

THE MONITOR COMPANY, Cincinnati, have in press "On a Higher Plane" and "Pearls from the Bible," both by Moritz Loth; "On Trusts" and "Tales Tersely Told," both by Paul Victor Loth; also, "The Mysterious Marie," by Louis Clermonte.

THE NEW ENGLAND SOCIETY, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, are making preparations to publish a uniform edition of all of Mark Twain's writings. The issue will be in strictly limited form. Brander Matthews will supply an introduction to the works.

IN our notice last week of the forthcoming publications of Alex. Grosset & Co., the nonsensical statement was interpolated by the "office cat" that "The City of Dreadful Night" was by "the celebrated translator of the Rubáiyát." No doubt our readers will all have suspected that we intended to write it was by Rudyard Kipling.

THE OPEN COURT PUBLISHING COMPANY, Chicago, will publish at once Alfred Binet's "Psychology of Reasoning," which has just been translated from the second French edition by Adam Gowans Whyte. The book is probably one of the best of the popular résumés of this branch of modern scientific psychology, and has been widely noted in England and America.

BRENTANO's have just ready neat editions of "The Ballad of Reading Gaol," by C. 3. 3. (Oscar Wilde;) and "The Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám," as translated by Fitzgerald, with the address of John Hay. They will publish on the 10th inst. "Trans-Atlantics," by Frederick W. Wendt, author of "Ocean Sketches;" "The Afghan Knife," by R. A. Sterndale; and "Pierre and Jean," by Guy de Maupassant, translated by Hugh Craig, with 36 illustrations by Ernst Duez and Albert Lynch.

THE bibliographers of George Meredith will be interested to hear of a little discovery, or at least a partial discovery, which it is for them to complete. It has been thought that Meredith's first published production was a copy of verses entitled "Chilian Wallah," published originally in Chambers' Journal. A letter, however, has turned up in which Meredith mentions that previously to this he had published an article on Kossuth. It would be interesting to know where that appeared.

R. H. RUSSELL, New York, announces "English Portraits," a series of drawings on stone, by Will Rothenstein. The portraits are of men and women of to-day, including Thomas Hardy, Sir F. Seymour Hayden, Sir Frederick Pollock, W. E. H. Lecky, W. E. Henley, Miss Ellen Terry, Sidney Colvin, Mrs. Alice Meynell, Walter Crane, George Gissing, Henry James, and others. Mr. Russell also announces four unique designs, by Pamela Colman Smith, illustrating the most picturesque characters in the play of "Trelawny of the Wells."

THE BURTON SOCIETY, which was formed in Denver, Colo., to reprint a limited edition of Burton's translation of "The Arabian Nights," will shortly begin publishing, having secured the number of subscribers desired. The cost of membership, including a set of "The Arabian Nights," is $100, commencing with member number 201. The directors have, however, decided to fill all vacancies at the $90 rate. This fee is payable in instalments of $10 each, as the work progresses. Applications may be addressed to the treasurer, George E. Ross-Lewin, cashier of the First National Bank, Denver.

T. FISHER UNWIN, London, will publish in time for the Protector's centenary celebration on April 25, an illustrated volume entitled "Oliver Cromwell and His Times," by G. Holden Pike. The book will not be an addition to the numerous biographies already in existence, but among other things an attempt will be made to depict the social, political, industrial, and religious characteristics of the times. The illustrations will relate to what is called the Cromwell country, around Huntingdon and St. Ives. Mr. Unwin will shortly publish in his Overseas Series a new novel by Cunningham Graham, entitled "The Ipané," the scene of which is laid in Paraguay.

JOHN LANE has just ready a posthumous volume of essays by Francis Adams, the Australian poet and essayist, entitled "In Modernity." It deals with Shelley, Tennyson, Swinburne, and Kipling. Mr. Lane will publish shortly "Defender of the Faith," a historical romance by Frank Mathew; "A Daughter of the Vine," by Gertrude Atherton; "Idols," by W. J. Locke; and "Both Great and Small," by A. E. J. Legge, author of "The Mutineers," which should not be confused with Mr. Becque's "The Mutineer," which is the story of the mutiny of the Bounty. He announces that the first number of Lady Randolph Churchill's guinea magazine, The Anglo-Saxon, will be published in June.

THE MACMILLAN Co. will publish in a few weeks Prof. George E. Woodberry's new book, "The Heart of Man," a collection of papers dealing with idealism and its application in poetry and art, in politics and religion; "The Quest of Faith," eight chapters upon the current philosophy of religion, by Thomas Bailey Saunders, author of "The Life and Letters of James Macpherson;" also, "The Development of the English Novel," by Prof. W. L. Cross, of Yale, whose aim it is to point out the first appearance of new elements in the progress of fiction, such as the introduction of letters, history, humanitarianism, and psychology, and to trace in outline the development of those new departures.

THE F. M. LUPTON PUBLISHING COMPANY have just ready a new catalogue of their extensive lines of paper-covered books. They have added over one hundred new titles, which swells the total to 850. All their new plates are set in long primer type or larger, making a readable page. New cover designs have been prepared for their Bijou, Golden Rod, Elite, Aldis, and Southworth series, making the books also outwardly more attractive. The firm announces that it protects the retailer by declining to sell to houses that cut the prices on their books. On May 1 they will remove from 72-76 Walker Street to the new building at the southeast corner of Elm and Duane Streets, where they will occupy two entire lofts.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish next week a collection of anecdotes illustrative of "Irish Life and Character," by Michael MacDonagh. He will publish on the 20th inst. "An Epic of the Soul," a cycle of eighty short poems, of a new form, "which records the experience of one who has sounded the depths of doubt and despair, and emerged into light on the further side." The author, whose name is at present withheld, is already known in more than one department of literature. Under the title of "The Warden," Henry A. Fairbairn, M.D., will publish through Mr. Whittaker a biographical sketch of his father, who for many years was head of St. Stephen's College, Annandale, N. Y., and was widely known in the Episcopal Church as an author and educator.

THE LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY, Boston, have just published "Germany, her people and their story," a popular history of Germany, from its discovery by the Romans to the present day, by Augusta Hale Gifford, wife of Hon. George Gifford, U. S. Consul at Basle, and sister to Senator Eugene Hale, of Maine; "Tales of the Malayan Coast," by Rounseville Wildman, U. S. Consul at Hong Kong, whose connection with the stirring affairs in the Far East, his association with Aguinaldo, the Filipino chief, and his intimate connection with Dewey's victories and the progress of the war in the Philippines, gives especial interest to his stories; "A Modern Sacrifice," a new story by Pansy; and "The Despatch Boat of the Whistle," a sea and land story of Santiago, which is also, incidentally, a story of the Spanish-American war from the news of the destruction of the Maine to the fall of Santiago, by that veteran story-teller, William O. Stoddard.

THE Annual Report of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, showing the operations, expenditures, and condition of the Institution to July, 1897, has just made its appearance. Besides the official matter, its appendix contains the following interesting contributions: "Aspects of American Astronomy," by Simon Newcomb; "The Beginnings of American Astronomy," by Edward S. Holden; "The Evolution of Satellites," with diagrams, by G. H. Darwin; "Electrical Advance in the Past Ten Years," by Elihu Thomson; "The X-Rays," with a number of illustrations and diagrams, by W. C. Röntgen; "Cathode Rays," by J. J. Thomson; "Story of Experiments in Mechanical Flight," with illustrations, by S. P. Langley; "On Soaring Flight," by E. C. Hufferaker; "The Revival of Alchemy," by H. C. Bolton; "Diamonds," by William Crookes; "The Discovery of New Elements within the Last Twenty-Five Years," by Clemens Winkler; "An Undiscovered Gas," by William Ramsay; "Fluorine," by Henri Moissan; "Light and its Artificial Production," by O. Lummer; "Exploration of the Upper Atmosphere," with diagrams, by Henri de Graffigny; "The Exploration of the Free Air by Means of Kites at Blue Hill Observatory," with illustrations from photographs, by A. Lawrence Rotch; "The Debt of the World to Pure Science," by John J. Stevenson; "The Age of the Earth as an Abode Fitted for Life," by Lord Kelvin; "Rising of the Land Around Hudson Bay," by Robert Bell; "Crater Lake, Oregon," with maps and a number of full-page illustrations from photographs, by J. S. Diller; "The Function and Field of Geography," by J. Scott Keltie; "Letters from the Andrée Party," with portraits and illustrations from photographs; "Scientific Advantages of an Antarctic Expedition," by John Murray and others; "Recent Progress in Physiology," by Michael Foster; "The Factors of Organic Evolution from a Botanical Standpoint," by L. H. Bailey; "The Law which Underlies Protective Coloration," with a number of illustrations from photographs, by Abbott H. Thayer; "Life History Studies of Animals," by L. C. Miall; "The Royal Menagerie of France, and the National Menagerie, Established on the 14th of Brumaire, of the Year II (November 4, 1793)," by E. T. Hamy; "Botanical Opportunity," by William Trelease; "Mescal: A New Artificial Paradise," by Havelock Ellis; "The Unity of the Human Species," by Marquis de Nadaillac; "Recent Research in Egypt," by W. M. Flinders-Petrie; "A Study of the Omaha Tribe: The Import of the Totem," with illustrations from photographs, by Alice C. Fletcher; "A New Group of Stone Implements from the Southern Shores of Lake Michigan," with a number of plates, by W. A. Phillips; "A Preliminary Account of Archaeological Field Work in Arizona in 1897," very fully illustrated, a number of plates being colored, by J. Walter Fewkes; "The Building of the Library of Congress," by Bernard R. Green, illustrated; "George Brown Goode," a short notice, in memoriam, by S. P. Langley; "Francis Amasa Walker," a biographical sketch, by George F. Hoar and Carroll D. Wright.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE will give its next monthly dinner on the evening of April 12, at the New Amsterdam Hotel, 265 Fourth Avenue, corner of Twenty-first Street, New York. The post-prandial programme will consist of "An Evening with Salesmen and their 'Big Sales.'" H. S. Hutchinson, of New Bedford, Mass., will lead off by an informal talk on the country bookseller in the past and present. Having just returned from Cuba, Mr. Hutchinson will very likely also have something to say of what he saw of the book trade in Havana and thereabouts. A number of salesmen are expected to speak of their "big" or prize sales. The new quarters are decidedly more cheerful and homelike than those at the French Restaurant, and will hold in one room the largest assembly the League expects to entertain.

BOOKS WANTED.

IN answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word (Cash).

WRITE your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

For advertising rates see page 596, issue for April 1, 1899.

A Series of Brief Memoirs of Eminent Americans

The Beacon Biographies

M. A. DEWOLFE HOWE, EDITOR

MESSRS. SMALL, MAYNARD AND COMPANY beg to announce that they will publish on April 15 the first five volumes of THE BEACON BIOGRAPHIES, as follows:—

PHILLIPS BROOKS, by the Editor

DAVID G. FARRAGUT, by JAMES BARNES

ROBERT E. LEE, by W. P. TRENT

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, by EDWARD EVERETT HALE, Jr.

DANIEL WEBSTER, by NORMAN HAPGOOD

They are also able to announce the following volumes as in preparation:—

JOHN JAMES AUDUBON, by JOHN BURROUGHS

EDWIN BOOTH, by CHARLES TOWNSEND COPELAND

AARON BURR, by HENRY CHILDS MERWIN

JAMES FENIMORE COOPER, by W. B. SHUBRICK CLYMER

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, by LINDSAY SWIFT

The reasons which have persuaded the Editor and the Publishers to believe that The Beacon Biographies make their appeal to a fairly general public are these:—

The Beacon Biographies, it is thought, are the most beautiful small books ever issued in this country. The cover (in blind and gold on blue cloth) is by MR. BERTRAM GROSVENOR GOODHUE, who has done also the standing title-page for the series, which has been engraved on copper. The size is 24mo ($3\frac{3}{4}$ by $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches), with an average of 140 pages to the volume. The frontispiece portrait which accompanies each is in photogravure. The paper has been selected with great care, and the type used is a new face specially cut.

The subjects of the various Biographies as they appear are to be men of the most various significance in American life, so that the series as completed will give biographically the history of American life and character in all its important phases.

The normal extent of a Beacon Biography is around 20,000 words. Sixty or seventy years ago books of American biography thus briefly expressed could be obtained generally throughout the country, but they have since been crowded out by the longer Memoirs and formal lives. From these, now, and from the wealth of related material which has been accumulated in the research of a generation, it is proposed to condense once more the brief statement of essential facts which alone can appeal to the busy American interested in his country's history.

The writers who have consented to contribute to the Series are uniformly men who have the point of view of the present generation. With full critical and historical knowledge of the subjects of which they treat, they have not thought it necessary to produce dull books, or books without the proper popular appeal. Those who care for biography will find in The Beacon Biographies, it is hoped, the solution of a real want—books at once entertaining, brief, and authentic. Each volume, moreover, is to include a bibliography for further reading, and a strict and full list of important dates in chronological order.

Price, 75 cents each

NO. 5

JOHN STREET

By RICHARD WHITEING,

Author of "The Island."

A Romance of the "Other Half" in London, with Side-lights on the Life of the "Upper Ten."

"From pure literary charm this piece of artistic workmanship is far and away superior to anything we have read this year."—London Daily Mail.

"It stands amongst the average output of fiction like an oak in a hedgerow."—David Christie Murray.

THE author of this striking story is a journalist, who has devoted many years to the sympathetic study of social conditions in the modern Babylon. The heroine is a flower-girl, and the hero, who tells the story, a wealthy young baronet who lives for a time in the slums, and earns his bread by the sweat of his brow. The satire upon "the selfishness of high civilizations" is made all the more effective by its subtle humor and the literary delicacy of the author's style.

Have Ready To-Day:

The Stolen Story

And Other Newspaper Stories. By JESSE LYNCH WILLIAMS, author of "Princeton Stories." Frontispiece. 12mo, $1.25.

Stories that portray human nature in unusual aspects with a breadth and depth that lift them far above ordinary newspaper stories, the author's knowledge of the men and the ways of journalism serving as the vehicle for the expression of his philosophy of life and knowledge of character. The stories at the same time have a raciness and humor that give them striking individuality.

In the Klondyke.

By FREDERICK PALMER. With illustrations from photographs. 12mo, $1.50.

A most satisfactory account of a winter journey, as well as of a winter residence, in the Klondyke. The author has put into his book more facts of real significance, and has succeeded in conveying a better idea of a Klondyke mining town, than has thus far been accessible elsewhere.

By Rev. Dr. William Reed Huntington.

New and cheaper editions, with important revisions and additional matter.

The Church-Idea.

A Literary History of Ireland.

By Dr. DOUGLAS HYDE (Library of Literary History, Vol. II.) Frontispiece. 8vo, $4.00.

In this second volume in a noteworthy series on the world's literature, Dr. Hyde traces the history of letters in Ireland from the earliest period through the eighteenth century. Besides including many examples of a beautiful and original literature, this volume is of especial interest in view of the present Celtic revival in England.

D. APPLETON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

A. CONAN DOYLE'S NEW NOVEL.

A DUET, WITH AN OCCASIONAL CHORUS.

By A. CONAN DOYLE, author of "Uncle Bernac," "Brigadier Gerard," "Rodney Stone," etc. Uniform with other books by Dr. Doyle. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"Charming is the one word to describe this volume adequately. Dr. Doyle's crisp style and his rare wit and refined humor, utilized with cheerful art that is perfect of its kind, fill these chapters with joy and gladness for the reader."—Philadelphia Press.

"A Duet" is bright, brave, simple, natural, delicate. It is the most artistic and most original thing that its author has done. . . . We can heartily recommend 'A Duet' to all classes of readers. It is a good book to put into the hands of the young of either sex. It will interest the general reader, and it should delight the critic, for it is a work of art. This story taken with the best of his previous work gives Dr. Doyle a very high place in modern letters."—Chicago Times-Herald.

EDUCATION BY DEVELOPMENT.

By FRIEDRICH FROEBEL. Translated by Josephine Jarvis. International Education Series. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Dr. Harris, the editor, says of this book: "The essays on the training school for kindergartners and the method of introducing children's gardens into the kindergarten are very suggestive and useful. In fact, there is no other kindergarten literature that is quite equal in value to the contents of this present volume."

SPAIN.

By FREDERICK A. OBER, author of "Puerto Rico and its Resources," "Cruzo's Island," etc. History for Young Readers Series. 16mo, cloth, 60 cents.

The leading events of Spain's history, with special reference to her American colonies, the rise and fall of the empire, the causes and effects of the loss of her colonial power from the earliest period to the close of the late war, are presented in a way to interest the young reader, and give him a clear view of the romantic career and inglorious decline of the Spanish empire.

A TIMELY NOVEL.

THE MORMON PROPHET.

By LILY DOUGALL, author of "The Mermaid," "The Madonna of a Day," and "The Zeit-Geist." 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"A striking story. . . . Immensely interesting and diverting, and as a romance it certainly has a unique power."—Boston Herald.

"Miss Dougall may be congratulated both on her choice of a subject for her new book and on her remarkably able and interesting treatment of it. . . . A fascinating story, which is even more remarkable and more fascinating as a psychological study."—Scotsman.

"The Mormon Prophet" is no less interesting than curious; and while it may become a topic for discussion by upholders of various religious beliefs, yet its chief merit will be appreciated by those who enjoy meeting new characters and new scenes in fiction."—New York Literature.

RECENT VOLUMES IN

Appletons' Town and Country Library.

Each, 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

No. 262. Paul Carah, Cornishman.

By CHARLES LEE, author of "A Widow Woman," "A Foreigner in Pendennack," etc.

This charming story of a Cornish village, with its fresh and pungent atmosphere and poetic glimpses of Nature, will impress itself upon readers as the work of an author whose insight, force, and literary quality are distinctly exceptional. The story is told with singular vividness and concentrated interest.

No. 261. Pharos, the Egyptian.

By GUY BOOTHBY, author of "Doctor Nikola," "The Lust of Hate," "A Bid for Fortune," etc.

Mr. Boothby has proved himself a master of the art of story-telling from the point of view of the reader who asks for a succession of stirring events, a suspicion of mystery, and an interest not only maintained but culminating. It would be unfair to explain the extraordinary character of "Pharos," or to do more than allude to the series of strange adventures wherein he plays a leading part. It is enough to assure Mr. Boothby's readers of delightful thrills and an interest which this vivid romancer never permits to flag.

THESE BOOKS ARE FOR SALE BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

The United States of Europe

By W. T. Stead

ON THE EVE OF THE PARLIAMENT OF PEACE

Mr. Stead's recent talks with the Czar and with all the great European statesmen lend much value to this timely review of current politics, written with special reference to the Russian Peace Rescript and American "Expansion." It covers such pertinent matters as America's task in Cuba and the Philippines, the "Chinese Puzzle," South African Problems, the Fashoda Muddle, the Concert of Europe and its work in Crete and Candia, and so on, with many suggestive forecasts.

Size, 5½ x 8½; Pages, 468; Illustrations, over 100 portraits, views, and maps; Binding, cloth. $2.00.

Memoirs of Sergeant Bourgogne, 1812-1813

COMPILED FROM THE ORIGINAL MSS. BY PAUL COTTIN

This book gives the personal adventures (compiled from his diary) of a sergeant in a regiment of the Emperor Napoleon's Old Guard. He went through the gloomy Russian campaign and endured to the full the terrific hardships of those famous soldiers who "grumbled but followed always." It gives a new light, a new point of view upon a chapter of history which will always hold its place in the picturesque annals of the world.

Size, 5½ x 8½; Pages, 370; Binding, cloth, decorated; Type, 10-point; Illustrations, 8, nearly all from drawings made by an officer of Napoleon's Army. $1.50.

The Professor's Daughter

By Anna Farquhar

Miss Farquhar's story tells of Professor Fremont, the old man of books, and of his daughter and amanuensis, who give up their musty researches and betake themselves to a primitive Rhode Island seacoast village, in order to restore vigor to the young lady's falling eyes. The transformation of the latter from "a woman of bones, covered with spirit instead of flesh," into the heroine of a charming love-story proved one of the most popular "features" of the periodical in which it appeared.

Size, 5 x 7½; Pages, 324; Type, 11-point; Binding, cloth, decorated. $1.25.

"FROM SEA TO SEA"

A New Book in Press by

RUDYARD KIPLING

 HIS is an authorized edition of the collected letters of travel which Mr. Rudyard Kipling has written at various times between 1890 and 1898. It includes hitherto unpublished matter as well as an accurate text of the "American Notes" with "Letters of Marque," "The City of Dreadful Night," etc., etc.

"THE DAY'S WORK"

72d Thousand

By RUDYARD KIPLING

 T has been his portion to gain the ear of the great non-literary reading public, and at the same time to win the enthusiastic applause of that limited body of men whose pleasure in a work of art is derived from a perception of the means as well as of the end. Such good fortune falls to few. . . . You may lay your finger on faults real or imaginary. . . . But you cannot (being in full possession of your senses) pass him by, you cannot maintain that, in estimating the literary forces and tendencies of our age, it is possible to leave him out of account. As well ignore Dickens in a review of Victorian literature, as well ignore Keene in a review of Victorian art. Perhaps the most striking feature of Mr. Kipling's work is the wide range over which it expatiates. Subjects the most diverse are handled with the same air of ease and intimacy; and no other writer is so well entitled to repeat with proper pride the most familiar and most hackneyed of Terentian sentiments. 'For to admire and for to see. For to behold this world so wide'—that is his metier."—Blackwood's Magazine.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY has purchased the entire limited paper-bound edition of Marie Corelli's "The Sorrows of Satan." The volume will be No. 3 of The People's Library, issued monthly and entered as second-class matter. It will be ready for delivery May 1.

DOUBLEDAY & MCCLURE Co. have just ready the "Memoirs of Sergeant Bourgogne, 1812-1813," an account, from the standpoint of a private soldier, of the horrors of war, as witnessed in the Russian campaign; also a volume entitled "The United States of Europe on the Eve of the Parliament of Peace," by W. T. Stead; and Anna Farquhar's strong story, "The Professor's Daughter."

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish at once a novel entitled "The Maternity of Harriott Wicken," by Mrs. Henry Dudeney. The book is described to be "a realistic and remorseless study of unhappiness," and a "novel to be reckoned with." They have just ready in the Temple Classics (published in England by J. M. Dent & Co.) "The Life and Opinions of Tristram Shandy," in two charming little volumes.

RAND, McNALLY & Co. have just issued the fourth edition of "The Merchant Prince of Cornville," a comedy by Samuel Eberly Gross, who, it will be remembered, has recently brought suit to prove that Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" is a plagiarism of this work. "The Merchant Prince of Cornville" was written between the years 1875 and 1879. It was circulated and read in manuscript until 1895. In 1896 it was first published in book form, and in the same year it was given a single representation at the Novelty Theatre in London, with the object of securing the acting rights.

HERBERT S. STONE & Co., Chicago and New York, have just ready the following fiction: "Dross," by Henry Seton Merriman, with twenty-eight full-page illustrations; "The Wolf's Long Howl," by Stanley Waterloo, author of "The Story of Ab," etc.; "Oliver Iverson, his adventures during four days and nights in the city of New York in April of the year 1890," by Ann Devoore; "A Little Legacy, and other stories," by Mrs. L. B. Walford; "D'Arcy of the Guards, or, the fortunes of war," by Louis Evan Shipman; "The Awakening," by Kate Chopin; and "A Fair Brigand," by George Horton, late U. S. Consul at Athens, with many illustrations.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS issue to-day, in their International Theological Library, "The Theology of the New Testament," by George B. Stevens, professor of systematic theology in Yale University; and have also just ready "Retrospects and Prospects," a volume of descriptive and historical essays made up from the hitherto uncollected papers of the late Sidney Lanier; "In the Klondyke," by Frederick Palmer, with many illustrations from photographs; and a volume of stories collected under the title "On the Edge of the Empire," written by Edgar Jepson and Captain D. Beames, the "empire" being the British empire and the "edge" its Indian frontier.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish early next month "The Races of Europe," a sociological study, by Professor William Z. Ripley, which was originally intended for fall publication. An interesting feature of the book will be a supplementary bibliography of nearly 2000 titles, compiled by Herbert Putnam, the new Librarian of Congress, which will also be issued separately by the Boston Public Library. Professor Ripley's book gives a description of the present living population of Europe from the point of view of the physical anthropologist, and shows the intimate relationship which has generally arisen between man and his geographical environment. Simple maps, specially drawn for the purpose, and a rich collection of over 235 portrait types from all parts of the Continent increase the interest of the text for the general reader, for the work is not intended for scientists alone. The book is especially suggestive to the observant traveller who ventures beyond the great cities, and who would understand the life history of the European peasantry from the study of their physical traits, such as stature, color of hair and eyes, head form and features.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition is unannotated, illus. rated, etc. is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Abrojal, Tulis. An index finger. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., 1898. c. '97. 2-882 p. D. buckram, $1.25. [1164]

The book is to be an index finger that will point out "truth, eternal in the heavens," that there is no death, but only a change to a life as busy as this on earth. The author's belief is not exactly spiritualism, or theosophy, or evolution. The happiness of human beings is to depend upon goodness. Women have great responsibilities, and men are required to make life on earth as easy as possible for them. The little mysterious plaything known as "Planchette" some years back plays a part in the plot.

Carlyle, T. Letters of Thomas Carlyle to his youngest sister; ed., with an introductory essay, by C. Townsend Copeland. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 8+270 p. pora. il. D. cl., $2. [1175]

The letters printed in this volume were mainly written by Thomas Carlyle to his youngest sister, Mrs. Robert Hanning, who died in Toronto on the thirteenth day of December, 1897. Other members of the family are represented in the correspondence; there are a few letters—these perhaps the most interesting—from Carlyle to his mother; a few, also, from the mother to her oldest and to her youngest child. The collection extends from 1833 to 1890 when J. Carlyle Aitken wrote to inform his aunt Mrs. Hanning, of the death of James Carlyle, her youngest brother. Mr. Copeland's introductory essay is on "Carlyle as a letter-writer."

Cole, R. S. A treatise on photographic optics. N. Y., D. Van Nostrand Co., 1899. 8+380 p. il. D. cl., $2.50. [1176]

The object of this treatise is to provide an account of the principles of optics, so far as they apply to photography, in a form which is of scientific value, while not of too abstruse a nature to place it beyond the reach of all but the professional mathematician or physicist. "I have attempted," the author says, "to steer a middle course between giving too much mathematics and giving none at all; the former course would restrict the book to a few, while the latter would deprive it of all real value." To make the mathematics as intelligible as possible, most of the results have been illustrated by worked numerical examples, and symbolical results have been expressed in words.

Copeland, T. Campbell, Solters, Maria, and Magnus, Maurice. American colonial handbook: a ready reference book of facts and figures, historical, geographical, and commercial, about Cuba, Puerto Rico, the Philippines, Hawaii, and Guam. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1899. c. 180 p. nar. S. flex. cl., 50 c. [1177]

Besides facts and figures regarding the history, geography, population, agriculture, vegetable and mineral products, animals, financial condition, commerce, shipping, inland transportation, exports, imports, etc., relative to the islands named in the title, there are numerous special features, including lists with Spanish equivalents for Cuba, Puerto Rico, the Philippines and Marianas, of the principal vegetables, minerals, and animals of each country. These latter embrace the whole animal kingdom. Transportation notes tell how much it costs to visit the different possessions, and how to connect by rail and steamer. Weights and measures, currency, time variations, and a score of other items are also given in their proper places. The question and answer form adopted as a part of the plan gives the book special attractiveness.

Dow, Arthur Wesley. Composition: a series of exercises selected from a new system of art education. Pt. 1. Bost., J. M. Bowles, 1899. c. 88 p. il. sq. O. cl., $1.50. [1178]

A paragraph from Mr. Dow's introductory throws light upon this work. He says: "The main idea in the system is to help the pupil at the very outset to originate a beautiful arrangement—say a few lines harmoniously grouped together—and then proceed onward step by step to greater appreciation and fuller power of expression. During this course skill in drawing will come as a natural growth, and knowledge of perspective and all other requisites will be sought as the developing artistic faculty feels the need of them. In a word, instead of expending most of the effort on drawing, and then adding additional work or composition, we begin with composition, and find that it will lead to all the rest." Mr. Dow is instructor in composition at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, and at Art Students' League of New York.

Eloce clerus; or, the Christian minister in many lights, by a student of the times. N. Y., Eaton & Mains, 1899. c. 2-841 p. O. cl., $1.50. [1179]

"This treatise is an attempt to deal with some pressing present-day problems having their incidents within the sphere of religion and holding peculiarly intimate relation to the ministerial calling. Fidelity to its aim in this regard makes it a more or less free and candid criticism of the spirit, status, functions, methods, and achievements of the Christian ministry, viewed in the light of the New Testament and the special requirements of the age."—Preface.

"The present volume has been styled—in order to make it a companion book to the 'Literary history of India'—a 'Literary history of Ireland,' but a 'Literary history of Irish Ireland' would be a more correct title, for I have abstained altogether from any analysis or even mention of the works of Anglicized Irishmen of the last two centuries. Their books, as those of Farquhar, of Swift, of Goldsmith, of Burke, find, and have always found, their true and natural place in every history of English literature that has been written, whether by Englishmen themselves or by foreigners. My object in this volume has been to give a general view of the literature produced by the Irish-speaking Irish, and to reproduce, by copious examples, some of its more salient, or at least more characteristic, features."—Preface.

The scene is laid in Germany, and the time is about the middle of this century. The motif of the story is the deep gulf of racial distinctions, the impassable gulf between the Christian and the Jew. The heroine is a beautiful Jewess, rescued when a child from a mob of children, and attaining a noble womanhood under the fostering care of the pastor of the German village and his wife. She is loved by Christian and Jew, and the struggle in her mind between the commanding force of her religious tradition and the intense force of her affection is described with understanding and power.

Offers the more important literature of the labor question, under specific headings, with author, publisher, price, etc. Particular attention has been given to government publications and pamphlet literature. In the annotations valuation of the books has been generally avoided, the notes simply explaining more fully than the titles the contents of the books. The periodical literature, which is very important, has been omitted, as it is already covered by Poole's index, beginning with 1807 and brought down to the present by the "Annual literary index," the "Cumulative index," etc. List of labor periodicals. Prescott, E. Livingston. The measure of a man. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., 1899. c. '98. 302 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1220]

A plain sergeant of dragoons is thrown from his horse and rendered insensible for a time; he is found by a girl far above him in education and station, and restored to consciousness. This is the beginning of a love-story, in which the man educates himself, helped by the girl he loves, and rises to her level.

Richardson, C. J. The Englishman's house: a practical guide for selecting or building a house. New cheaper ed., with a colored frontispiece. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 504 p. il. 12°, cl., $1.25. [1221]

Ridpath, J. Clark. Ridpath's history of the world: being an account of the principal events in the career of the human race from the beginnings of civilization to the present time; comprising the development of social institutions and the story of all nations; from recent and authentic sources. N. Y., Merrill & Baker, 1898-9. 8 v., il. maps, 8°, cl., subs., $53; hf. mor., $40; full mor., $48. [1223]

Rodman, Warren A. Fate or law? The story of an optimist. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1899. c. 5-218 p. D. cl., $1. [1228]

The author is secretary of the International Metaphysical League. The story deals with the theory of mental healing. The hero is sickly and deformed through prenatal mental influence, but is blessed with a hopeful disposition. He comes under the care of a mental healer who cures him and enables him to marry a beautiful girl, of a sunny, optimistic disposition.

Roger, J. Energy and heat. N. Y., Spon & Chamberlain, 1899. 86 p. 12°, cl., 50 c. [1224]

Sargent, F. Leroy. Corn plants: their uses and ways of life. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 7+106 p. il. D. cl., 75 c. [1225]

Gives in compact form and in readable style a clear account of the six important grain plants of the world—wheat, oats, rye, barley, rice, and maize. Explains what corn plants are, indicates their importance to mankind, and narrates the myths and religious customs which have grown up about them. Also describes how the plants are formed, and how their growth and perfection are insured by their various organs. The author shows how well they are adapted for ideal food products for mankind, and gives the history, distribution, and uses of each of the six plants.

Scottish clans (The) and their tartans; containing 96 col. pls. showing the various tartans of the different clans; with full descriptive notes on the history and achievements of each clan. New ed. rev. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 32°, cl., $1. [1226]

Smith, Hermann. The art of tuning the piano-forte: a new and comprehensive treatise to enable the musician to tune his piano-forte upon the system found on the theory of equal temperament. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 90 p. 12°, pap., net, 75 c. [1227]

Snow, Walter B. Steam-boiler practice in its relation to fuels and their combustion, and the economic results obtained with various methods and devices. N. Y., J: Wiley & Sons, 1899. 10+297 p. 8°, cl., $3. [1228]

Spon's architects and builders' price-book (English prices), with useful memoranda. 26th ed. N. Y., Spon & Chamberlain, 1899. 424 p. 8°, cl., $1.40. [1229]

Stevens, H. D. A boy's life, its spiritual ministry. Bost., Ja. H. West Co., [1899.] 10+118 p. sq. S. (Life's ser.) cl., 50 c.; Special ed., 75 c. [1230]

The story of a real boy—Arthur C Stevens, born in Indianapolis, June 25, 1881, died June 22, 1897. His father tells the story of his sixteen years, with a pathetic insight, which makes it very attractive to one who has lost a child.

Stone, Rev. R. H. In Afric's forest and jungle; or, six years among the Yorubans. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1899.] c. 8-282 p. il. D. cl., $1. [1231]

A series of sketches by a missionary who resided for several years in a large native town in West Africa, where he came in contact with some phases of life which are now largely things of the past.

Stratemeyer, E. Fighting in Cuban waters; or, under Schley on the Brooklyn; il. by A. B. Shute. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1898. c. 8+344 p. il. D. (Old Glory ser., no. 3.) cl., $1.25. [1232]

Walter Russell, brother to Larry and Ben, the respective heroes of the two preceding volumes of this series, finds his way to Boston in this volume, secures employment, enlists in the navy, and is assigned to the Brooklyn. Then follow interesting chapters, telling of Commodore Schley, the idol of his men; the routine of the life of the "Jackies," and blockade and discovery of Cervera's fleet, followed by the memorable conflict of July 3. Walter has meanwhile met with all the adventures that the author knows so well how to introduce, including an unexpected trip on the Merrimac under Hobson.

Swift, Jonathan. The choice works of Dean Swift in prose and verse; reprinted from the original eds. New cheaper ed., with memoir. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 678 p. 12°, cl., $1.25. [1233]

Thackeray, W. Makepeace. Mrs. Perkins' ball, by M. A. Titmarsh; il. by the author: [an exact reprint of the original ed. first published in 1847.] N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 46 p. 8°, cl., $3. [1236]

Thayer, W. Roscoe. Throne-makers. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 6+329 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1237]

The "Throne-makers" are Bismarck, Napoleon III., Kossuth, and Garibaldi. Their personalities are portrayed and their achievements briefly described. Four papers or "portraits" follow, whose subjects are Carlyle, Tintoret, Giordano Bruno, and Bryant. Mr. Thayer is the author of "The dawn of Italian independence."

Thomas, Reuen. The kinship of souls: a narrative. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. c. 4+295 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1238]

An account of a trip across the ocean, made by a philosophical professor, his intellectual daughter, and a young theological student, including descriptions of various portions of England and Germany visited by the persons of the narrative. The author shows wide reading and familiarity not only with theology, but with novelists, philosophers, and poets as well. Kant, Hume, Hegel, George Eliot, Wordsworth, Arnold, Carlyle, Milton, Dr. Johnson, and many other thinkers and writers are touched upon. His undogmatic discussions of theology and philosophy will appeal to the serious-minded.

Thornhill, Mark. Haunts and hobbies of an Indian official. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 346 p. 12°, cl., $2.40. [1239]

Thorp, G. E. Twelve lessons on breathing and breath control for singers, speakers, and teachers. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 48 p. 12°, cl., net, 35 c. [1240]

Contents: V. 1-6, War and peace, a novel.

*United States. The jurisdiction of federal courts, by Howard M. Carter. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. 28+808 p. 8°, shp., net, $8.50. [1244]

Vincent, Clarence A., D.D. Providence in America; or, the problems of self-government. Sandusky, O., The Alvord-Peters Co., [1899.] c. 239+7 p. D. pap., 80 c. [1245]

The author has been impressed in all his study of American history "that the hand of God can be as plainly seen in it as in the records of the children of Israel, and that upon this nation God has laid a peculiar responsibility." His theory is illustrated in chapters entitled: The Scriptures and national life; Providence in America's discovery, in its physical features, its settlement, development, critical periods, leaders, present perils, etc.

Whishaw, F: At the court of Catherine the Great. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1899.] c. 368 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1246]

The story is told by a German Countess who goes to Russia, when only sixteen, to serve the Grand Duchess, who afterwards becomes the Empress Catherine the Great, as lady-in-waiting. The girl has an interesting personal experience, which is interwoven with Catherine's own exciting career. The story as it relates to Catherine is historically true. Her various favorites play their parts; her husband, the imbecile Peter, is murdered, and she is left securely on her throne, still a young woman, when the volume is closed.

*Whitaker, [Jos. & Sons, comps.] Whitaker's naval and military directory and Indian army list, 1899; containing an alphabetical list of commissioned officers on the active list of both services: a list of the ships of the navy, and of the regiments of the army, a catalogue of war medals and decorations, etc. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 656 p. 12°, cl., $2. [1247]

Whiteing, R: No. 5 John St. N. Y., The Century Co., 1899. c. 8+815 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1249]

The experience of a wealthy young baronet who lives for a time in the London slums and earns his bread by the sweat of his brow. He returns again to his own social set, and after a while goes back to the slums. There are only a few characters in the book, the chief being a flower-girl of imposing stature. The book is more a succession of impressions than a story. While it pathetically pictures the misery of the poor, it is also a satire upon "the selfishness of high civilization." By the author of "The Island."

Williams, Jesse Lynch. The stolen story, and other newspaper stories. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. c. 5+291 p. il. D. cl., $1.25. [1250]

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 15, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereto."—LORD BACON.

COPYRIGHT AMENDMENT.

THE question of amendment of the copyright law has been raised in an interesting way in the letter from the Poet-Laureate of England to the American Secretary of State, addressed to the latter in his double capacity of author and statesman. Most, if not all, authors, and many publishers, would be quite willing to open the copyright doors as freely to Englishmen as to themselves, and to make such modifications in the law as would enable the United States to become a participant in the Berne Convention. Other publishers and many, if not most, printers, with those of the allied trades, would probably be opposed to anything more than modification of the present manufacturing clause. The country in the present administration is committed to the protection of American industry, and the manufacturing clause is in harmony with that policy. It is scarcely to be expected that this particular feature of the general policy will be swept away because of the present friendliness between England and America, or because of the willingness of authors to meet their English brethren and rivals face to face on equal terms. In other words, the question is still not an author's question, or even a publisher's question, but a printer's question in relation with the protection by tariff and cognate laws of printing interests.

The copyright law as amended in 1891, to make it to some extent an international copyright law, still includes many perplexities and not a few inconsistencies. So intelligent and fair-minded a copyright officer as Mr. Solberg is doubtless puzzled frequently, if not daily, by the difficulties inherent in the present law. From time to time suggestions have been made for a copyright commission of experts, somewhat on the lines of the English commission, which should investigate the general subject of copyright legislation and propose a new copyright code—a suggestion again brought forward by Mr. George Haven Putnam's comment on Mr. Austin's letter. Quite aside from the manufacturing clause and international questions, such a commission would be most desirable, and doubtless it could frame a code which would greatly improve the domestic law and present such a form of international arrangement as would adapt itself either to the protection of the printing industry, or to freer relations between English and American authorship, according to whatever policy might prevail at the time the report should be made. It is to be hoped, therefore, that with the next meeting of the Congress some progress may be made in the direction of a commission for copyright revision.

Doubtless many questions will be asked at the approaching international meeting of publishers in London from the American representatives as to the status of copyright here—probably more questions than can easily be answered. It is significant to note, in this connection, that the American Publishers Copyright League, at its recent annual meeting, put itself on record as favoring an extension of copyright privilege so as to do better justice to foreign authors—authors of books in other languages than English—as to the time limit of reissue here. Doubtless there are many ways in which the copyright law could be broadened without encountering prejudices in this country, while making our friends across sea happier in their minds. But it would be better if these and all like questions could be referred to a copyright commission which should make recommendations, perhaps not doing everything that even members of the commission would like to do, but recognizing both the possibilities and the limitations of an improvement of the present law.

THE FINE WRITING PAPER COMBINE.

THE projectors of the new fine writing paper combine have agreed upon a capitalization of $42,000,000, and the organization of this company will be perfected this month and be in running order by June 1. The work of securing options on plants has been completed, and the projectors are now busy making an appraisal of the value of the plants and stock. Fully 92 per cent. of the fine writing paper mills in the country are in the combine, or a total of some forty-five mills, twenty of which are in Holyoke, Mass., and nine in the West.

BOOKSELLING IN OLDEN AND MODERN TIMES.

THE April dinner of the Booksellers' League, in its new quarters at the New Amsterdam Hotel, southeast corner of Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, was an entire success from every point of view. The rooms occupied by the League were homelike—almost gorgeous compared with those in which its dinners have hitherto been given—the dinner was excellent and well served, and the literary programme was highly interesting.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers, held earlier in the evening, ten new members were elected. The dinner committee reported a deficit of a little over $25, which is fifteen dollars less than last year, and the treasurer reported a balance of over $250. It may, therefore, be taken for granted that the League is more than holding its own, and that its ideal—to come into possession of a home of its own—is not so visionary now as it was even a year ago. Appropriate resolutions of regret at the death of Mr. W. W. Howe were drafted and passed. An engrossed copy of these resolutions will be transmitted to Mr. Howe's sister, his sole surviving relative.

After the coffee had been served, the President, W. H. Parker, briefly introduced H. S. Hutchinson, of New Bedford, Mass., who spoke in part as follows:

I notice that our Chairman has assigned a topic to me that is a departure from the subject of the evening—"An Evening with Salesmen and their Big Sales"—and has asked me to tell you something about country booksellers; but it is quite a temptation to me to take advantage of those who are to follow me, and tell about some big sales. I might repeat the story that John Lavery, then with Cassell & Co., told Mr. Adams, of D. Lothrop & Co., how he sold me more than 3000 board books one morning. That was when children's books were all the "go;" but I did not care, because I was only charged on the bill for about 1200. Then there was the story, not so old, that "Pop" Walton told Jack Hopkins, of Thos. Y. Crowell & Co., of how he came into my store one rainy evening with a catalogue, and sold me "steen"-hundred dollars' worth in an hour and a half. Then Harry Schram, of Chicago, told an admiring crowd of travelling men at the American House, Boston, how he ran down to New Bedford and sold me a bill of $750 of picture mouldings. I also go back to the good old days of the Trade Sale down on Broadway, where old "Jo." Foster—we all remember him and his grapes—swung the gavel. Well, he started in one day to stop us small people from crying our "Balance," and, as a result, I was the Horrible example, and got about 700 of Lee & Shepard's Illustrated Hymns. Fortunately we got rid of them all. But I must not encroach further upon this subject.

The business now carried on by me was established by my father, in 1864, for the sale of school-books and school supplies. There was money in school-books then. In those days we also made our own ink—in the back of the store—and sold it at a dollar a gallon. There was one drawback. In those days clergymen had their extra discount, and every school ma'am had her extra ten per cent.; between them and those who had no discounts at all the bookseller was kept guessing. Now we give a twenty per cent. discount on most books to all; and twenty-five per cent. on many.

One of my early recollections of bookselling carries me back to the time when "Helen's Babies," "That Husband of Mine," and "That Wife of Mine," were published. On the day the latter was published the sidewalk in front of A. K. Loring's store in Boston was blocked with people eager to pay fifty cents for a book which to-day we might have difficulty in selling for ten cents.

In 1883, when I assumed charge of the business, one-third of our annual sales was school-books. In 1884, when Massachusetts passed the first Free Text-Book Law, we tried our hand at supplying the cities and towns, and had more funny experiences with school committees than profit in doing business. Owing to the loss of so large a part of my retail business, I began to look around and commenced to add other lines. At that time we sold only books, stationery, and a very few periodicals. We have carried on a circulating library since the sixties, and still continue it, with a circulation of about 25,000 a year, at one cent a day. We now add about 400 periodicals a month, and take subscriptions for them when they have circulated a month. By doing this, and by keeping up with the latest fiction, we have held on to the business, notwithstanding paper novels and ten-cent magazines.

About 1892-3 competition was pretty strong, and we were beginning to feel the effects of Boston Sunday newspaper advertising and cheap book catalogues distributed through the mails, so we looked around again, and this time found a man in the music and picture-framing business, with a store and a lease. This we purchased, and added it to our business, although he advised us, after the sale, to get out of the music part of it; but we hung on, and are "still in it." About this time we also added a news-stand and a department of artists' materials.

As I visited other cities, I looked about, and decided that the Department Store idea was a good one. Many lines of goods give business all the time. My clerks ten years ago didn't have anything to do during January, February, March, July, and August when we had only the book business. Now something is going every month, and I feel that the bookseller's salvation lies in selling something at a profit, so that he can afford to continue in the finest profession in existence—the art of selling books.

In speaking most interestingly of his visit to Cuba, Mr. Hutchinson said that strangely enough he had run across many bookstores in Havana, but they were all small and dark, and stocked principally with second-hand French and Spanish books. D. Appleton & Co. seem to be represented by a branch store that displays their firm-name conspicuously. It is by far the most progressive bookstore in Havana, and is presided over by a Cuban who speaks English fairly well. In one small, dingy old bookshop near his hotel—The Pasaje—Mr. Hutchinson found this sign:

NO BOOKS READ HERE.

THIS SHOP TOO SMALL.

The stationery stores in Havana, as a rule, are larger than the bookstores, but the goods seem to be obsolete so far as style is concerned, and very much shopworn. Writing paper is uniformly as large as our foolscap, and the quality little better than our ordinary book paper. The wrapping paper is dark and coarse, and nearly all of it comes from Spain. Mr. Hutchinson found that most of the employees, especially those in wholesale houses, live on the premises, and take their meals in the rear of the store. Breakfast is served at about half-past ten, and lasts for about an hour. During that time all hands and the employers sit down together, and business is suspended.

In closing, Mr. Hutchinson gave it as his opinion that the business outlook is most satisfactory; and that, as soon as a government is established that will command the respect and confidence of business men generally, a large and profitable commerce in many lines will be opened up with the United States.

Mr. Hutchinson's remarks were heartily applauded, and the conclusion of his cheerful reminiscences left everybody in good humor and quite ready to enjoy all that was to follow.

As the salesmen who were expected to tell "big stories" of their sales were conspicuous by their absence, this part of the programme was filled up by a number of volunteers who told stories of sales that others had made; and so the evening was pleasantly passed until the hour hand of the clock had fairly reached eleven.

GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM ON COPYRIGHT AMENDMENT.

THE letter which Alfred Austin, Poet-Laureate of England, wrote to John Hay, the gist of which was given in our last week's issue, has excited considerable attention among publishers, printers, and literary men in this country. Among those approached by a representative of the New York Tribune, for an opinion on the letter, was George Haven Putnam, who represents the printing as well as publishing interests, and whose opinions on questions of copyright always command deserved attention. Mr. Putnam, according to the Tribune of the 9th inst., is reported to have said: "The repeal of that clause would practically mean that this country would join the Berne Convention. This convention consisted of representatives from all the principal European countries, and it established a uniform copyright law for Europe. Our own country, through the copyright law passed by Congress in 1891, has held aloof, and this divergence is due almost entirely to that manufacturing clause. In other respects our law is practically the same as that laid down by the Berne Convention. I do not think a satisfactory copyright law can be established by ordinary legislation. Our present law was so hacked to pieces and juggled by the various amendments made to it before it was finally passed that it is nothing but a jumble. The only way to do is to have an international commission of copyright experts appointed which shall spend a year or two in carefully investigating and considering, and then shall have power to make a uniform, well-constructed law for all nations."

J. N. WING LIBRARIAN OF N. Y. FREE CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

J. NORRIS WING, who for nearly nineteen years has been connected with the library department of Charles Scribner's Sons, was selected on the 11th inst. librarian of the New York Free Circulating Library, to succeed Arthur E. Bostwick, who resigned a short time ago.

Mr. Wing is a Virginian, having been born forty-seven years ago near Lynchburg, Va. His father, E. N. Wing, was engineer of the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad, and built High Bridge, over the Appomattox River, at Farmville, Va. The son was educated in the public schools of New York, and entered the College of the City of New York; but before closing his first year he accepted a position in the Mercantile Library. He was connected with the library thirteen years, and became first assistant librarian. Conscientious in the smallest as well as in the larger matters relating to his duties, Mr. Wing worked almost unceasingly. The result was that he suffered in health and was obliged to retire for a time from active work.

In 1880 he took charge of the large and growing library business of Charles Scribner's Sons, for which position his library training admirably fitted him. During the years he has been engaged in business he has kept in close touch with library progress. He is a member of the American Library Association and of the New York Library Club, and has for the last six years been the treasurer of the New York State Library Association. Mr. Wing, while faithful to his first love, the library, was no less loyal and devoted to the profession which he adopted, of which he has always been an honored member. He was one of the earlier and active members of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association, which he served for many years as a trustee. He was also one of the organizers of the Booksellers' League, whose members twice elected him its president, and at the recent annual meeting chose him as its First Vice-president. Mr. Wing is the second bookseller to become librarian of the New York Free Circulating Library, his predecessor, Mr. Bostwick, having been connected for a number of years with the house of D. Appleton & Co.

RELICS OF THE BASKERVILLE PRESS.

A COLLECTION of books from the famous Birmingham press of John Baskerville is to be sold in London on the 20th inst. One treasure in the lot is the copy of Milton's "Poetical Works" printed in 1758 in the original folded sheets, uncut, with sixteen pages torn half-way up the centre to be cancelled, and the sixteen revised pages to supply them. There will also be sold an autograph letter of Baskerville, written to Horace Walpole in 1762, speaking bitterly of the want of public appreciation of his work. Baskerville writes:

I have taken the liberty of sending you a specimen of mine begun ten years ago at the age of forty, and prosecuted ever since with the utmost care and attention, and the strongest presumption that if I could fairly excel in this divine art it would make my affairs easy, or at least give me bread. But alas! in both I was mistaken. . . . My folio Bible is pretty far advanced at Cambridge, which will cost me near £3000. If this does not sell I shall be obliged to sacrifice a small patrimony, which brings me in £74 a year, to this business of printing; which I am heartily tired of, and repent I ever attempted.

MOSES W. DODD.

MOSES W. DODD, the founder of the publishing house of Dodd, Mead & Co., died at his residence, No. 23 West 12th Street, New York, on the 8th inst. He was born in Bloomfield, N. J., November 11, 1813. He studied at the local academy, and prepared himself for Princeton College, from which he was graduated in 1837. He then entered the Theological Seminary at Princeton, but ill-health, resulting from hard study, obliged him to abandon his ambition of becoming a clergyman.

In 1839 Mr. Dodd was admitted to partnership in the book business of John S. Taylor, who a short time before had started as a publisher of theological and religious books, but who withdrew from the firm in the following year. He brought to the publishing business the same energy and the same eager desire for honest success that had characterized his studies in the college and seminary. He had always been a great lover of the literature he was now to place before the public. He knew the tools with which he had to work, and he had faith in them. Circumstances have shown that he also knew his public and had faith in it as well. In neither case was his faith misplaced, and for thirty years the name of M. W. Dodd remained above his place of business, while the transactions carried on therein increased in importance and number.

In the earlier years of Mr. Dodd's business career he was established in the old Brick Church Chapel building, on the site now occupied by the New York Times building. This was then almost the very centre of the book trade, with Daniel Appleton & Co. at 200 Broadway, Baker & Scribner next door, at 145 Nassau Street and 36 Park Row, A. S. Barnes & Co., at 51 John Street, Robert Carter, at 58 Canal Street, C. S. Francis, at 253 Broadway, Harper Brothers, at 82 Cliff Street, Mark H. Newman & Co., across the Park at 199 Broadway, and Wiley & Putnam below, at 161 Broadway. In his store was kept a register of names and addresses of the many visitors to the city who attended the May anniversaries.

In 1856 Mr. Dodd removed to 506 Broadway, near Spring Street, which was then considered a more revolutionary move than that now proposed by his successors who are soon to locate at Thirty-fifth Street and Fifth Avenue.

In 1870 Mr. Dodd retired from business and was succeeded by his son, Frank H. Dodd, and Edward Spencer Mead, a nephew of Robert Hoe, the press-builder, whose sister, Rachel, had become Mr. Dodd's wife thirty years before. Later, when Bleecker Van Wagenen was admitted to partnership, the firm-name became Dodd, Mead & Co., which it has remained until the present. Mr. Mead died January 10, 1894. Robert H. Dodd, a younger son of Moses W. Dodd, is also a member of the firm. Early in the seventies the firm removed to 762 Broadway, then to 751 and 753 Broadway, and subsequently to Fifth Avenue and Twenty-first Street.

Mr. Dodd was an active and prominent member of the Presbyterian church, and for more than fifty years served as ruling elder in the University Place Presbyterian Church. He devoted much of his leisure to an interest in painting and music, more particularly in church music. His wife died two years ago, and he is survived by five sons: Frank H. and Robert H., of the present firm of publishers; the Rev. Ira S. Dodd, of Riverdale, N. Y.; Charles T. and William.

Mr. Dodd had been in comparatively good health up to about a week ago. His death was caused by a complication of diseases.

OBITUARY NOTES.

As we go to press the sad news of the sudden death, on the 13th inst., of George L. Kay reaches us. Mr. Kay was the manager of the Kay Printing House, the printers of the periodical publications of this office. For five or six years he had been in sole charge of the affairs of the printing office and had endeared himself to all through his many sterling qualities and his gentlemanly manner.

GEORGE KELLEY CUTLER died at his home in Ware, Mass., March 31, from the effects of a stroke of paralysis which he had suffered about a year ago. Mr. Cutler was born in Greenwich, Conn., in 1822, and went to Ware in 1847, where he has since lived. In 1849 he bought a bookstore on Main Street and did business there until 1890, when he sold out to Herbert H. Turner and retired from active work.

SIR MONIER MONIER-WILLIAMS, Boden Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Oxford, died on the 11th inst. Professor Monier-Williams was born at Bombay, November 12, 1819. Among his publications are the standard Sanskrit Grammar and the English-Sanskrit Dictionary, used at Oxford and Cambridge; "Introduction to Hindustani," "Application of Roman Alphabet to Indian Languages," "Sanskrit Manual," "Indian Epoch Poetry," "Religious Thought and Life in India," "Holy Bible and Sacred Books of the East," "Study of Sanskrit in Relation to Missionary Work," "Hinduism," "Modern India and Indians," "Nalopakhyaṇa," "Buddhism," "Brahmanism," "Indian Wisdom," and "Bagh O Bahar."

RICHARD R. DONNELLEY, of the firm of R. R. Donnelley & Sons, of Chicago, publishers and printers, died suddenly on the 8th inst., at his residence, 4609 Woodlawn Avenue, Chicago. He was born in Hamilton, Ontario, in 1836, and began his business career as publisher in the Dominion. Before the war he went to New Orleans, where he became foreman of The True Delta. In 1866 he removed to Chicago and became a member of the firm of Church, Goodman & Donnelley. This firm was succeeded by Donnelley, Gassette & Loyd, then by Donnelley, Loyd & Co., and finally by R. R. Donnelley & Sons. In 1877 Donnelley, Gassette & Co. began publishing The Boys' Winter Evening Library and The Fireside Library. Later their successors founded the Lakeside Library Publishing Company and began the publication of The Lakeside Library. In 1876 Donnelley began publishing "The Chicago Directory." "The Chicago Blue Book," a directory of Chicago society, is also published by the Chicago Directory Company, one of the Donnelley concerns. Mr. Donnelley married in 1863, and four children were born of the union, all of whom survive him.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have nearly ready "True Tales of the Insects," by L. N. Badenoch, a large octavo volume with forty-four illustrations.

M. F. MANSFIELD & A. WESSELS will publish shortly "A Book of Giants," by William Strange, text and illustrations being by this artist, and uniform with "Aubrey Beardsley," by Arthur Symons.

THE JERSEY CITY WOMAN'S CLUB, Jersey City, N. J., have just published a neat volume entitled "Jersey City and its Historic Sites," by Harriet Phillips Eaton, who has brought together much valuable and interesting information relating to the subject.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. have just published a volume entitled "Contemporary History of the World," by Prof. Edwin A. Grosvenor, of Amherst College, who gives an outline of the most prominent political events in Europe and North America during the last fifty years.

SILVER, BURDETT & Co., Boston, will publish to-day the third book of "The Land of Song," compiled for school use by Katherine H. Shute and Dr. Larkin Dunton. They will publish early in May a volume entitled "Colonial Massachusetts, stories of the Old Bay State," by Mrs. S. E. Dawes.

D. C. HEATH & Co. will publish immediately "Stille Wasser," three representative stories by Wildenbruch, Hoffman, and Krane. These are provided with notes and vocabulary by Dr. Wilhelm Bernhardt, and are sure of a ready welcome in schools and colleges, where such charming bits of German literature are so desirable for elementary reading.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have decided to postpone publishing the popular edition of Paul Leicester Ford's study of "The New England Primer." The expensive illustrated edition was sold out shortly after publication. The forthcoming cheaper one will contain all the facsimiles and drawings that may be essential to a proper understanding of the subject.

L. C. PAGE & Co., Boston, who have taken over from George H. Richmond & Son D'Annunzio's works, promise shortly a new volume by the same author, entitled "Fire." They will also hereafter be the publishers of Magda Stuart Sindici's works. They announce as nearly ready "Yale, her Campus, Class-rooms, and Athletics," by Walter Camp and Lewis S. Welch, with many half-tone illustrations.

REV. STEPHEN D. PEET, editor of The American Antiquarian, will publish shortly a work entitled "The Beginnings of Architecture, the connecting links between prehistoric and historic structures," in the preparation of which Dr. Peet has spent over twenty years. The work will give the results of the latest discoveries and explorations in the East, and will also point out the growth of architecture in China, Africa, Polynesia, and America.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS announce definitely that "The Life of George Borrow, being the life, writings, and correspondence of George Borrow, 1803-1881," by Dr. William I. Knapp, will appear before the end of the month. It has been discovered in London that Mr. Borrow's letters to the Bible Society, the supposed loss of which is lamented by Dr. Knapp in the biography, are not lost at all, and it is said in London that they will be included in a new edition of the work.

FLEMING H. REVELL Co. have just ready "In Afric's Forest and Jungle, or, six years among the Yorubans," by Rev. R. H. Stone. In the western central part of Africa, between the Bight of Benin and the Niger River, about four million people speak a language known as Yoruban. It is the history of these people, who range from black through brown to copper-colored, and are brave and patriotic and capable of a very high degree of intellectual culture, that this book tells. The contest for African empire between England and France has recently brought these people before the notice of the whole civilized world.

SMALL, MAYNARD & Co., Boston, have just ready the following first five volumes of The Beacon Biographies, edited by A. DeWolfe Howe: "Phillips Brooks," by the editor; "David G. Farragut," by James Barnes; "Robert E. Lee," by W. P. Trent; "James Russell Lowell," by Edward Everett Hale, Jr.; and "Daniel Webster," by Norman Hapgood. They will shortly publish the second five volumes of the series, which will include "Franklin," by Lindsay Swift; "Audubon," by John Burroughs; "Aaron Burr," by Henry Childs Merwin; "J. Fenimore Cooper," by W. B. Shubrick Clymer; and "Edwin Booth," by Charles Townsend Copeland.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have just ready "Letters of Carlyle to His Youngest Sister," edited, with an introduction, by Charles T. Copeland, who has taken a most judicious view of his duties in editing these letters, written to Mrs. Hanning, in Canada, from 1832 to the end of his life, and has supplied a biographical connection that is full of interesting facts. They also issue "Throne-Makers," by William Roscoe Thayer, a collection of essays, the first four relating to the "throne-makers," Bismarck, Napoleon III., Kossuth, and Garibaldi, and the remaining ones to Carlyle, Tintoret, Giordano Bruno, and Bryant; "Corn Plants," by Frederick Le Roy Sargent, giving a clear account of the six important grain plants of the world—wheat, oats, rye, barley, rice, and maize; and "Tent of Grace," a story by Adeline C. Lust, dealing with the deep-rooted race distinctions between Christian and Jew, of which the scene is Germany, and the time the middle of the century.

R. H. RUSSELL has just ready a production by the much-abused spring poet, whose title, "Just Rhymes," while very appropriate, is hardly comprehensive enough, for, besides "just rhymes," the book contains a number of very clever illustrations by Miss F. Y. Cory. As Mr. Charles Battell Loomis, who is responsible for the rhymes, says in his exceedingly short preface, (for which he apologises, however, by saying that it is necessary, if for no other reason than to make the volume bigger,) Miss Cory's pictures furnish an excellent reason for the republication in book form of the rhymes, which have appeared from time to time in Harper's, The Century, Puck, Life, The Criterion, etc., as they happened to fall into the hands of the "right editor." The book, which is bound in boards, and cleverly decorated in color by the artist, is affectionately dedicated by the author to himself. He has added to the souvenirs of Maude Adams in "The Little Minister," and of Olga Nethersole in some of the plays from her repertoire, a unique set of designs by the talented young artist, Pamela Colman Smith, illustrating some of the most picturesque characters in "Trelawny of the Wells." Each print is carefully touched up by hand and enclosed in a colored "folder." The subjects presented are "Rose Trelawny," "Imogen," "Rosen and Imogen," "Imogen and Tom Wrench," in all the color of their old-fashioned costumes, as they appear on the stage.

FOREIGN NOTES.

R. B. MARSTON, of the firm of Sampson Low, Marston & Co., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, London, E.C., would like to hear from any one having imperfect copies of the first edition (1653) of Walton's "Angler."

CHATTO & WINDUS, London, will publish directly "True Tales of Travel and Adventure," a new volume of stories of the experiences of Harry De Windt; also, a new novel by Cosmo Hamilton, entitled "Through a Keyhole."

MACMILLAN & Co. will publish at once a new and cheaper edition of the "Life of Alfred Lord Tennyson," by his son who, as most people are aware, is now on his way to Australia to take up his duties as a colonial governor.

DUCKWORTH & Co., 3 Henrietta St., Covent Garden, London, will publish this month a novel entitled "A Son of the Sea," by John Arthur Barry, who is known for his sea fiction, as exemplified by his tale entitled "Steve Brown's Bunyip."

T. FISHER UNWIN, London, will publish shortly "The Early Mountaineers," by Francis Gribble, which is spoken of as the first attempt to place a complete record of early mountaineering enterprise within the reach of the general reader. The volume will be profusely illustrated.

HUTCHINSON & Co., London, are about to publish a volume by Mrs. Hilda Gamlin, entitled "Nelson's Friendships," which presents the great admiral among his friends rather than as a naval hero, and gives a fresh view of his life, obtained by the help of authentic matter hitherto unpublished.

THE Prussian Ministry of Education on March 22 issued a circular notifying the publishing trade through its official organization, the Börsenverein, that after Easter 1901 no school-books bound or put together with wire or other metallic contrivances will be accepted by the schools. This is a modification of the order prohibiting publishers and booksellers to sell, after the date mentioned above, school-books that were not bound, sewed, or put together with thread instead of wire.

A NEW terror of the literary life is reported from England. The editor of a three-penny magazine has forwarded to such men of letters as he considers eminent or amiable enough for his purpose a pudding-basin full of gelatinous matter, with the request that they will have it warmed, press their feet well into it, and send it back. This pleasing performance is to the end that the intelligent readers of the three-penny magazine may be able to consider whether each writer has the sort of foot that would be expected from a perusal of his works, or whether the works of a man with a foot like that seem likely to be worth reading. It is rumored that one man of letters, favored with this delicate attention, sent back the basin of gelatinous matter to the editor with the request that he press his head well into it.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—Since 1896 the Old Corner Book Store, at Washington and Milk Streets, although running under the name of Damrell & Upham, has been under the sole proprietorship of Henry M. Upham. But Mr. Upham now has a partner, George A. Moore, although the firm-name will remain as at present. Mr. Moore has been the buyer for the Old Corner since 1890, taking that place at the unusually early age of twenty, having been born in Boston in 1870. While attending the English High School in 1885 he decided to go into business, and became a boy in the store where he is now a partner, with the firm of Cupples, Upham & Co., which had succeeded A. Williams & Co. in 1883. The Old Corner has just closed its seventieth year as a bookstore. It was in 1828 that Carter & Hendee began the business that has gone down through Ticknor & Fields, E. P. Dutton & Co., and Alexander Williams to the present day.

ELLSWORTH, ME.—Frederick A. Coombs has sold his stationery and book store to K. K. Thompson, of Trenton. Miss Minnie Thompson will carry on the business at the same stand.

JAMESBORO, ARK.—J. T. Edgar, bookseller, has sold out.

LANCASTER, PA.—Lydia M. Flynn, bookseller and stationer, is selling out.

NEWARK, N. J.—Noah Farnham Morrison will remove to 893 Broad Street, a few doors below his present quarters. He will have largely increased floor space and be able to make a better display.

NEW YORK CITY.—William Jackson, for six years with Leggat Brothers, and during the last four years buyer for Abrahams & Strauss of Brooklyn, and John Hovendon, who hardly needs an introduction to the trade, have formed a partnership under the firm name of Jackson & Hovendon, and have bought the second-hand book business of Thomas Keane, at 28 Ann Street. They expect to make a first-class bookstore of the place.

PERRY, N. Y.—E. H. Wygant has sold his book and stationery business here to S. F. Lang, who for the past three years has conducted the same kind of business in Coopers-town.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—Talbot Brothers, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

APRIL 21, 3 P.M.—Miscellaneous, including a remarkable collection of architectural plates. (293 lots.)—Bangs.

APRIL 22, 3 P.M.—Early English literature, early printed books, old American almanacs, etc. (296 lots.)—Bangs.

APRIL 24-28, 3 P.M.—The fifth part of the stock of George H. Richmond & Co., successors to D. G. Francis and S. B. Luyster. (1501-3000 lots.)—Bangs. The sixth is in preparation.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

For advertising rates see page 596, issue for April 1, 1899.

Have Ready To-Day:

In the International Theological Library.

THE THEOLOGY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

By GEORGE B. STEVENS, Ph.D., D.D., Professor of Systematic Theology in Yale University. Octavo, $2.50 net.

The aim of this volume is to set forth, in systematic form, the doctrinal contents of the New Testament according to its natural divisions. The book is not apologetic or controversial; it is expository, not defensive.

ON THE EDGE OF THE EMPIRE.

By EDGAR JEPSON and Captain D. BEAMES. 12mo, $1.50.

The "Empire" in this book is the British Empire, and its "edge" the Indian frontier. The striking qualities of the stories collected under this descriptive title are the intensity and vividness that characterize Anglo-Saxon adventures, and the wealth and accuracy of the local color of which the scene is so prodigal. The following headings of the several parts of the book give some idea of its scene and character—In the Lines; On the Bloody Border; In the Bazaar; Elsewhere.

RETROSPECTS AND PROSPECTS.

Descriptive and Historical Essays. By SIDNEY LANIER. 12mo, $1.50.

A volume of hitherto uncollected papers, which, while covering a wide range of subjects, are all marked by a strong, earnest, and eager attitude on the part of the author toward the world, and by a vigorous literary treatment characteristic of the author's writings in prose. These qualities will give the volume a special interest for the admirers of Mr. Lanier's poetry.

FOUR IMPORTANT BOOKS:

IN THE KLONDYKE.

By FREDERICK PALMER. With many illustrations from photographs. 12mo, $1.50.

A most satisfactory account of a winter journey, as well as of a winter residence, in the Klondyke. The author has put into his book more facts of real significance, and has succeeded in conveying a better idea of a Klondyke mining town, than has thus far been accessible elsewhere.

ON THE SOUTH AFRICAN FRONTIER.

By WILLIAM HARVEY BROWN. With 32 illustrations and 2 maps. 8vo, $3.00.

"This is by all odds the best story of adventure which the new year has brought. It is modestly yet graphically told, it is all true, and great events figure in its pages."—Boston Journal.

THE LIFE OF DANTON.

By HILAIRE BELLOC. With portrait. 440 pp., octavo, $2.50.

The first biography in English of the great Revolutionary leader that is founded on original documents.

"A book which no student of the French Revolution can afford to neglect."—M. W. H. in the New York Sun.

HOW TO KNOW THE FERNS. A Guide to the Names, Haunts, and Habits of Our Native Ferns.

By MRS. FRANCES T. PARSONS (formerly Mrs. Dana). With 144 illustrations. Crown 8vo, $1.50 net.

"The inspiration that entered into and made 'How to Know the Wild Flowers' so deservedly popular has not been lost in 'How to Know the Ferns.' . . . A world of beauty and of charm is opened up."—New York Times.

WHOLE No. 1421

Twenty-five thousand copies have been sold in one month of the special paper edition of . . .

AN ARKANSAS PLANTER,

BY OPIE READ.

An "Arkansas Planter" is a book teeming with incidents of a most romantic nature. It mirrors a phase of life but little known in the North, and embodies a description of employments and conditions as novel as interesting. In no former book has Mr. Read furnished as abundant proofs of his artist claim, and none is so consistent, so "convincing" as this.

"May be pronounced a decided success."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"An unusually strong piece of writing."—Denver News.

"Its humorous and pathetic aspects are everywhere visible, and many bits of quaint and homely philosophy are scattered through its chapters."—San Francisco Chronicle.

"Opie Read is to the Middle West what Bret Harte once was to the Pacific Coast."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Issued in the ORIENTAL LIBRARY, paper binding, 25 cents.

OTHER POPULAR COPYRIGHTED BOOKS IN PAPER.

TOLD IN THE HILLS.

By MARAH ELLIS RYAN, author of "A Pagan of the Alleghanies," "Squaw Elouise," "In Love's Domains," etc.

"A book that is more than clever. It is healthy, brave, and inspiring."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"The character of Stuart is one of the finest which have been drawn by an American woman in many a day, and it is depicted with an appreciation hardly to be expected even from a man."—Boston Herald.

CHECKED THROUGH.

By Col. RICHARD HENRY SAVAGE, author of "My Official Wife," "In the Swim," "A Modern Corsair," etc.

"Is a vivid, exciting story, full of vigor and character, skilfully conceived and carefully carried through from the first page to the last."—Bookseller, London.

DEVIL'S DICE.

By WILLIAM LE QUEUX, author of "Whoso Findeth a Wife," "Zoraida," etc.

"A good story of mystery has always been legal tender in the literary world, and this new story from the prolific pen of Mr. Le Queux is made of the genuine stuff."—Chicago Tribune.

All of the above published in the ORIENTAL LIBRARY, 25 cents each.

Important Facts About Bibles.

Notwithstanding the many different editions of the Holy Bible published, there are probably no others so well known, so popular, or which give such general satisfaction to their purchasers as those published by the old-established firm of Holman.

There is a certain individuality in the character and finish of the Holman Bibles not attained in other editions. This result is gained only by the use of the choicest materials obtainable, the employment of skilled labor only, and a knowledge and grasp of the needs of the Bible-buying public acquired in the experience of a successive business career of nearly 100 years.

Of the more recent editions issued by this house especial mention should be given the NEW INDIA PAPER EDITIONS of the Holman Self-Pronouncing Teachers' Bible, which are beautifully printed on an entirely new India Paper made especially for them. The exclusive features of this paper are wonderful opacity, marvellous thinness, beautiful color-tone, and strength and durability. A remarkable fact concerning this paper, and not the least important by any means, is that, while it bulks but $\frac{5}{8}$ of one inch to 1000 pages, the printing on one side does not show through to the other. These editions are bound in beautiful Morocco Sealskins, etc., with overlapping edges and the accompanying fine essential finishes.

Among other editions of the Holman Pronouncing Teachers' Bible of particular interest to Bible buyers are the HILPRECHT EDITIONS, which contain, in addition to the Old and New Testaments and the Helps usually to be found in a Teachers' Bible, a Series of Exclusive Illustrations (Copyrighted by A. J. Holman & Co.) of recent Archaeological Discoveries in Babylonia, Egypt, and Asia Minor, showing excavations, sarcophagi, obelisks, tablets, and other objects, with inscriptions and works of art, dating back to the early history of the human race, and in a most remarkable manner confirming many of the historical statements of the Scriptures. The illustrations are described and arranged by Prof. H. V. Hilprecht, the Eminent Assyriologist. These editions are to be had in a variety of styles in bindings and prices.

The NEW PICTORIAL EDITION, embellished with eighty full-page photo views of Bible Lands distributed throughout the text, is made in a variety of new, beautiful, and unique bindings, and is sold at reasonable prices. This is the only Pictorial Teachers' Bible published.

The LOW PRICE EDITIONS are beyond question the very best cheap Bibles published, and to those desiring a dependable low-price Bible of merit this edition is especially recommended.

The DEVOTIONAL BIBLE is an "Ideal Bible" for the family circle. Large type, yet small and compact in size. An indispensable book in the conduct of family worship.

The HOLMAN FAMILY BIBLES have been greatly improved for this season by the addition of numerous new collateral features, new electrotype plates, new and original cover designs, made especially for them, etc., etc. Over 100 styles at prices from $1.65 to $40.00 are offered in this line.

TESTAMENTS, PRAYER-BOOKS, DEVOTIONAL BOOKS, etc., are also to be had in great variety.

An Illustrated and Descriptive Catalogue, and any information desired, will be promptly sent upon request to

NOTES IN SEASON.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just ready in their International Education Series "Education by Development," by Friedrich Froebel, translated by Josephine Jarvis, consisting of essays on the training school for kindergartners, and plans for introducing children's gardens into the schools; also, "Paul Carah, Cornishman," by Charles Lee, a fresh and charming story of one of nature's beautiful spots, with a plot showing invention and a style of marked literary merit.

HERBERT S. STONE & Co. have almost ready "Can We Disarm?" by Joseph McCabe, who does not advocate immediate disarmament, and sees very clearly the difficulties which stand in the way of such a Utopian proposition, yet sees also that the world is working towards this millennium and analyzes very clearly the forces which tend in that direction. It is a book that aims to teach something to the general public which is interested in the Czar's plan from the outside.

JOHN JOSEPH McVEY, Philadelphia, has just issued the second part of "Exposition of Christian Doctrine," by a Seminary Professor, dealing with Moral, as the first part dealt with Dogma, the two forming an intermediate course of religious instruction in the Catholic faith, prepared under the approval of the Pope for the Institute of the Brothers of the Christian Schools. The new volume specially covers the "principles of human acts, the commandments of God and of the Church, the beatitudes and the Evangelical Counsels."

HARPER & BROTHERS have just issued the thirteenth and last volume of the Biographical edition of Thackeray, comprising "Ballads, Critical Reviews, Tales, Various Essays, Letters, Sketches, etc." with thirty-five full-page illustrations by the author, George Cruikshank, and John Leech, thirty-five woodcuts, three portraits of Thackeray's ancestors, and an engraving of himself. They have also just ready "Danish Fairy and Folk Tales," translated by J. Christian Bay, and profusely illustrated; and "Fur and Feather Tales," by Hamblen Sears, five narrative stories of personal experiences in different kinds of hunting and shooting.

THE MACMILLAN Co. have just ready "The Philippine Islands and Round About," by Major G. J. Younghusband, who reached Manila on the eve of its capture by the United States, and consequently takes up the account of the islands from the point where Professor Worcester left it. Also very nearly ready for issue are "The Making of Hawaii," by William Fremont Blackman, of Yale University; and "The Student's Life of Paul," by George Holley Gilbert, of the Chicago Theological Seminary. For the fall this house promises a new novel of Kentucky life, by James Lane Allen, to be entitled "The Mettle of the Pasture," which the author considers his most important contribution to literature. The title is taken from the lines in Shakespeare's "Henry V.," "And you, good yeomen, whose limbs were made in England, show us here the mettle of your pasture."

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have just ready "James Russell Lowell and His Friends," by Edward Everett Hale, with all the portraits and illustrations so eagerly looked for while the text was publishing in The Outlook. Dr. Hale was in college with Lowell and looks upon the last fifty years of life in New England from the standpoint of the contemporaries with whose lives he came in close touch while they were laying the foundations of American literature. They have also put upon the market this week a new Memorial edition of "Poems" by Henry Timrod, one of the foremost poets of the South, who died in 1867, and to whom a worthy monument is to be erected from the profits of the book; "The Complete Poetical Works of John Milton" in the Cambridge edition, with biography, introductions, annotations, etc., by William Vaughn Moody; "The Ladder of Fortune," a novel of Western American and Parisian life, by Frances Courtenay Baylor; "Through Nature to God," by John Fiske, a companion volume to his excellent "The Idea of God" and "The Destiny of Man;" and four new volumes in the Riverside Paper Series: Bynner's "Damen's Ghost," Helen Campbell's "Under Green Apple Boughs," Witherspoon's "Doctor Bar," and Alice Brown's "Fools of Nature."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles. D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Lewis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); O. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (32mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fc. 48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. mar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

- Arnold, Matthew. Sohrab and Rustum, and other poems; ed. by Louise Imogen Guiney. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. 16", (Riverside lit. ser., no. 183.) pap., net, 15 c. [1254]
- Atherton, Mrs. Gertrude Franklin. ["Frank Lin," pseud.] A daughter of the vine. N. Y., J. Lane, 1899. c. 8-300 p. por. D. cl., $1.50. [1255]
- The father of the heroine is represented as a former boon companion of Branwell Brontë, the ill-fated brother of Charlotte Brontë. While under the influence of liquor he marries an ignorant barmaid. To hide his social downfall he gives up his home in Yorkshire and comes to America, finally settling in San Francisco in the forties. With such a father and mother Nina Randolph is far from being a normal girl. The part heredity plays in her story, particularly in a love affair with a young Englishman, is painfully depicted.
- Austin, Mrs. Jane Goodwin. Betty Alden. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. 16", (Riverside pap. ser.) pap., 50 c. [1256]
- Awdry, Mrs. W. Early chapters in science: a first book of knowledge of natural history, botany, physics, and chemistry, for young people; ed. by W. F. Barrett. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1899. 18+848 p. D. cl., $2. [1257]
- The object is to provide young people, especially the junior classes in schools with an introduction to the two great divisions of science—biological and experimental—to the "World of life" and the "World of experiment." The first part of the book teaches the boy or girl to observe, the second part to question nature. Whilst the young reader is throughout led to feel he is still on the threshold of scientific knowledge, the aim has been to make the work accurate as far as it goes.
- Baylor, Frances Courtenay. The ladder of fortune. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 2+352 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1258]
- The son of a California miner climbs the ladder of fortune, and marries a woman who has the skill to spend a sufficient part of what he wins. She is ambitious to gain a footing in showy society, which she esteems as good society. Her husband is indifferent to social position, but performs what many regard as the first duty of man, by being "a good provider" of money for his family. The scene of the story is partly in Western America, partly in Paris.
- Beck, L. J. New York's Chinatown: an historical presentation of its people and places. N. Y., Bohemia Publishing Co., 1899. c. '98. 350 p. il. 8", cl., subs., $1.50. [1259]

- Bourgogne, Andrien Jean Baptiste. Memoirs of Sergeant Bourgogne, 1812-1813; comp. from the original ms. by Paul Cottin. N. Y., Doubleday & McClure Co., 1899. c. 17+356 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1262]
- The terrible Russian campaign, the burning of Moscow, and the memorable retreat, are described by a sergeant in Napoleon's Old Guard, which description practically first appeared in a French historical magazine in 1886. The events of war as seen by private soldiers are given. The volume is illustrated with reproductions of sketches made by an officer of the French army during the retreat.
- Broadley, Arthur. Chats to 'cello students. N. Y., imported by C. Scribner's Sons, 1899. 100 p. il. 12", (Strad lib., no. 7.) cl., $1. [1263]
- Brown, P. Hume. History of Scotland. V. 1, To the accession of Mary Stuart. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 19+408 p. 12", (Cambridge historical ser.) cl., net, $1.75. [1264]
- Budget (The): a reprint of the issues of the Horshamden School Budget of May 14 and 28, 1898, containing contributions by Rudyard Kipling and Max Beerbohm. N. Y., M. F. Mansfield & A. Wessels, 1899. 32 p. S. bds., net, $1. [1265]

- Davis, Harry Cassell, comp. Commencement parts: valedictories, salutations, orations,

essays, class poems, ivy orations, toasts; also original speeches and addresses for the national holidays and other occasions. N. Y., Hinds & Noble, [1899.] c. '98. 14+126 p. O. cl., $1.60. [1278]

The chief object of this book is to place before the student such models as will prompt to special effort in the preparation and delivery of his own speeches. It will be found useful, however, to individuals in every walk of life who have occasion to "take the floor" for any purpose. It is an interesting compilation of the commencement season; of orations, addresses, poems, etc., delivered by college men on many occasions, such as the banquet, the class reunion, the inauguration of a president, etc.; also specimen essays and compositions that have won prizes at school and college.

*De Quincey, T.: The confessions of an English opium eater; ed. by Walter Jerrold. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 16" (Temple classics.) cl., 50 c.; limp leath., 75 c. [1274]

*Dowse, T.: Stretch, M.D., ed. The treatment of disease by physical methods. N. Y., E. B. Treat & Co., 1899. c. 412 p. 8", cl., $2.75. [1275]

Dudenev, Mrs. H.: The maternity of Harriott Wicken. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. c. 2+320 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1276]

Harriott Wicken comes into the world with a terrible inheritance. She lives her young life with her aunt and uncle, believing herself to be their daughter. When a chance comes for her to marry her story must be told. In spite of it Daniel Darnell, a young Londoner of means, marries her. Their first child, a little girl, is an idiot. Around this child the story revolves. Harriott's unnatural hatred for it, and her desire to get rid of it, results in many repulsive episodes.

Durand, E.: Dana. Political and municipal legislation in 1898. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, 1899. 70-87 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 246.) pap., 15 c. [1277]

*Emerson, Ralph Waldo. Nature and compensation; ed. by E. W. Emerson. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. 16" (Riverside lit. ser., no. 181.) pap., net., 15 c. [1278]

*Erwin, Frank Alexander. A summary of torts. [N. Y., F. A. Erwin,] 1899. c. 7+159 p. O. cl., $2. [1279]

Author is professor of law in N. Y. University.

Farquhar, Anna. The professor's daughter. N. Y., Doubleday & McClure Co., 1899. c. 8-324 p. O. cl., $1.25. [1280]

The scene is a Rhode Island seacoast. An old professor and his daughter, whose eyes have suffered in close attendance upon his book researches, go there to recruit. The girl changes from "a woman of bones, covered with spirit instead of flesh," into the heroine of a love-story, in which natural scenery is delightfully described.

Fiske, J.: Through nature to God. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 15+194 p. S. cl., $1. [1281]

This little book is the natural sequel to two previous works of Mr. Fiske—"The idea of God, as effected by modern knowledge," and "The destiny of man, viewed in the light of his origin." It seeks "to solve the tremendous mystery of evil so as to give man a fuller sense of his high calling and a firmer assurance of the infinite wisdom and benignity." It shows the range and power of love and self-sacrifice, and emphasizes the religious lesson which nature teaches.

Froebel, F.: Friedrich Froebel's education by development: the second part of "The pedagogics of the kindergarten"; tr. by Josephine Davis. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 26+347 p. D. (International education ser., no. 44.) cl., $1.50. [1282]

In a former volume (no. 30 of this series) nearly one-half of the essays brought together by Wichard Lange in a volume entitled "The pedagogics of the kindergarten" have already been printed. Those essays relate more especially to the plays and games. In the present volume the educational principles underlying the gifts are more thoroughly discussed. Again and again Froebel goes over his theory of the meaning of the ball, the sphere, the cube, and its various subdivisions.

Frommel, Emil. Eingeschnitten: eine studentengeschichte; with introd., notes, and vocabulary, by W. Bernhardt. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1899. c. 8+114 p. pors. S. (Heath's modern language ser.) cl., 80 c. [1283]

*Gilbert, G.: Holley. The student's life of Paul. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 10+279 p. 12", cl., net., $1.25. [1284]

*Goethe, J. Wolffg. v. Hermann and Dorothea; with introd. and notes by Ja. Taft Hatfield. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 54+187 p. 12", cl., net., 60 c. [1285]

*Goltz, Colmar, Freiherr von der. The conduct of war: a short treatise on its most important branches and guiding rules; tr. by G. F. Levenson. N. Y., imported by C. Scribner's Sons, 1899. 8" (Wolseley military ser.) cl., $3.50. [1286]

Grundtvig, Svend, Kristensen, E. T., Bon-desen, Ingvor, and Budde, L. Danish fairy and folk tales: a collection of popular stories and fairy tales; from the Danish by J. Christian Bay. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 11+298 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1287]

A collection of forty-eight fairy and folk tales from the Danish. They are told in the quaint style of Andersen and the Grimms. Here and there in the volume one recognizes an old friend, though the language and the material used are new.

Hale, E.: Everett. James Russell Lowell and his friends. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. '98. 8+301 p. pors. facsimiles, il. O. cl., $3. [1288]

Dr. Hale was in college with Lowell, and they were intimate friends. Their lives were very different, but Dr. Hale lived in the same surroundings in which Lowell spent most of his life, so that he has personal recollections of the people, the places, and the affairs in which Lowell was himself largely engaged. Lowell is, of course, the hero of the book, which contains a brief review of the last fifty years in Eastern New England, from a point of view not unlike that which Lowell himself would have taken.

*Half a hundred stories for the little people. Springfield, Mass., Milton Bradley Co., 1899. 214 p. 16", cl., 75 c. [1289]

Hall, Tom. Tales. N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., [1899.] c. 5+310 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1290]

Twenty-seven short stories that have appeared in Munsey's Magazine, Frank Leslie's Weekly, Harper's Weekly, and other periodicals.

Harrison, Mrs. Constance Cary, [Mrs. Burton Harrison.] A triple entanglement. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1899. 2-272 p. il. D. buckram, $1.25. [1291]

The characters are Mrs. Wallis and her son Stuart (rich Americans), General Severn, an English retired army officer, and his granddaughter Enid, studying art, and Mrs. Sutton, a rich English widow whose husband had been in trade, and her adopted son Algeron, an American born, with great personal beauty and a great lack of principle. These people are travelling in Europe, where they all meet by accident; love is the motive power which draws the young people together.

Hewlett, Maurice. Pan and the young shepherd: a pastoral in two acts. N. Y., J. Lane, 1899. c. 8+140 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1292]

The love-story of the young shepherd Neanias, who finds his mate in Aglaë, one of the daughters of earth. The pastoral is in dramatic form, the actors being shepherds, rustics, daughters of earth, and the god Pan.

- While primarily of local interest, the book appeals to all students of local finance who will recognize many phases of the experience of Baltimore as typical of the American city. The author traces in detail the development of municipal expenditure, revenue, indebtedness and financial administration through the several periods of pre-corporate and corporate history. It has been found desirable to make use almost exclusively of original sources, and to emphasize the influence of administrative change upon fiscal growth. The narrative proper is supplemented by critical comment and constructive suggestion. The work is fully equipped with the requisite statistical appendices. Bibliographical note (2 p.).

"This little sketch of my father's life has been attempted at the wish not only of many personal friends, but also of some who have only known him through the 'Golden treasury,' or his hymns. It has been greatly aided by his own journals, which are quoted at some length, for in them he speaks for himself, expressing many thoughts and opinions which could not otherwise have been so plainly given. I have tried to show my father both as a man of true poetical feeling, possessed of the purest taste in art and literature, and also as one who was loved by an almost infinite number of friends. . . ."—Preface.

Though the author has not hesitated to criticize Protestant theology frankly and fearlessly, his words have been dictated by no unfriendly spirit, but, on the contrary, by a deep and loving sympathy. It had been his aim to avoid controversy; to show that church doctrines, apart from those exaggerations which challenge controversy, are really Bible truths. In the chapters on "Apostolic succession" and "Christian sacerdotalism" he has followed, sometimes quite closely, the line of thought marked out by Canon Moberly in his work on "Ministerial priesthood."

These "tales" consist of five narrative stories of personal experiences in different kinds of hunting and shooting. They are simple, straightforward accounts of pleasant trips after game birds along the United States coast, after big game in Norway, Canada, and France, and upland birds on a preserve. It is evidently the purpose of the book to express what has long been a familiar truth to sportsmen, but not perhaps so well understood by others, that the mere securing of a specified number of birds or beasts, the actual killing of numbers of animals, plays a very small part in a sportsman's life.

- The author, who is the editor of the English Reviews of Reviews, has lately returned from a trip to all the capitals of Europe, where he has talked with the important men of each country, from the Czar of Russia down, on the question of a possible "United States of Europe." In his book he gives the views of the statesmen of the old world on the political situation of 1899, in the light of the Czar's Peace Rescript and of American "Expansion." Besides treating of America's task in the West Indies and Philippines, the "Chinese Puzzle," South African problems, the Fashoda muddle, the Concert of Europe and its work in Crete and Candia, and many other matters of current interest, Mr. Stead forecasts very interestingly the immediate political future. More than a hundred portraits, views, and maps illustrate the volume.

- This work is neither apologetic nor controversial. It seeks to expound, not to defend. It sets forth, in systematic form, the doctrinal contents of the New Testament according to its natural divisions. The general method pursued is that which is now common in this branch of theological science. Brief explanations of the mode of treating certain portions of the New Testament, with respect to which important critical differences exist among scholars, are given in the chapters introductory to the several parts of the work. There is a select bibliography (4 p.), which comprises the most important recent literature of the subject. Author is Dwight professor of systematic theology in Yale University.

- This is the first published set of woodcuts by the artist who has made his reputation as an etcher. The twelve original wood engravings illustrate humorous verses describing the struggles of a giant with the giants of modern invention, such as steam rollers, bicycles, electric wires, torpedoes, motor cars, etc. The book seems intended for children, who will, however, miss many of its hits at the hobbies and isms of the day.

- The present edition (the 4th) has been revised, enlarged, and improved. It contains a dictionary of about 24,000 carefully arranged sentences, with code word and cipher to each; also, about 1800 code words and ciphers, against which further messages suited to each particular user of the code can be written in paper suitably adapted to writing with ink or pencil being used in printing this list. The aim of the author has been to render the work as comprehensive, correct, and complete as possible. Every care has been given in recompiling the code to satisfy the rules and requirements of the International Telegraphic Convention.

PICK-UPS.

Customer: I'm froze so, I want something exciting. Can you recommend anything? Bookseller: Yes, indeed, sir. Here's Phroso.—Bookseller, Newsdealer and Stationer.

THE AMENITIES OF BOOKSELLING.—There is a bookseller in London who affixes maxims of his own to the piles of books displayed in his shop. Here is his latest deliverance: "One of the last things to dawn on you, but one of the first to dawn on your friends, is that you are a fool."

HE KNOWS THE DIFFERENCE.—Justin Huntly McCarthy, who has been lecturing in the States on Omar Khayyám, told a friend, the other day, that after a lecture in Brooklyn a member of the audience thanked him for his exposition, and added: "I never before knew the difference between Omar Khayyám and Hunyadi Janos."

HE KNEW HIS CALENDAR.—In a New York bookstore the young man who is supposed to keep the stock in order and dusted, was one morning asked by one of his superiors, in a rather superior manner, whether he ever paid any attention to a certain table on which was kept a collection of books on fish and fishing. "Oh yes, Mr. West," was the unhesitating reply, "I dust these every Friday."

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 22, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the Weekly solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION OF 1900.

It has become time when arrangements should be made for the representation of the American book trade at the great exposition to which Paris is to give itself over in 1900, planned to be the wonder of the world, and to excel even that at Chicago. We are glad to note the arrival of M. Terquem, who has become the tutelary genius of the American book trade with reference to book exhibits at Paris, and we commend him to the courtesy of the trade. It is, of course, not to be expected that pecuniary benefit, except in the most indirect degree, can accrue to American publishers from participation in this exhibition, held in a foreign country, and amidst foreign tongues; but it is desirable, as a matter of patriotism and international comity, that American publishers should be willing to put themselves to the small trouble and expense involved in participation.

The display of books at the exposition in Paris in 1889 was, on the whole, creditable to the American book trade, although unfortunately some of our leading houses were not represented. It is to be hoped, therefore, that this time there may be included all the leaders of the trade and a wide representation of the younger and smaller houses. The arrangements proposed by M. Terquem are such that publishers will have no concern as to their individual exhibits, except to see that they are properly started from this country; and the reasonable fee per running foot of space, which he proposes to charge, is to cover all expenses of shipping and returning as well as handling in Paris. M. Terquem's personal pecuniary return from this is practically nothing, as he gives himself to the work in connection with his agency in Paris for American and English producers, and in a liberal and patriotic spirit. We trust heartily that his efforts to obtain a creditable representation of America at Paris will be seconded by the willing co-operation of the American book trade.

CONGRESS OF FRENCH BOOKSELLERS.

In response to a circular issued by the Chambre syndicale des librairies de France, representatives of 135 firms of booksellers, met at the Cercle de la Librairie, at Paris, March 20 and 21. Felix Baranger of the Syndical Chamber acted as chairman.

The proceedings were begun by a report of M. Tallandier on raising the price of books in general literature. M. Tallandier suggested that the system applied to legal and medical works should be applied to books in general, and that everything appearing in numbers or parts, and all periodicals and newspapers, whether illustrated or not, and works published by subscription, should be sold at the published price without any discount.

Some very interesting remarks were exchanged as to this proposition, and several motions in favor of a return purely and simply to the sale at published prices were made. Ultimately M. Tallandier's recommendations were adopted almost unanimously, only three negative votes being given.

Then came the question of raising the price of volumes at 3fr. 50c., on which M. Taride reported, and which led to a very warm debate, but without any definite solution. On M. Taride's recommendation, a commission was nominated to arrange with the publishers that whatever the published price may hereafter be, whether 2fr. 75c. or 3fr., a discount of 25 per cent. must be reserved to booksellers. This motion was also carried with only three dissentients.

The third subject for consideration was: "The Book Trade for Booksellers," which has given rise to much controversy and discussion during recent years. M. Floury, the reporter, advised that the most urgent measures be taken to induce publishers to decide with the least possible delay to reserve the sale of books solely to booksellers, to the exclusion of all large bazaars, etc. This recommendation was adopted unanimously.

M. Quaré, of Lille, reporting on the fourth question—"Classics and Contracts"—recommended (1) that booksellers should personally endeavor to induce municipal bodies to separate in their contracts prize books, classical books, and class books; (2) that publishers be requested to take into consideration favored purchasers, such as teachers, and to take measures against booksellers who, when tendering for contracts, give exaggerated discounts. This was unanimously agreed to.

A. Roux stated the steps which had been taken at the Ministry of Public Works to obtain a reduction on rates of carriage by slow train as regards the book trade. It was decided to await the Minister's reply.

The conclusion of Ph. Arnauné's report on religious literature—to nominate a commission of five members to wait upon publishers of religious books, with a view to regulating the dealings between publishers and booksellers—was adopted.

After reading the report of M. Seyès it was unanimously resolved that the departments of the Seine, Seine and Marne, and Seine and Oise ought to re-enter into the common law in so far as concerns the application of the price for the sale of classical books.

There was a very lively debate on the regulations for the sale of prize books, on which subject M. Bousrez had rendered a substantial report, nearly all the members present taking part in the discussion. After presentation of several orders of the day, the following, drawn up by M. Venot, and amended by M. Milon, was adopted: "Prize books shall be assimilated with classical books, that is to say, a discount of twenty per cent. without the thirteenth."

A banquet took place on the evening of March 21 at the Restaurant Notia, the guests including nearly 200 members of the Congress. M. Baranger presided, supported by René Fourret, president of the Cercle de la Librairie, and Jules Hetzel, ex-president, and president of the Syndicate of Publishers.

NEW FACTS ABOUT SHAKESPEARE IN FOLIO.

SIDNEY LEE, now recognized as one of our chief authorities on Shakespearean literature, recently lectured at the Royal Institution on "Shakespeare in Folio." He began by saying that, if lovers of literature wished to consecrate a day to Shakespeare's memory, he would recommend them to choose November 8, when in 1623 the first folio was published, which revealed the full range of his genius. The scheme of publishing a collected edition of Shakespeare's plays was initiated seven years after his death by a printer, named William Jaggard, with offices in Fleet Street and the Barbican, who held the right of printing the playbills for the London theatres. To carry out the undertaking, Jaggard formed a small syndicate with his son Isaac, also a printer, three booksellers, and John Hemynge and Henry Condell, the two chief managers of the company of actors of which Shakespeare had been a member in his lifetime. These actor-managers were the owners of the manuscripts of Shakespeare's plays and brought out the first folio. The first folio was carelessly printed, and extant copies show many variations among themselves owing to the compositors' incapacity. The pagination is most irregular; but, in spite of all the mechanical defects, the first folio is the most valuable contribution to literature that ever issued from a printing office. It was difficult to estimate how many of the first folio survived, but about 200 had been traced during the present century, and of these less than twenty were perfect, with the portrait on the title-page and the lines by Ben Jonson on the flyleaf. The second folio appeared in 1632; the third, which included "Pericles," and six other plays attributed to Shakespeare, but certainly not by him, in 1663; and the fourth folio in 1685. The library of the London Institution contained copies of them all, and he hoped the proprietors would keep firm hold on them, as there was no doubt England was gradually being drained of its first folios by the United States. The difficulty could only be met by an improvement in public sentiment, and by entrusting the director of the British Museum with funds to compete with the American amateur when unique Shakespearean treasures came into the market.

Mr. Lee then went on to give a number of interesting particulars of different copies of the folios. He exhibited a copy of the first folio, which, as far as he knew, had hitherto escaped the notice of bibliographers, and now belongs to Coningsby Sibthorp, of Sudbrooke Holme, Lincoln. It was a taller copy than any other that had come to light, and the portrait on the title-page was of unexampled freshness and clearness. But its most remarkable feature was an inscription on the title-page, in a contemporary hand, the authenticity of which was unhesitatingly admitted by the expert authorities at the British Museum. This inscription attested that the copy was a presentation copy from the printer Jaggard. The arms stamped on the binding, fragments of which were in the original state, proved that Jaggard had given the book to Augustine Vincent, an officer of the Heralds' College. Independent evidence showed that Vincent and Jaggard were in friendly relations at the time. Both had been furiously denounced by Ralph Brooke, a colleague of Vincent at the College of Arms, who had also shown a certain hostility to Shakespeare, by asserting that the poet had no right to the coat-armor granted him by the Heralds' College in 1599. In 1622 Vincent had published and Jaggard had printed a book exposing Brooke's own ignorance, in which Jaggard had himself inserted a tirade against Brooke, who had ventured to question his (Jaggard's) competence as a printer. A year later, in 1623, Jaggard celebrated Brooke's discomfiture by presenting Vincent with an early impression of the first folio.

A copy of the second folio which Mr. Lee showed on this occasion, the property of Sir Henry Irving formerly belonged to Theobald, the commentator, and had afterwards passed to Dr. Johnson, and then to Samuel Ireland, whose name was remembered in connection with the Ireland forgeries.

Apocryph of the foregoing a catalogue has just been issued in London by Robson & Co., of Coventry Street, which contains an entry rarely met with in these days—that of a copy of the first edition of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dreame," printed in 4to by James Roberts, 1600, and priced at £95. Several leaves are missing, but with this exception the book is wholly sound and complete. As a rule, books of this kind are sold privately and do not find their way into catalogues. During the last twelve years only four copies of "A Midsummer Night's Dreame" have been sold by auction in England, and the prices realized—ranging from £61 to £122—show a wonderful increase over those which once prevailed. It is a matter of mere antiquarian lore that in 1688 eleven early Shakespearean quartos were sold in one lot for 12s., but as late as 1812 we find a perfect "Midsummer Night's Dreame" bringing as little as £3 3s., and this at the sale of one of the most important libraries in England.

OBITUARY NOTES.

THE belated announcement has just reached us of the death of Dr. Marcus Fayette Bridgman, at Boston, on January 20. Dr. Bridgman was the author of several volumes of verse, notably "Mosses," "Under the Pine," "Tales at the Manse," and "Mosaics." He was born at Windsor, Vt., March 11, 1824, and was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1847. He was one of the oldest members of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and practiced medicine in Boston for upwards of forty years.

MAJOR SIR ROSE LAMBERT PRICE, author and soldier, died at Pontyclun, in Wales, on the 17th inst. He was born at Trengwainton, in the County of Cornwall, July 26, 1837. He went to India during the Mutiny, and was in the storming party at the capture of Canton in 1857, and was also in the storming party at the Pei-Ho forts, and during this fight was shot through the leg. He was also present at the taking of Tangku, at the capture of the Taku forts, and at the surrender of Peking. He wrote a work entitled "The Two Americas—an account of sport and travel, with notes on men, and manners in North and South America."

MRS. HELEN STEVENS CONANT, wife of Samuel Stillman Conant, at one time managing editor of Harper's Weekly, died at the Brooklyn [N. Y.] Homoeopathic Hospital on the 17th inst. She was born at Methuen, Mass., in 1839. Her husband in 1885 disappeared mysteriously and has not been heard from since. During his life Mrs. Conant assisted him in his literary work, much of which she continued till her health began to fail. She wrote a book entitled "The Butterfly Hunters," which was published by Ticknor & Fields in 1868, and prepared for the Half-Hour Series a "Primer of German Literature" and a "Primer of Spanish Literature."

JOHN FERGUSON, a well-known journalist, and the author of a number of volumes chiefly of a psycho-physiological nature, died in London on the 3d inst. He was born in Lanarkshire, October 28, 1851, and was graduated from Glasgow University. He was for nearly twenty years a writer of special articles for the London Times; he also wrote extensively in the weekly and periodical press, notably for the Academy. He wrote for the Referee each week a philosophical and sociological article which he called "Our Handbook." His wider fame rests on his volume entitled "The Insanity of Genius." He left a work in manuscript which Grant Richards will shortly publish under the title of "The Human Machine: an Inquiry into the Divinity of Human Faculty in its Bearings upon Social Life, Religion, Education, and Politics."

WILLIAM ADEE TOWNSEND, for years a well-known figure in the book trade, died last month at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was born in New York in 1814, and started in business in 1837 by establishing the "Editors' Express," whose chief mission was to deliver by special messenger service to the editors of the New York daily newspapers the letters of their Washington correspondents one or two hours in advance of the regular mail delivery. In 1843 he became a member of the firm of Burgess, Stringer & Co., pioneer publishers of cheap editions of books, who were located on Ann Street, near Broadway, where they occupied one of the stores under Barnum's Museum. In 1848 Burgess retired from the partnership, and the firm-name became Stringer & Townsend. Two years later the new firm began publishing The International Magazine, one of the best periodicals of its day. It was edited by Rufus W. Griswold, who was assisted by Bayard Taylor, George William Curtis, and Cornelius Mathews. Though ably edited and supported by a brilliant staff of contributors, The International Magazine in time succumbed to the fierce competition of its rival, the New Monthly Magazine, which was established about one and a half years earlier than the International, by Harper & Brothers. Stringer & Townsend were among the first to make definite payments to English authors for advance sheets or manuscript of their works. In 1859-1860 the firm became W. A. Townsend & Co. The new firm devoted itself almost exclusively to publishing books that appealed to the eye as well as the intellect of the bookbuyer. Their editions of Cooper's works with the Darley plates, and their charming Household edition of Dickens' novels, are much sought after now and fetch high prices. The plates of the Household Dickens practically formed the nucleus of the publishing business of the firm of Hurd & Houghton. The plates of this edition went over from Townsend & Co. to John G. Gregory; when the latter became bankrupt Henry O. Houghton came into possession of the stock and plates. At first the edition was marketed through Sheldon & Co. Later Hurd & Houghton issued the edition under their own imprint. Townsend & Co. also engaged Henry Herbert to prepare the "Frank Forrester" books of field and forest, fish and fishing, and sports in general. In 1850 Stringer & Townsend became the American publishers of Braithwaite's Retrospect, a standard English medical periodical, and of "Epitome," also a medical classic. These two were retained by Mr. Townsend until 1883, when he retired from business. The Ann Street store of Stringer & Townsend was for many years the favorite resort of the book-lovers and society swells of half a century ago. For a time in the '70s Mr. Townsend was associated with the firm of W. A. Townsend & Adams, who did business at 434 Broome Street. Later he was president of the W. A. Townsend Publishing Company, at 153 Broadway.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

JUSTIN M'CARTHY's autobiography may be expected to appear early in May.

ARTHUR SYMONS will contribute an essay on Balzac to the May number of the Fortnightly Review, in connection with the Balzac centenary, which falls due in that month.

RUDYARD KIPLING has so far recovered from his recent severe illness that he left his hotel in New York for the Laurel House at Lakewood, N. J. He will remain there until he shall become sufficiently improved to take a longer journey.

MISS FIONA MACLEOD's new book, "The Dominion of Dreams," will be published in London during the spring. It will be akin in nature to her "Washer of the Ford," and will be divided into three sections—tales, legendary and other, with a modern setting, narratives, mainly psychological, and tales with a Pagan or old Celtic setting.

Few authors can claim so large an output as one hundred and twenty books—a small library in itself. Fewer still can boast of having restored a church, contributed $10,000 to a missionary college, and fitted out a missionary ship. This, however, is what Miss Charlotte Yonge is said by Black and White to have done. She is now, according to the same authority, in her seventy-sixth year, and lives in an ivy-clad mansion at Otterbourne, near Winchester, where she has spent the better part of her life.

ZOLA's new novel "Fécondité," or "Fruitfulness," as it will be called in English, is now finished. May 10 is the date fixed for its opening in the Paris Aurore, and October 1 for its appearance in volume form simultaneously in French, English, German, Danish, Norwegian, Italian, and Spanish. The novel is the first of a new series, which will continue with "Work," "Truth," and "Justice." M. Zola's aim in "Fécondité" is to bring before French parents, who need the lesson, the benefit of larger families.

THE trustees of Princeton University have received a letter from the Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke, of New York, accepting the English chair at the university. According to the tender of the place made to Dr. van Dyke, he is to suit his own convenience in assuming his duties. He is at present preparing a book on "The Knickerbockers," which is to be included in a series of studies of American letters edited for The Macmillan Company by Prof. G. E. Woodberry. Paul Leicester Ford is preparing for the same series a volume on "The American Historical Novel."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

MISS MARY JOHNSTON, whose "Prisoners of Hope" had such an unusual and popular success during the last season, has written for The Atlantic Monthly a serial story of Virginian early colonial life.

The Inland Printer for April has an interesting article on Theodore L. De Vinne, the scholar printer, by W. Irving May. The Inland Printer is one of the very handsomest periodical publications in this country, and indeed in the world.

THE first number of a periodical entitled La Crème has been issued by Charles E. Brown & Co., of Boston. The initial number is an attractive little booklet, with a crimson cover and rubricated margins, containing Kipling's "My Lord the Elephant," the inside pages of the cover being occupied respectively by "The Recessional" and "The Vampire." Announcements for future numbers include "Firth Highland, Gentleman," by Gilbert Parker; "A Suit Decided," by Mrs. Burton Harrison; "The Hurricane Driver," by Mary Hartwell Catherwood; and "In Verona," by Laura E. Richards.

THE first number of Lady Randolph Churchill's quarterly magazine, The Anglo-Saxon, will be published in June by John Lane. A leading feature will be the publishing of letters and old documents from the collections of private papers which are found in many English country houses and family mansions, as well as in American and colonial homes. This department will be under the supervision of Arthur Strong, librarian of the House of Lords. The illustrations will be largely engraved portraits, photogravures and lithographs. This feature will be under the supervision of Lionel Cust, the director of the National Portrait Gallery. Special attention will be paid to the binding. Every quarter some famous historical or original binding design will be reproduced on the side covers of the review. This will be carried out under the direction of Mr. Cyril Davenport, of the department of historical bindings in the British Museum, who will write a note on the binding selected for each volume. The price of each number will be $6. A list of subscribers will be printed in each quarterly issue—a revival of an old custom that will unquestionably add to the attractiveness of this periodical in the eyes of many people.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

"A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF ENGLISH MILITARY BOOKS UP TO 1642," by Captain Maurice Cockle, 4th Battalion Border Regiment, is about to be issued through the Chiswick Press.

THE sixty-second issue of "The English Catalogue of Books" dated 1898, published by Sampson Low, Marston & Co., has just reached us, the delay being explained by the fact that works issued by country and occasional publishers and for private circulation have been included. For the first time, a List of Publishers, with their addresses, has been added, which should prove of material advantage to those who use the catalogue. The catalogue is supplied in this country through the Office of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, either separately, bound in paper, or bound up with the "Annual American Catalogue," in half leather. (256 p. 8°.)

THE Austro-Hungarian Book-Trade Association (Verein der Oesterr.-Ungar. Buchhändler,) has begun the publication of the "Oesterreichische Bibliographie," edited by Carl Junker. The bibliography is to be issued weekly as a supplement to the Association's official organ, the Oesterreichisch-Ungarische Buchhändler-Correspondenz. This work will be welcomed by the book trade as well as by the librarian and scholar, inasmuch as Austria has been but inadequately provided with a national bibliography since Dr. Wurzbach was obliged in 1859 to discontinue his excellent work. The Austro-Hungarian Book-Trade Association since its organization, in 1859, has attempted in a limited way to provide its members with information concerning the output of German and Czech and Slavonian literature. But this information was necessarily meagre, and accessible as a rule only to the members of the Association. At last the demand even from the book trade for a more comprehensive bibliography became so strong that the Association has undertaken the work tentatively and only for the output of German literature, including periodicals. If the necessary support can be secured it is proposed to include the Czech and Slavonian, the Ruthenian, Slovenian, Italian Polish, Hungarian, Roumanian, and the Serbo-Croatic literatures, also prints and music. The bibliography is divided as follows: (1) Books and pamphlets, a, complete books, b, first parts of subscription books or first volumes of continuations, etc.; (2) Periodicals, a, annuals, calendars, etc., b, periodicals; and (3) Maps, charts, etc. The arrangement is under publishers, according to the alphabet, but the titles are, strangely enough, not arranged alphabetically. In fact the arrangement seems to be peculiar to itself, and decidedly inconvenient for reference in the absence of a complete and thorough index. The titles are conspicuously and continuously numbered, and are also supplied with decimal numbers according to the Dewey system. If the demand should warrant it the bibliography will also be issued printed on one side of the sheet only, so that the titles may be utilized by librarians as accession slips for their card catalogues. It is sincerely to be hoped that the experiment—for such it is for the present—will be successful and that the work may grow in extent and therefore in usefulness. (8°, 6 marks a year.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

It is announced that Lew Wallace has consented to have "Ben Hur" dramatized under the supervision of Klaw & Erlanger.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have nearly ready "Geschichten und Märchen," a very easy little collection of stories for young children beginning German, prepared by Lillian Foster, late instructor in German in the Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE UNITED BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, Dayton, O., will have ready about May 1 a book on "Heaven," by Bishop I. Weaver, which will have many illustrations. With all advance orders on this book will be sent free and prepaid the little booklet entitled "Valley of Affliction Brightened."

JAMES POTT & Co. have in press "The Old Testament from the Modern Point of View," by Rev. L. W. Batten, of the Philadelphia Divinity School, containing a chapter entitled "General Arguments against the Validity of Critical Results;" also, "The Life of James De Koven," late wardean of Racine College, by Rev. William C. Pope.

R. F. FENNO & Co. will publish shortly the first book of a series of "Captain Kettle Stories," by Cutcliffe Hyne; "Voyage of the Pulo Way," by Carlton Dawe; and "Martyrs of Empire," by Herbert C. McIlvaine. They are also bringing out new issues of Mallock's "Poverty and Progress;" "Social Equality;" "Romance of the Nineteenth Century;" and "Is Life Worth Living?"

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have for sale an album of photographs, collected during the past thirty-five years by the late William W. Howe. The collection is a unique one, and consists chiefly of old Brady photographs of the prominent men in the United States, in all walks of life. Many of the photographs in the collection are without duplicates in existence, and it is believed that it would be quite impossible to find a second album with such contents.

A BOOK-THIEF, with a hobby for literature relating to Napoleon, has been worrying the booksellers of Kansas City. H. T. Wright, a salesman in a Main Street bookstore, has the same hobby, and has thus come in special contact with the inquirer for Napoleonic books. Recently he missed Montholon's "Life of Napoleon," in four volumes, valued at $40, and a volume of "Secret Memoirs of Napoleon," worth $7.50, and called in the police, but the offender is still abroad, and the books have not yet been traced.

DREXEL BIDDLE, Philadelphia, will issue at once Clark Russell's new novel, "An Atlantic Tragedy," with six full-page illustrations by the marine artist, C. W. Snyder. An edition of W. E. Morris' "Giles Ingilby," illustrated by Spence, is also nearly ready, which will no doubt increase the great success of the large first edition. "Word for Word and Letter for Letter," a biographical romance of the Madeira Islands, is now in its sixth edition, and a new edition of A. J. Drexel Biddle's "Madeira Islands" is also in preparation.

G. W. DILLINGHAM Co. announce for publication in May "Gettysburg, Then and Now," by J. M. Vanderslice, a director and historian of the Gettysburg Memorial Association. It is a compact history of the battle, of when and how the regiments fought, and the troops they encountered, giving the losses sustained by every regiment, Union and Confederate. The work is illustrated by 125 full-page illustrations of the battlefield and of the handsomest monuments of the various regiments as they stand to-day. The work will be sold by subscription.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have nearly ready a volume of short stories by Mrs. Ballington Booth, entitled "Sleepy-Time Stories." Although intended primarily for children the book has much in it that cannot fail to interest adults, if merely from the point of view of style. Mrs. Booth is well known as the wife of the Commander of the American Volunteers. They will issue shortly a "History of American Coinage," by E. K. Watson, sometime District Attorney at Columbus, O., a member of Congress, and a commissioner appointed by President McKinley to codify the criminal laws.

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

MAY 1, 2, 3 P.M.—Library of the late Henry C. Andrews, including a special collection of music and the literature of music. (770 lots.)—Bangs.

MAY 3, 4, 3 P.M.—Scarce and curious works. (726 lots.)—Bangs.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

[C] In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

[W] Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

"THE FOWLER."

A New Novel by BEATRICE HARRADEN, author of "Ships that Pass in the Night." Now ready, and for sale everywhere.
Cloth, durably bound, 12mo, $1.50.

"This is the longest novel which Miss Harraden has yet written. It was begun soon after 'Ships that Pass in the Night,' and she has been engaged upon it ever since. It was supposed that it would be published two years ago, but on account of ill-health and other interruptions she has been unable until now to complete it to her satisfaction. The work which she has done in the meantime has been incidental and altogether subordinate to this, which she regards as by far her most important achievement. The story was to be called 'I, Too, Have Passed Through Wintry Terrors,' but this was objected to as too long and involved, and the title of 'The Fowler' was substituted. The book is an important contribution to the fiction of the day."

NOTES IN SEASON.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just ready a new romance by F. Anstey, entitled "Love Among Lions," which is said to be "a delicious little comedy, brimful of humor." They have in preparation for early publication a volume entitled "Uncle Sam's Soldiers," by O. P. Austin, chief of the Bureau of Statistics, United States Treasury, and author of "Uncle Sam's Secrets;" a new novel by Rhoda Broughton, entitled "The Game and the Candle;" and "Idylls of the Sea," a new volume by Frank T. Bullen, author of "The Cruise of the Cachalot."

HERBERT S. STONE & Co. have just issued "The Psychology of Woman," by Mrs. Laura Marholm, who recognizes womanliness as the essential qualification of woman. The fifth impression of F. Frankfort Moore's "The Jessamy Bride" is also ready, which, in view of its being dramatized, will take a new lease of life; Mr. Albert Kinross has written "An Opera and Lady Grasmere," and Martin J. Pritchard (Mrs. Augustus Moore) has completed for early publication "The Passion of Rosamond Keith," telling the thrilling story of the crucifixion of the heroine by a frantic, ignorant mob in the Far East.

DOUBLEDAY & McCLURE COMPANY announce that they have taken over from The Macmillan Company all the stock of the following books by Rudyard Kipling: "Plain Tales from the Hills;" "The Light That Failed;" "Life's Handicap" and "Stories of Mine Own People" (in one volume); "Under the Deodars," "The Phantom Rickshaw," and "Wee Willie Winkie," in one volume; "Soldiers Three," "The Story of the Gadsbys," and "In Black and White," in one volume; "Ballads and Barrack-Room Ballads;" and "Soldier Stories." They have also acquired the rights to "The Naulahka," written by Kipling and Wolcott Balestier.

DODD, MEAD & Co. publish to-day Beatrice Harraden's long-delayed novel, "The Fowler." This is the longest novel that Miss Harraden has yet written. It was begun soon after "Ships that Pass in the Night," and she has been engaged upon it ever since. The scene of the story is laid in England, and, like her first story, this is a study of character. They have also just ready Grant Allen's new volume, entitled "The European Tour," in which he advises young men to "go to Europe" instead of to "the West." They will shortly issue a new book on Dante, entitled "Iconographia Dantesca," by Dr. Ludwig Volkmann, who is, perhaps, the first critic outside of Italy who has treated exhaustively Dante's relation to art, and has traced and analyzed the influence he has exerted on successive generations in this department of the fine arts. They have also in preparation a volume of essays by Prof. H. T. Peck, editor of The Bookman. Among the subjects treated by Professor Peck are: "Stephane Mallarmé," "Honoré de Balzac," "The Human Side of Tennyson," and "Uncle Tom's Cabin in Liverpool." The volume will probably not be published before the fall.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. announce the second impression of Dr. Hale's discursive and very interesting book on "James Russell Lowell and His Friends." Among the more important of their newest books are John Fiske's little volume, "Through Nature to God," which belongs with and in some good degree completes the series which includes his "Idea of God" and "Destiny of Man;" Hon. S. W. McCall's "Thaddeus Stevens," a valuable addition to the American Statesmen Series; a Cambridge edition of Milton's Complete Poetical Works, edited with uncommon care and thoroughness by William Vaughn Moody; an English translation of "The Antigone" of Sophocles, by Professor Geo. H. Palmer, of Harvard; a handsome Memorial edition of Henry Timrod's Poems; and a volume on "Psychology and Life," by Professor Münsterberg, of Harvard, an acknowledged master in his line of study. They have just ready "Hermione and Other Poems," by Edward Rowland Sill, and "Under the Beech-Tree," poems by Arlo Bates. They have also taken over from Little, Brown & Co. "A Lad's Love," by Arlo Bates; "A Woodland Wooing," by Eleanor Putnam (Mrs. Arlo Bates,) and "Prince Vance," by Eleanor Putnam and Arlo Bates.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

- Cantwell, Fredericka Spangler. The high commission: a romance of the Spanish-American war. N. Y., F. Tennyson Neely, 1899. c. 2-288 p. D. cl., $1. [1866]
The scene of this romance is Florida during the summer of 1898. The events relate chiefly to the late war with Spain, although there are a couple of love-stories. One of the characters is a Spanish spy; a letter written to him in cipher, and sent to the Spanish Legation just on the eve of its members' departure from Washington, is the means of his discovery and imprisonment.

- Donnelly, Jos. Gordon. Jesus Delaney: a novel. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. c. 10+381 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1870]
The hero of the story is a young Mexican converted to Protestantism by the American mission at Alameda. His story is told with a quiet humor that is quite attractive by an elderly American who visits Mexico for his health. Jesus Delaney, in spite of all the prayers and care that have been bestowed upon him, falls back again and again into his original condition. The power of heredity is strong upon him, the story showing that his conversion is merely an outside garment, hiding the original Adam unchanged.

Foster, Frank Hugh. The fundamental ideas of the Roman Catholic church explained and discussed for Protestants and Catholics. Phil., Presb. Board of Pub. and Sabbath School Work, 1899. c. '98. 12+866 p. D. cl., $1.75. [1875]

The object is to set forth the system of the Roman church where it differs from Protestantism. The constant purpose has been to explain the Catholic doctrine fully and fairly from the authoritative sources, to present its ideal form, and to state the arguments for it in their full force and at as great length as the limits of the work permit. The writer is professor of theology in Pacific Theological Seminary (Congregational), Oakland, Cal.

The revolt of the young people of a Nonconformist family against the tyranny of their elders is the theme. James Mesurier was a severe, unimaginative man, whose arbitrary rule of his children resulted in much unhappiness to them. Certain forms of art and certain writers were positively forbidden them. His eldest son, who possessed some literary talent, leaves the home and makes a life for himself, in which his individuality finds play. This boy's love-story and that of his sister are told with much literary skill and sentiment.

*Primarily a book of phrases in French, with pronunciation, such as one would need in a sight-seeing tour of Paris during the exposition of 1900. There is a full list of all the sights of Paris and the suburbs, with pronunciation marked, twenty-three maps of the municipal districts of the city, naming the places of interest situated in each. An official plan in colors of the exposition grounds, twelve half-tones of famous landmarks, and a colored map, giving the railroad distance and time to Paris from all directions, supplemented by a table of railroad fares from forty-eight important European cities. There is a telegraph code, a French slang dictionary, hints on passports, and notes on the exposition. Blank pages for addresses, cash account, etc., make the "guide" a true pocket volume. [1899]

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 29, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications. All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

MR. KIPLING'S CONTROVERSY.

ONE of the most curious suits in the history of copyright is that brought by Rudyard Kipling against G. P. Putnam's Sons, to prevent the sale of his books, in their copyright editions, in the form in which the Putnams, as retail booksellers, have bound them together.

Some months ago, in view of the demand among their customers for Kipling's books in uniform shape—the only collected edition being that sold by subscription by Charles Scribner's Sons—the retail department of the Putnams purchased sheets of the copyright trade editions of all his copyrighted works from Kipling's authorized publishers, with the avowed purpose of binding them in uniform shape and selling them as a set. Some of Kipling's earlier works have no American copyright; but these also were purchased in authorized editions from the publishers who paid Kipling royalty. One book, "Departmental Ditties," etc., Kipling has preferred not to reissue in an authorized edition; but numerous editions have been printed and are sold, we believe, in all bookstores. The Putnams purchased copies of an existing edition of this book, and added also an appendix volume including "A Ken of Kipling," by W. M. Clemens, and a general index, making a set of fifteen volumes. This set was advertised as the Brushwood edition, and in one form of binding a device of an elephant's head, associated with a number of Kipling's works, was used as a binding decoration. The retail departments of G. P. Putnam's Sons and of E. P. Dutton & Co., adjoining each other on Twenty-third Street, while keen business rivals, have kept in cordial business touch with each other instead of in "cut-throat" opposition, and by arrangement between the two some of these sets were taken by E. P. Dutton & Co. for their retail shop. These sets have not been sold to the trade or marketed otherwise than through these two bookstores.

It has been a common practice of booksellers for years to bind up sets of authors, in various styles of binding, for their customers, at the holiday season and at other times, in some instances collecting from several publishers, as in the present case, different volumes needed to make a collected set. The difference in the present case is that, as retailers, these firms went a step further, and advertised this as the Brushwood edition, suggesting publishing relations. Also, there was included a volume which Kipling had desired not to continue under his authorization—involving a question of comity, difficult in view of the fact that this book was sold at all the bookstores in many editions. The head of the firm of G. P. Putnam's Sons, himself an author as well as publisher, has been foremost in defending not only copyright protection for authors, but all the equities connected with authorship, and there is no firm in the publishing trade less likely to do a purposed wrong to an author. This collection was looked upon as so entirely a bookselling rather than a publishing enterprise that no questions of this sort were raised either by Kipling's publishers from whom the books were bought, nor within the firm, nor, probably because of his illness, from Kipling's point of view. Unfortunately, on Kipling's recovery questions were raised in acrimonious shape, notwithstanding which there was a cordial endeavor on the part of friends to make a satisfactory arrangement out of court. This has been met, however, by a demand for withdrawal of the volumes from the market and substantial damages. Suit has been entered, but on just what grounds is not yet known, beyond general information that a claim is made, under the copyright law, that question is raised as to the use of the elephant's head as a Kipling trademark, and that Kipling seeks reparation for what he considers an "outrageous attack" upon his rights.

It is difficult to see what claim can be made under copyright law. The copyright books used are used in their copyright editions, on which full royalty is paid to the author. The enterprise of the booksellers would seem to increase rather than lessen Kipling's pecuniary returns, since some copies would probably be sold in these sets because of this enterprise which might not otherwise be sold. There would seem to be no reservation in these copyright editions preventing their being bound in some other shape, and indeed it is a much mooted question whether any such restriction on copyright books could be legally or practically made effective. That question is being raised in the trade in another way, in connection with the rebinding of paper-covered editions in cloth by jobbers or retailers. We have not sufficient information as to the nature of the trade-mark claim to venture any suggestion of opinion. Doubtless the real gist of the matter is in seeming to put before the public an edition of a living author, as a collected edition, against the wishes of that author, and to some extent in rivalry with a collected edition, sold by subscription, which he has authorized. Here there is involved a question of equity on which there are certainly two sides. Messrs. Putnam have met this in a measure by withdrawing the title Brushwood edition, and presenting the set simply as a "complete collection," coupling with it the specific statement that the set "is made up by collecting from the several publishers of the authorized copyright editions the volumes issued by them (seven bearing the imprint of Macmillan, three of the Century Co., two of Appleton, and one of Doubleday & McClure Co.) To these is added the 'Departmental Ditties,' published by Henry T. Coates & Co., of which there is no copyright edition."

As a bookselling enterprise, in its present shape, with the clear statement of fact which we have quoted, there would seem to be little if any reason for complaint on the part of the author. As a Brushwood edition, apparently a publishing enterprise in competition with his regular publishers, there would certainly be more ground for complaint. It is much to be regretted that the friendly endeavors to make a satisfactory arrangement out of court have not been successful. The legal developments in this curious and quite unprecedented case will be watched with much interest. R. R. B.

GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM, head of the firm of G. P. Putnam's Sons, was married at Canandaigua, N. Y., on April 27, to Miss Emily James Smith, Dean of Barnard College, and daughter of Judge Smith of Canandaigua. Mr. and Mrs. Putnam sail at once for Europe, where Mr. Putnam will be one of the delegates to the international conference of publishers. One of the pleasantest episodes of the wedding was the presentation of a loving cup to Mr. Putnam from representative members of several of the firms whose names are best known and most honored in the New York publishing trade. Messrs. J. Henry Harper, W. W. Appleton, Charles Scribner, Henry Holt, and G. H. Putnam have been in pleasantly close personal associations, so the loving cup came with its five handles, "with the love of Harper, with the love of Appleton, with the love of Scribner, with the love of Holt, for love of Putnam," as a very pleasant symbol of friendly business relations.

KIPLING SUES G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS.

RUDYARD KIPLING has brought suit in the United States Circuit Court against G. P. Putnam's Sons, D. Appleton & Co., Doubleday & McClure Co., Charles Scribner's Sons, and The Century Company, to recover $25,000 damages, sustained by alleged infringements of copyrights. All but G. P. Putnam's Sons have been notified that they are only technical defendants. There is an element of mystery about this suit, and comment must be withheld until the motives of the plaintiff are made public. The Putnams are not conscious that they have infringed in any manner Kipling's rights. They have not reprinted any of Kipling's works nor do they claim to have published anything by him. Their retail department simply purchased sheets of Kipling's copyright books published by all the defendants named, except Charles Scribner's Sons, and bound them in various styles of leather binding. These works, while uniform in exterior, preserved inside the material just as issued by Kipling's authorized publishers, with the original title-pages and imprints. To make a set of a certain number of volumes, Will M. Clemens's "Ken of Kipling," and other Kiplingiana, and an index were added. The whole was advertised as the Brushwood edition, and was marketed jointly by the retail departments of G. P. Putnam's Sons and E. P. Dutton & Co. The Putnams have tried in every way to get Kipling or his attorney to give them some specific complaint or reason for dissatisfaction, but they have until now been unable to get any statement that would help them to clear up the matter. In the following interview between a representative of the New York Tribune and Irving Putnam, the head of the retail department of G. P. Putnam's Sons, will be found an amplification of the epitome of the facts as given above:

"We have done our best to find out from Mr. Kipling the nature of his grievance, in order that we might settle it, if possible, without going into court; but he has told us nothing. We would have been glad, and were anxious, to effect any reasonable compromise, and we were willing to give up a good deal to avoid just such a trouble as this, but Mr. Kipling has refused to give us any specific information, and we are still in the dark as to the cause of this suit. Our only knowledge is contained in the præcipe for summons, and there's nothing there. Mr. Kipling simply says: 'You've wronged me; now stop, and pay damages.'

"The trouble probably lies—although I do not see that we have done any wrong there—in our custom of buying unbound from Mr. Kipling's publishers the printed sheets of his works, and then binding them ourselves and selling them. Our retail shop, in conjunction with our neighbor, E. P. Dutton & Co., bought from the several publishers of his works a number of copies each of his different books as follows: Copies of seven different works from the Macmillan Company, three from the Century Company, two from D. Appleton & Co., and one from the Doubleday & McClure Company. We bought these printed sheets in unbound form and put our own covers on them—an ordinary custom in the book business from time immemorial. These books are in each case the authorized copyright edition, and Mr. Kipling presumably gets royalty on each copy sold. There is one book of his called 'Departmental Ditties,' consisting of his earlier Indian poems, which for some reason he does not seem to wish to perpetuate. We knew nothing of this feeling when we bought the books. Of this work there is no authorized copyright edition, but it happens to be material that the public thinks most highly of. This is not included in the Outward Bound edition, published by Charles Scribner's Sons, and especially selected and compiled by himself, and we thought it a good stroke of business to include in our complete collected edition. If we had known of the author's reluctance to have these poems perpetuated we would perhaps not have included them out of principles of comity and courtesy, but we have never received such an intimation from the author. These poems happen to constitute one of the most popular of his books, and in form of various editions have been in the market for eight years. As there is no author's copyrighted edition we bought the best available edition possible—that published by Henry T. Coates & Co., of Philadelphia. These several sheets we bound up in various styles of cloth and leather binding, making a collection that was uniform in exterior, but preserving inside the material just as published, together with the title-pages and imprints of the several publishers. We learned only incidentally that Mr. Kipling objected to this collection, and we have been vainly trying ever since to find out in what particular he considered himself wronged. As soon as we heard that there was any objection on his part, at the suggestion of a mutual friend (W. W. Appleton), we assented to an interview with Mr. Kipling's representative, arranged for March 25. On the day before the proposed interview we received from Mr. Kipling's representative a letter cancelling the interview until Mr. Kipling should be able to see his friends himself. Three days afterward, to our surprise, Messrs. Dutton and ourselves each received a letter from Mr. Kipling's lawyer, stating briefly that Mr. Kipling considered his rights infringed by the sale of this collection, which we had called the Brushwood edition and requesting that the sale be at once stopped. As we were particularly sensitive of being accused of invading an author's rights and as we strenuously deprecated having any disagreement between Mr. Kipling and our house, we advised our counsel to exhaust every reasonable resource to bring about a compromise. We suggested that he see Mr. Kipling and obtain specifications of Mr. Kipling's complaint. Our lawyer wrote to Mr. Kipling's counsel, and received a letter from Mr. Gurlitz, stating that his client was 'righteously indignant over our appropriation of his property,' and that the only possible settlement was on the basis of a withdrawal of the books for sale, an accounting to Mr. Kipling, and substantial damages.

"We recognized the misfortune of bringing the matter into court, and again suggested that the matter be settled by arbitration or any other method of redress which would not make the affair public. To that letter we received no response, except for this information of the beginning of a suit. We have published nothing, but have simply, as retail booksellers, bound editions published by other houses.

Mr. Kipling is, therefore, through his agents, the Macmillan Company and others, selling us material and taking our money on the one hand, while at the same time saying, on the other hand, 'Don't you sell it.'

"We tried for three weeks to get specifications from Mr. Kipling, but they were refused, and we must infer that he simply doesn't like the way his books are put up. In our binding, printing and insignia and titles of different sorts we have infringed no rights of trademarks or copyright, so that I don't yet see where the action lies, either legally or reasonably. Another thing, I don't see why Charles Scribner's Sons are mentioned in the præcipe, while the Macmillan Company is not. We bought no books or unprinted sheets from the former, and have no connection with them in the matter, while we bought copies of seven different works from the Macmillan Company, and still they are not mentioned."

The taking of testimony in the suit was begun on the 27th inst. before United States Commissioner John A. Shields. This course is usual when the witnesses in a suit are about to leave the country and the testimony cannot be taken at a regular session of the court.

The first witness called was John Lockwood Kipling, the father of the author. He was shown six illustrations of facsimiles of covers designed for some of his son's earlier works. The titles of the books were "Soldiers Three," "Story of the Gadsbys," "In Black and White," "Wee Willie Winkie," "Under the Deodars," and "Phantom Rickshaw." The witness identified the illustrations as identical with designs made by him for his son's earlier works. His son requested that an elephant's head be placed in each. The witness swore that he never authorized G. P. Putnam's Sons to use this design on cover, binding, or title-pages of books published by them. The design also appears on Scribner's Outward Bound edition of Rudyard Kipling's works. He had measured the designs, and found them to be the same in size. He was shown a set of what purported to be the Brushwood edition of Kipling's works, consisting of fourteen volumes and index, and identified it as a set which he purchased at G. P. Putnam's Sons on the day before.

Upon cross-examination Mr. Kipling said that he made the designs for the earlier works of his son in 1888 or 1889, at Alla Haba; in fact, he had put in the drawings the elephant's head and the Svastika sign at his son's special request. He also said that for the edition published by Charles Scribner's Sons he made a model in terra-cotta, and made a photograph of the model, which was reproduced on the Outward Bound edition. The elephant's trunk in these designs held a lotus flower. He swore there was no beard on the elephant, only the strongly marked chops. The Putnam's representation of the elephant showed the right side instead of the left side, with a circle of black and gold; there was no lotus flower or symbol. The old 1888 design showed the elephant full face, and was prepared for A. H. Wheeler, of the Indian Railway Library.

The next witness was A. P. Watt, of London. He testified that he was a literary agent. He received the works of authors and found a market for them. He had been in this business for twenty years. Witness had been three weeks in this country, at Rudyard Kipling's request, to examine an authorized edition of his works. He had seen the advertisements of the Putnams and also those of E. P. Dutton & Co. He had never made any arrangements for the publication of the Brushwood edition. He saw the edition at Putnam's office, but did not go into the store.

A volume of the Putnam edition entitled "The Seven Seas" and printed by D. Appleton & Co. was shown the witness. On page 211 was found "The Vampire" and on page 215 "The Recessional." The witness swore that Appleton & Co. had never received the right to publish these two poems. In cross-examination his attention was called to the inscription, "Critic Leaflet Company, 1898," at the bottom of the pages containing the poems. This did not make them title-pages, the witness said, and he gave his opinion that the matter was wrongly included by the Putnams in a volume published by D. Appleton & Co.

Mr. Watt testified that the titles of Kipling's works and the first lines of poems arranged alphabetically in "A Ken of Kipling" were parts of the writings of that author, and that their publication in the "Ken" was not authorized. The "Ken" is furnished in the Putnam set with a facsimile of Kipling's autograph across the cover and the elephant's head and the words "Brushwood Edition. Rudyard Kipling" on the back. Attorney for plaintiff made the point that a book not written by Kipling was published under his name. It was said at the examination that Rudyard Kipling might go on the witness-stand before returning to England. Examination of witnesses will be continued next week.

"THE AUTOCRAT" NOT PROTECTED BY COPYRIGHT.

In the United States Supreme Court an opinion was handed down on the 24th inst., in the case of Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr. vs. G. D. Hurst, holding that copyright on a book the contents of which have been published serially without being previously copyrighted is invalid. The case involved the copyright of "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," by Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, father of the plaintiff in error in this case.

The book was first published serially in the Atlantic Monthly, in 1857, and was not copyrighted until it was afterward printed in book-form, when copyright was taken out. Hurst published the book, alleging that it was printed just as the contents had been printed in the magazine, and also claiming that the subsequent copyright did not protect the work under the copyright laws, but that the first publication vitiated the copyright.

The claim was made on behalf of the Holmes estate that there was a difference between copyrighting a book and copyrighting its contents, but Justice Brown, by whom the decision of the court was announced, said that the court had been unable to accept this view, and that under the circumstances Hurst might print the book as the matter appeared in the magazine. This was the view taken by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and its decision is now affirmed by the United States Supreme Court.

THE LONDON BIBLE WAREHOUSE IN NEW QUARTERS.

E. & J. B. YOUNG & Co., known for upwards of fifty years as the London Bible Warehouse, are now settled at their new quarters at 7 and 9 West 18th Street, near Fifth Avenue, where they occupy the fourth loft, which gives them ample and well-lighted space for display and storage. The business of the London Bible Warehouse was established in New York on Platt Street, by Eyre & Spottiswoode, the "Queen's Printers." In 1864 the business was removed to Cooper Union, where it was carried on uninterruptedly until a week ago. In 1868 Eyre & Spottiswoode sold the business to Pott & Amery, who in 1871 were succeeded by the firm of Pott, Young & Co. When James Pott withdrew from the firm to establish himself in business as James Pott & Co., the business was carried on by E. & J. B. Young & Co.

In 1897 the firm of E. & J. B. Young & Co. was incorporated under the same name with the following officers: President, F. E. Hafely, who has been with the house for thirty-four years; treasurer, Edwin Young, who has been identified with the concern for twenty-eight years; secretary, William Goodson, who has rounded out thirty-two years in the service of the London Bible Warehouse. Mr. James B. Young, who, with his brother, Edwin Young, formed the firm of E. & J. B. Young, died in February, 1887. Besides acting as sole agents for the publications of the Queen's Printers, including a large line of Bibles and prayer-books and hymnals, they are also the American representatives of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, whose excellent theological works and books for young people enjoy a world-wide reputation.

OBITUARY NOTES.

ALEXANDRE WEILL, the French novelist, died in Paris on the 19th inst. He was born in Paris, was of Jewish parentage, and was originally known as Abraham, the name Alexandre having been adopted by him later. He began writing novels in 1856, subsequently turning out one or two plays of considerable literary merit. Early in his career he was associated with Louis Blanc in the Review of Progress.

EDOUARD JULES HENRI PAILLON, the poet and dramatist, died in Paris on the 20th inst. Paillon was born in Paris in 1834, and began life as a lawyer's clerk. His first literary works were satires in verse entitled "The Parasites," of which a piece in one act—"The Parasite"—was published separately. These were followed by a number of other pieces, including "Helene," a drama in three acts, in verse. His greatest success was the comedy in three acts, in prose, entitled "Le Monde Où l'On s'Ennuie." The play was presented in New York as "Our Best Society."

GEORGES DUPLESSIS, honorary custodian of the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, died suddenly at his residence there on March 26. Born at Chartres in 1834, the son of a learned book-lover who was rector of the academies of Lille and Douay, Duplessis entered the department of engravings at the Bibliothèque Nationale in 1855, and passed through all the grades before becoming director of the print-room in succession to Delaborde. In 1891 he was elected a member of the Institute (section of Fine Arts) in place of Lenoir. Among his many contributions to Fine Art literature may be mentioned: "Costumes Historiques aux seizième, dix-septième et dix-huitième siècles;" "Merveilles de la Gravure;" "Etude sur Gavarni et Gustave Doré;" and "Inventaires de la Collection Henin."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE marriage of Richard Harding Davis and Miss Cecil Clark, of Chicago, will be solemnized at Marion, Mass., on May 4.

MACMILLAN & Co. have informed the London Athenaeum that the Countess von Arnim is not the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden."

PHILIP JAMES BAILEY, the author of "Festus," who is living in retirement at Nottingham, has just entered his eighty-third year. It is sixty years since the poem with which Mr. Bailey's name is always associated was published anonymously by William Pickering, and since then over forty editions have been printed.

MAX BEERBOHM is putting the finishing touches on a short story which he proposes to call "Zuleika Hobson." The London Academy thinks that Mr. Beerbohm has kept the story short, first, because he is in favor of brevity, and, in the second place, because it will be preceded by another of his books entitled "More," and people might be tempted to label "Zuleika" "too much."

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

DE WITT MILLER, of Philadelphia, and Paul Lemperly, of Cleveland, it is reported, have in preparation a bibliography of first editions of American authors.

CHARLES WELSH has contributed an interesting article on "The Early History of Children's Books in New England" to the April issue of the New England Magazine, the excellent periodical published by Warren F. Kellogg, 5 Park Square, Boston. Mr. Welsh has gathered together considerable information of the books published for children two hundred years ago, and has presented it in a shape that will interest the publisher and bookseller as well as the general reader.

THE Verlagsanstalt u. Druckerei Act. Gesellschaft (formerly I. F. Richter,) of Hamburg, has issued a pamphlet containing a lecture by F. Sintenis, delivered at Dorpat on November 29, 1896, entitled "Die Pseudonyme der neueren deutschen literatur" (The pseudonyms of modern German literature,) which, in a very interesting manner, traces the history and origin of pseudonyms. He shows how they were first adopted by the thinkers and leaders to avoid the prison or the stake, and he mentions the makers of the literature of progress and enlightenment who first published anonymously, in fear of church and state. After the general history of pseudonyms, the author explains the usual methods of combining names and letters in their manufacture, and points out the meaning of many well-known pseudonyms among writers of all countries.

THE Gesellschaft für Deutsche Erziehung und Schulgeschichte (Society of German Education and School History) has recently received a generous subsidy from the government, and has begun work on the second volume of its great Bibliography of Education and Pedagogy. The first volume covered the publications in the German language dealing with the subject of the year 1896, classified and annotated, and, with the most capable staff of editors, its compilation took three years. The great difficulty was in collecting the material, but the finished volume was an exhaustive and thoroughly edited bibliography. Experience and the means now secured will enable this staff of workers to get out the volume covering 1897 within the current year. All the more important firms of Germany, Austria, and Switzerland have sent in copies of everything relating to education published in the period covered, and the periodical literature of these countries has been thoroughly indexed. Professor Dr. B. Schwalbe, of Berlin, is chairman of the publishing committee of the society.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—S. J. Brobst and E. F. Ochs have opened a general bookstore and job printing office at 22 North Sixth Street, under the firm-name of S. J. Brobst & Co. They will deal largely in religious books and supplies, but will also carry a miscellaneous stock.

BALTIMORE, MD.—I. & M. Ottenheimer have established themselves as book jobbers and publishers at 661 W. Baltimore Street. They carry a full line of novels, song and hand books and the classics at extraordinarily low prices. Their new catalogue is just ready.

CHICAGO, ILL.—On May 1 the well-known old bookseller, Harry Falkenau, will remove to 167 Madison Street, where he will have one of the largest stores, as well as one of the largest stocks, of the kind in the city. This removal brings Chicago's principal old booksellers in very close proximity to each other, and will make that block headquarters for the business.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Articles of incorporation have been filed by the A. C. McClurg Company. The capital stock is 6000 shares at $100 per share. The duration of the corporation shall be ninety-nine years. Of the total capital stock of $600,000, Alexander C. McClurg holds $275,000, and F. B. Smith $100,000. All except $16,500 has been subscribed, and the list of shareholders is headed by John B. Fay, George H. Millar, Herman A. Kaster, Richard Fairclough, John A. Ryerson, W. F. Zimmerman. The remaining stock is divided into lots of from eight to eighty shares, and is held chiefly by employees of the firm.

CLARKSVILLE, ARK.—L. E. Pyle, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

DENVER, COLO.—Pierce & Zahn, booksellers, have leased a large store at 633 Seventeenth Street, and will consolidate their two stores there. They have sold their stationery and periodical departments to L. C. Lewis, who will continue them at the old branch at 1454 Arapahoe Street.

GREEN BAY, WIS.—G. Kustermann, dealer in books, stationery, and music, has sold his book and stationery department.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA.—Harry T. Daniel has opened a new bookstore here, and will keep also a fine line of stationery.

JAMESBORO, ARK.—J. T. Edgar, bookseller, has sold out.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—Charles E. Mortimer has bought J. R. Benton's book business at 7 Locust Street.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Ida (Mrs. E. J.) Chess, bookseller, has sold out.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—D. Heise's South Side Bookstore has been removed to larger quarters at 316 Grove Street. Publishers and manufacturers of stationery are requested to send latest catalogues.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—A. H. Hurley has bought out the book, news, and stationery business of W. A. Gilmore & Company, at 421 Church Street. W. S. Duckworth, so long connected with the book trade, has quit the business and become the travelling agent for three large woollen mills.

NATCHEZ, MISS.—Byrnes & Feltus have moved to their new store at 500 and 502 Main Street, which is handsomely fitted up and stocked with a first-class line of books, etc.

NEWBERRY, S. C.—W. G. Mayes has bought Dr. James K. Gilder's bookstore.

NEW YORK CITY.—The American Tract Society, which for five years has been at 10 East 23d Street, has removed its store and offices to the new building on the site of its old home, 150 Nassau Street.

NEW YORK CITY.—E. D. Bellows, for thirty-five years connected with the book trade, will open about May 1 a bookstore at 23 East 14th Street, a few doors west of Union Square. Mr. Bellows proposes to deal in old and new books of the better sort, and will make a specialty of scientific, more particularly of works on photography, in which line he has been collecting for years. In fact, Mr. Bellows is so enthusiastic a devotee to the photographic art that he intends to provide a "dark-room" on his premises for the free use of amateurs.

NEW YORK CITY.—Brentano's has been re-incorporated under the same firm-name, certificate of incorporation having been filed at Albany on the 18th inst. The capital stock is stated to be $100,000, and the incorporators are Simon Brentano, Frederica L. Brentano, and Thomas E. Shields, of New York City; and Arthur Brentano and Rowena M. L. Brentano, of East Orange, N. J. The corporation is to continue business in New York, Washington, and Chicago.

NEW YORK CITY.—A. L. Burt, publisher, has removed to the Jones Building, 52-58 Duane Street. Mr. Burt's increasing business has made it necessary to seek larger quarters.

NEW YORK CITY.—William Beverley Harrison has bought back his publications and has resumed business at his old quarters, 3 and 5 West 18th Street.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Frederick A. Stokes Company are removing to more convenient quarters at 5 and 7 East 16th Street.

NEW YORK CITY.—On May 1 H. Wolff, the bookbinder, will occupy the building at 92 to 98 Centre Street, at the corner of Leonard. His new quarters will be equipped with the latest improved machinery that will be run by electric power.

PERRY, N. Y.—G. H. Wycant, bookseller, has been succeeded by S. F. Lang.

PULASKI, TENN.—Francis Marion Crawford has opened a bookstore here.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—E. C. Weidman sold his book, stationery, and newspaper business, at 126 State Street, to George M. Vorberg and Gustav S. Vorberg. The new proprietors will continue the business at the old stand under the firm-name of Vorberg Brothers.

WESTON, ORE.—Jarman & Taylor have bought W. R. Hollenbeck's stock of books at the sheriff's sale at Eugene, Ore.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have in press an edition of Racine's "Andromaque," edited by Prof. B. W. Wells, of the University of the South.

W. R. MORFILL, of Oxford University, is writing a history of Russia from the time of Peter the Great to 1855. Methuen & Co. will publish it.

HENRY ALTEMUS, Philadelphia, has just published "The Cross Triumphant," by Florence Morse Kingsley, author of "Titus," "Paul," and "Stephen."

DOUBLEDAY & MCCLURE Co. will publish shortly "The Man with the Hoe, and other poems," by Edwin Markham, a Californian, whose verses have been printed in newspapers and magazines for the past thirty years.

A. S. BARNES & Co. have just ready a "History Up-to-Date, a concise account of the war of 1898 between the United States and Spain, its causes, and the treaty of Paris," by William A. Johnston, with a number of illustrations. They have also just ready a novel by Annie Eliot Trumbull, entitled "Mistress Content Cradock," with illustrations by Charles Cope-land.

NORMAN W. HENLEY & Co., New York, have just published a work on "Liquid Air and the Liquefaction of Gases," by Professor T. O'Connor Sloane. The volume gives the history of the liquefaction of gases from the earliest times to the present, and contains an illustrated description of the experiments that have excited the wonder of audiences all over the country.

JOHN JOSEPH MCVEY, 39 N. 13th Street, Philadelphia, has just issued a new edition (the seventh) of the late Brother Azarias's "Philosophy of Literature;" also, "The Story of St. Odile," by Rev. F. X. McGowan. He will publish on the first of May "Ornamental Penmanship, Analytical and Finished Alphabets, and Draughtsman Letter Book," by George J. Becker.

MRS. GERTRUDE ATHERTON's new novel, "A Daughter of the Vine," according to the New York Evening Post, is virtually a rehash of a much earlier work, entitled "The Randolphs of Redwood," a book which touched upon some thinly disguised California scandals, and which brought down severe and adverse criticism on the good taste of the author for using them as a theme for a novel.

THE NEWSDEALERS' ASSOCIATION OF CHICAGO has been formally organized by the election of the following officers: President, Frank Morris; secretary, William Davis, 3448 Cottage Grove Avenue; and treasurer, J. B. Curry. Its object is the laudable one to create a better feeling between the publishers and the retailers, and thereby to promote the interests of both. Nearly 100 members have already been enrolled.

HOWARD C. BENHAM, a prisoner at Auburn under sentence for wife-murder, has written a novel entitled "In After Years They Met," which will be published by G. M. Hausauer, of Buffalo, N. Y., from the profits of which he hopes to refund his father and mother the money unsuccessfully spent to secure his pardon. His parents live at Batavia, New York. Previous to their son's trouble they were well-to-do, but have sacrificed all for their son.

THE HOLLAND-AMERICAN STEAMSHIP LINE has issued a little book on "Holland," which, as the work of Dr. James H. Gore, professor of mathematics and geology at Columbia University, takes rank beyond the average ephemeral guide book, although thoroughly practical for guide-book purposes. Professor Gore is thoroughly familiar with the outward aspect of Holland and the spirit of its people. His camera has supplied illustrations for his interesting and instructive text.

M. F. MANSFIELD & A. WESSELS have just ready "A Book of Giants," a collection of verses by A. Strong, showing the crushing of the giants by the steam roller, the bicycle, the electric light, the motor car, etc. The clever author is also the designer and engraver of the pictures. They have also ready "Some College Memories," by Robert Louis Stevenson; and "The Budget," a reprint of the Horsmonden School Budget containing contributions by Rudyard Kipling and Max Beerbohm.

WORK on the first part of the "Dictionary of College Slang," which Columbia University undertook some time ago, has been completed, and the other three parts are so well in hand that the book is to be published during the coming summer. The dictionary is to present not only the definitions of the words, but the names of the institutions, whether one or twenty, where the words are in use, with the difference in meaning which the same word has at different colleges or universities or seminaries.

THE IMPERIAL PRESS of New York, Cleveland, and Chicago calls the attention of the trade to its facilities for printing works that run into several volumes, and those in which languages other than English appear. The most notable of their many works is "The Jesuit Relations," published by the Burrows Brothers Co., which has received high praise especially because of its mechanical features. The Eastern representative of The Imperial Press is William Burgyes Hadley, at 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish early in the fall Zola's new novel, "Fecondité." On May to the first instalment will appear in the columns of L'Aurore of Paris. They have also made arrangements with F. Marion Crawford to publish his biography of Pope Leo XIII. They will publish shortly, for the Columbia University Press, "Educational Legislation and Administration of the Colonial Governments," by Miss Elsie W. Clews, a new number in the Columbia University Series of Contributions to Philosophy, Psychology, and Education.

It has been said that Professor William James is a psychologist who writes like a novelist, and Henry James is a novelist who writes like a psychologist. That Professor James can make psychology as interesting as fiction is maintained by good judges; therefore his "Talks to Teachers," announced for immediate publication by Henry Holt & Co., will appeal to many readers who are neither teachers nor psychologists. Among the eighteen "talks" are: "The Child as a Behaving Organism," "The Will," "The Gospel of Relaxation," "On a Certain Blindness in Human Beings," and "What Makes Life Significant."

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have ready a Memorial edition of Samuel Harden Church's "Oliver Cromwell," with portraits reproduced in photogravure from the best authenticated originals, and eighteen full-page illustrations of great interest. The edition is limited to 600 copies. They have also just issued "Austria," by Sidney Whitman, with the co-operation of J. R. McIlraith, the new volume in The Story of the Nations; and "Hannah Thurston" has been added to their Hudson Library. They will publish, probably in June, a volume by Miss Julia A. Schwartz, entitled "Vassar Studies," chiefly character studies of psychological interest.

COPELAND & DAY have just issued "Sicilian Idyls," a dainty volume of poems translated from the Greek by Jane Minot Sedgwick; "Fate," a collection of poems by Ada Negri, translated from the Italian by A. M. Von Blomberg, with a sketch of the author by Sofia Bisi Albini; and a little book of some of the exquisite children's poems by Agnes Lee, many of which have delighted readers of St. Nicholas, Babyland, etc., that is entitled "The Round Rabbit," and dressed in a cover crowded with rabbits, showing alternating faces and backs of uniform roundness. All three little volumes are up to the high standard of bookmaking for which the Copeland & Day imprint stands.

THE PACIFIC PRESS PUBLISHING COMPANY, Oakland, California, has just issued "The Desire of the Ages," by Mrs. E. G. White, who has written the story of the New Testament, bringing out the harmony of the Gospels and presenting the important events in the life of Christ in strictly chronological order. The book is profusely illustrated, and gotten up in fine binding and gilt edges, suitable for gift purposes. They have also ready "The Story of the Redemption," by William Covert, telling the old, old story from Paradise lost to Paradise restored; and "Heralds of the Morning," by Asa Oscar Tait, aiming to give the meaning of the social and political problems of to-day and the significance of the great phenomena of nature.

JOHN LANE has just sent out "Pan and the Young Shepherd," by Maurice Hewlett, "a strange piece of work thoroughly characteristic of the imaginative author of 'The Forest Lovers.'" He will publish shortly "A Course of Instruction in Wood-Carving According to the Japanese Method," by Charles Holme, with illustrations by H. P. Clifford, made from actual carvings prepared in Tokio; also, three new books by Richard Le Gallienne: "Young Lives, a Romance," "Sleeping Beauty and Other Prose Fancies," and "The Worshipper of the Image," a tragic fairy-tale. Mr. Lane has decided to postpone the publication of Mrs. Cadell's translation of the Rubáiyát until the fall. Dr. Garnett will furnish the volume with an introduction.

THE GUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIAN PUBLISHING HOUSE, Nashville, Tenn., has in preparation the "Digest of the Deliverances of the General Assembly." It will contain a historical statement as to the origin of the church, the organization of the first presbytery, synod and General Assembly and the adoption of the Confession of Faith. The old Circular Letter issued in 1810 will be printed in full. A full account will also be given of the revision of the Confession of Faith. It will contain a digest of the deliverances of the General Assembly on all questions affecting the doctrine, government, and law of the church. It will give the Organic Law and a brief history of all the Boards and of the five leading colleges. The work will probably be completed by May 15 next.

HERBERT S. STONE & Co. will publish next week "The Maid He Married," by Harriet Prescott Spofford; also, "A June Romance," by Norman Gale. Both volumes will have a frontispiece by Violet Oakley. They will publish on May 17 a revised and enlarged copyright edition of "Esther Waters," by George Moore, with an introduction; "The Carcellini Emerald," by Mrs. Burton Harrison, with seven full-page illustrations; "The Bushwhackers," by Charles Egbert Craddock; "Lucifer," by George Santayana; "The Vengeance of the Female," by Marion Wilcox, with a number of illustrations; "Doc Horne," by George Ade, with nearly fifty illustrations, published uniform in style with the author's "Artie;" "In Castle and Colony," by Emma Rayner, whose "Free to Serve" earned deserved praise; and "The Indians of To-day," by George Bird Grinnell, with 48 full-page portraits of famous chiefs and four pictures in color.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have now ready, in the Polychrome Bible, the books of (1) Ezekiel, translated by E. H. Toy, Professor of Hebrew and Oriental Languages and Literature, and Biblical Literature in Harvard University, and (2) Joshua, translated by M. H. Bennett, Professor of Old Testament Languages and History at Hackney and New Colleges, London. Six parts of the Old Testament are therefore ready, the two parts quoted above and those previously published, viz.: (3) Judges, (4) Psalms, (5) Isaiah, and (6) Leviticus. They have also just published "The International Year Book," for 1898, which, though it is properly a companion volume to their well-known "International Cyclopædia," may be recommended as an admirable summing up of the record of, and advance in, all branches of human activity during the past year. The volume is edited by Frank Moore Colby, Professor of Economics at the University of New York, assisted by eminent specialists. Among the most interesting and timely articles we note those on the Spanish-American War, the Kitchener Expedition, the Dreyfus affair, Gladstone, Bismarck, George A. Waring, Seidl, Autophotography, Liquid Air, The Czar's Disarmament Scheme, Nicaragua Canal, etc.

FOREIGN NOTES.

SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE, London, on the 24th inst. sold a first edition of Rudyard Kipling's "Schoolboys' Lyrics," in the original wrappers, printed in Lahore for private circulation, for $675. The work, which is described as exceedingly rare if not unique, was produced when the author was 18 years old. The title design is the work of John Lockwood Kipling, the author's father.

PROFESSOR ARBER's new "British Anthologies" are so far ready that Henry Frowde, of the Oxford University Press, will publish the first volumes (each of which represents a definite period of English literary history) early next month. These are to be the Shakespeare, Jonson, and Milton anthologies. The whole series will contain about 2500 entire poems and songs written by 300 poets, and will be issued at popular prices, although printed in large type on good paper, with a cover specially designed by A. A. Turbayne.

A FEW weeks ago two volumes of the Constitutional and Public Ledger, 1836-37, were offered for sale in one of the lesser-known London salesrooms, and fell to a bid of five or six dollars. On April 15 these same volumes were sold to Messrs. Robson for $1050. It had been discovered that between September, 1836, and February, 1837, Thackeray had contributed almost fifty letters to this paper as Paris correspondent. The only other set of the Ledger known to be in existence is in the British Museum. Thackeray's step-father, Major Carmichael Smyth, was interested in the Ledger, and sought to retrieve its fortunes by making his illustrious step-son Paris correspondent. It is said, on trustworthy authority, that America is to be the resting-place of these practically unknown letters of Thackeray.

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

MAY 5, 3 P.M.—Books and autographs, rare early printed works, early English literature. (85 lots.)—Bangs.

MAY 8, 9, 3 P.M.—Miscellaneous. (697 lots.)—Bangs.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 20 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word (Cash).

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

LATEST BOOKS

James Russell Lowell and His Friends

By EDWARD EVERETT HALE, D.D. With many portraits and other illustrations. 8vo, $3.00.
Second impression.

A delightful book of reminiscences of Lowell and of the interesting friends who surrounded him. Dr. Hale was in college with Lowell, and they were intimate friends. He writes of Lowell with sincere admiration and in that very interesting style which makes Dr. Hale's stories so fascinating. The book will heighten esteem for Lowell, and can hardly fail of wide popularity.

Through Nature to God

By JOHN FISKE. 16mo, $1.00.

This book discusses, in Mr. Fiske's large and luminous way, the mystery of evil, the cosmic roots of love and self-sacrifice, and the everlasting reality of religion. It falls in the same group with his "Idea of God" and "Destiny of Man," which have been an inspiration and a source of strength and light to a multitude of readers.

Thaddeus Stevens

By SAMUEL W. MCCALL. In "American Statesmen Series." 16mo, $1.25.

A biography of "The Great Commoner" who was so conspicuous a figure in Congress during the war for the Union. Mr. McCall, the able representative from Massachusetts, has told the story exceedingly well.

Psychology and Life

By HUGO MÜNSTERBERG, Professor of Psychology in Harvard University. Crown 8vo, $2.00.

Professor Münsterberg, who is an authority in his domain, here treats of psychology in its relation to physiology, education, art, history, and mysticism. His book is of remarkable value, and those who read it with appreciation will find it invigorating and in a high degree helpful.

The Ladder of Fortune

By FRANCES COURTENAY BAYLOR, author of "Claudia Hyde," etc. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

A story of wealth which the possessor does not know how to use; of struggle to gain a footing in good society; of Western America and Paris—told with the skill of a practiced novelist.

The Conjure Woman

By CHARLES W. CHESNUTT. 16mo, $1.25.

A book of negro superstition embodied in seven uncommonly interesting stories.

Cambridge Milton

Complete Poetic and Dramatic Works of John Milton. Cambridge Edition. Edited by WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY. With admirable introductions to the longer poems, notes, translations of Milton's Latin poems, indexes to titles and first lines, and a biographical sketch. With a fine portrait and an engraved title-page containing a vignette of Milton's home. Large crown 8vo, $2.00.

One of the best of all the volumes in the Cambridge Edition, and beyond comparison the best single-volume edition of Milton ever published.

The Antigone of Sophocles

Translated into English by GEORGE H. PALMER, Professor in Harvard University. With an introduction. 12mo, 75 cents.

This translation is of equal excellence with Professor Palmer's admirable translation of the Odyssey. It has the force and fluency of an original work. His introduction treats in a luminous manner of the Greek drama and the place of Antigone in Greek tragedy. It would be difficult to gainsay Emerson's advice to read the great ancient classics in translations if they were translated like Professor Palmer's Odyssey and Antigone.

Hermione and Other Poems

By EDWARD ROWLAND SILL. Small 16mo, $1.00.

The poems in this book are of the same high order of thought and poetic charm with Sill's two other books—"Poems," and "The Hermitage"—and the three little volumes are a precious addition to American poetry.

Under the Beech-Tree

Poems by ARLO BATES, author of "The Puritans," etc. Crown 8vo, handsomely bound, $1.50.

Those who have enjoyed Mr. Bates's previous books of poetry will welcome this tasteful volume, which is the best he has yet produced, the one which shows most fully his imaginative power and the lyrical expression of which he is master.

Poems of Henry Timrod

Complete Memorial Edition. With a biographical sketch and a portrait. $1.50 net.

"Now that the people of the South are raising a memorial to Timrod a fame, the suggestion seems a proper one to make, that the American people share in the honor, for he was a true American poet, and worthy to stand in the narrow space that belongs to the best."—The Century.

D. APPLETON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

A Double Thread

By ELLEN THORNEYCROFT FOWLER, author of "Concerning Isabel Carnaby," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

The brilliancy of "Concerning Isabel Carnaby" is accentuated in this new novel, which, moreover, will be found to represent even more distinctly a story-telling purpose. There is a peculiar plot, with certain most unexpected developments, and the author's ingenuity in construction is no less apparent than the wit, incisiveness, and intense modernity of her dialogue. The new novel deals for the most part with English country-house life.

The Story of the British Race

By JOHN MUNRO, C.E., author of "The Story of Electricity." A new volume in the Library of Useful Stories. Illustrated. 16mo, cloth, 40 cents.

This book is believed to be the first presentation in popular form of the conclusions regarding the real origins and nature of the British people which have been reached by the exact methods of modern anthropology. In the light of these new investigations it appears that current ideas are far from correct, and the author expresses the hope that this popular explanation of the subject "will tend to destroy some errors regarding the origin and pedigree of the nations which have invested life and literature for ages."

Paul Carah, Cornishman

By CHARLES LEE, author of "A Widow Woman," "A Foreigner in Pendennack," etc. No. 262, Appletons' Town and Country Library. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"A splendid sketch of local life and customs."—New York Mail and Express.

Love among the Lions

By F. ANSTEY, author of "Vice Versa," etc. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

This delicious little comedy is a happy illustration of the unexpected turns of Anstey's quaint humor. The plot must be discovered by the reader and not betrayed prematurely. The illustrations are in harmony with the text. The novelette represents Anstey at his best, and it will be found an excellent promoter of good spirits.

Education by Development

The Second Part of the Pedagogics of the Kindergarten. By FRIEDRICH FROEBEL. Translated by Josephine Jarvis. International Education Series. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Dr. Harris, the editor, says of this book: "The essays on the training school for kindergartners and the method of introducing children's gardens into the kindergarten are very suggestive and useful. In fact, there is no other kindergarten literature that is quite equal in value to the contents of the present volume."

Pursued by the Law

By J. MACLAREN COBBAN, author of "The King of Andaman," "The Red Sultan," "The Angel of the Convent," etc. No. 263, Appletons' Town and Country Library. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

This stirring and entertaining story shows the possibilities of modern life in the way of adventure. "This novel," says the London Spectator, "reminds us not a little of Charles Reade, with a dash of Stevensonian audacity. Mr. Cobban's hearty geniality, and the real skill with which he keeps the reader in suspense, disarm criticism."

These books are for sale by all booksellers; or they will be sent by mail, on receipt of price, by the publishers,

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY have purchased the entire limited paper-bound edition of "The Prisoner of Zenda," by Anthony Hope. This will be issued as No. 4 of The People's Library about May 20.

THE BOOK DEPARTMENT OF THE H. B. CLAFIN COMPANY have made arrangements for the exclusive privilege to issue a paper-bound edition of Paul Leicester Ford's immensely popular novel, "The Honorable Peter Stirling." The edition is one hundred thousand copies.

THE NEW AMSTERDAM BOOK CO. will publish on the 16th inst. "A Dash for a Throne," a new novel by Arthur W. Marchmont, with illustrations by D. Murray Smith. The scene of the novel is laid in Bavaria, mostly in the neighborhood of Munich, and the plot centres around the throne of the late King Ludwig whose eccentricities were the talk of Europe a score of years ago.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS will publish at once a new line of "'Oxford' India Paper Text Bibles," printed from ruby, minion, bourgeois and long primer types; also a special new edition of the "'Oxford' Small Pica Text Bible," from entirely new type. In July they will issue exquisite editions of the "Prayer Book and Hymnal," including the "'Oxford' Elongated Red Rubric Edition," and a new edition of the "'Oxford' Minion 48mo Prayer Book." They have recently published twenty new copyright editions of the "Oxford Teachers' Bible and Self-Pronouncing Bible;" also the "Marked New Testament" and the "Original American Revised Bible."

D. APPLETON & CO. announce for early publication "Alaska and the Klondike," by Professor Angelo Hellprin; "Our Navy in Time of War," by Franklin Matthews, and "The Story of the English Kings According to Shakespeare," two new volumes in Appletons' Home-Reading Series; "Pursued by the Law," a novel, by J. Maclaren Cobban; "Madame Izan," a tourist story, by Mrs. Campbell-Praed; "Fortune's My Foe," by John Bloundelle-Burton; "A Cosmopolitan Comedy," by Anna Robeson Brown; "The Kingdom of Hate," by T. Gallon; "Dr. Nikola's Experiment," by Guy Boothby; a new and revised edition of "The Spanish Reader and Translator," by Miguel T. Tolon; and new editions of "Appletons' General Guide to the United States and Canada," "Appletons' Canadian Guide-Book," and "Appletons' Dictionary of New York."

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY will issue at once "The Market Place," the last work of Harold Frederic, which was running as a serial when the author died. The book deals with the business schemes of business men and the social struggle of their wives and daughters. The scene is chiefly rural England, described with the wonderful power of this word painter. Recent events in English financial circles make the novel seem to have been inspired by prophetic insight. The intrinsic merit of the original story and the fact that it is the last readers will have from the author of "The Damnation of Theron Ware," "The Copperhead," and other wonderfully successful books should insure it a large sale.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish to-day "A System of Ethics," by Friedrich Paulsen, translated and edited by Frank Thilly, professor of philosophy in the University of Missouri; "A Theory of Reality," an essay in metaphysical system, by George Trumbull Ladd, which brings to a close the series of books which includes "Philosophy of Knowledge" and "Philosophy of Mind;" and "The Messages of the Earlier Prophets," forming volume 1. in The Messages of the Bible, a new series edited by Frank Knight Sanders and Charles Foster Kent. In lighter vein are "Across the Campus," a story of college life, by Caroline M. Fuller; "A Texas Ranger," by N. A. Jennings; and "A Civilian Attache," a story of a frontier army post, by Helen Dawes Brown, a new contribution to the Ivory Series. A second edition is also ready of John Foreman's "The Philippine Islands," which has already been revised and enlarged to include the occupation of the islands by the United States forces.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

The story of Mrs. Hayes, the widow of an English physician who had died in India, where he had lived in luxury at the court of a rajah. Mrs. Hayes is left in poverty by his death, the rajah's promises of caring for his family not being kept. Mrs. Hayes returns to London, takes her step-daughter from school, and begins a fight with fortune. Lady Hilda is an Englishwoman who is largely in debt to Mrs. Hayes for kindness received in India, but who cruelly cuts her in her poverty.

Gale, Sarah Helen. The Grail brothers; or, was it an accident? N. Y., F. Tennyson Neely, [1899.] c. 8-285 p. D. cl., $1. [1443]

The story opens in Graftonville, a picturesque village about two hundred miles from New York City. The principal characters are two brothers, Rex and Nathaniel Grail, their sister Natalie, and her betrothed, William Matthews, a New York lawyer. While yachting Nathaniel Grail is drowned. Following this sad incident is Natalie's marriage. Events that follow thirteen years later are given, evidently to prove certain theories about spiritual influence and personal impressions.

dream of Irish liberty. N. Y., F. Tennyson Neely, [1899.] c. 8-245 p. D. cl., $1. [1445]

A story of Ireland in 1897. Maurice Desmond, the father of the hero, is hung as a traitor by the English government. Gerald Desmond, when old enough, enters the English army, goes with it to South Africa, where he witnesses the death of the French Prince Imperial. He returns to Ireland to find his old home desolate and his family scattered, and swears to revenge his country and his father's death. He then comes to America and plots with others for Ireland's freedom.

Harraden, Beatrice. The fowler. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1899. c. 4+345 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1448]

The title is taken from the passage "Our soul is escaped even as a bird out of the snare of the fowler." Nora Penhurst, a charming young girl, healthy in body and mind, and in love, although still unconsciously, with a man every way worthy of her, comes under the influence of Theodore Bevan, an intellectual dwarf with a strange mesmeric power, which he delights to use for the mental ruin of the women he fancies. Nora becomes his slave, is separated from her father and her friends, and is made to harbor the worst and meanest thoughts against all she had formerly loved. The scene is a quaint English village.

In 1892 Professor James was asked by the Harvard Corporation to give a few public lectures on psychology to the Cambridge teachers. The talks included in this volume form the substance of that course. They are practical and popular, and entirely free from technicalities. The subjects are: Psychology and the teaching art; The stream of consciousness; The child as a behaving organism; Education and behavior; The necessity of reactions; Native and acquired reactions;

What the native reactions are; The laws of habit; The association of ideas; Interest; Attention; Memory; The acquisition of ideas; Apperception; The will. The "talks to students" consist of three addresses: The gospel of relaxation; On a certain blindness in human beings; What makes a life significant?

The early life of Thaddeus Stevens is described and the yeoman service he did in the cause of popular education and various other measures in the legislature of Pennsylvania before entering congress. His greatest distinction was won in the House of Representatives, where his unflinching opposition to slavery and his leadership during the War for the Union won for him the title of "The great commoner." The larger part of the volume is devoted to the period of the Civil War and his action on the legal tender bill, war revenue measures, emancipation, reconstruction, etc. A chapter is devoted to his wit and other characteristics.

Six essays on: Psychology and life; Psychology and physiology; Psychology and education; Psychology and art; Psychology and history; Psychology and mysticism. One thought controls the book, and that is, the author says, "The separation of the conceptions of psychology from the conceptions of our real life. . . . These papers endeavor to show that psychology is not at all an expression of reality, but a complicated transformation of it, worked out for special logical purposes in the service of our life." Author is professor of psychology in Harvard University.

Pool, Maria Louise. Sand 'n' bushes. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 2+865 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1477]

An account of a horseback ride taken by two young women, living south of Boston, to "the cape"—that is, Cape Cod. The story opens with an amusing description of their experience in Boston in purchasing two horses at an auction sale. Their journey has many unique experiences, not the least being those of which their horses are the central figures. The "bargain" horses develop many odd qualities, often at embarrassing moments. A sharp Yankee boy, a brother of one of the girls, who is confident he knows everything, accompanies them without permission on the journey, riding his wheel, and adds much to the amusement.

- Risley, R. V. Men's tragedies. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. c. 6+303 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1478]
Nine "studies of strong emotions"; they are cast in "a fictional form," the author says, "solely for the reason that life is but a realized fiction." The men who figure in them are all Germans—"for the reason that psychological tragedies happen in German minds." The titles are: The man who loved; The man who hated; The man who bore; The man who cared; The man who fell; The man who sneered; The man who killed; The man who died; The man who was himself.

Bernard Shaw considers Wagner's "Ring of the Niblungs" successive allegories painting present social conditions. He gives the plots of the operas with his comments and deductions in a somewhat humorous and irreverent manner. He says in his preface: "I offer it [this book] to these enthusiastic admirers of Wagner who are unable to follow his ideas, and do not in the least understand the dilemma of Wotan, though they are filled with indignation at the irreverence of the Philistines, who frankly avow that they find the remarks of the god too often tedious and nonsensical."
- Sill, E: Rowland. Hermione, and other poems. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 7+109 p. S. cl., $1. [1483]
Mr. Sill is already favorably known through his "Poems" published in 1887, and a second collection published two years later under the title of "The hermitage, and later poems." After a lapse of ten years the publishers present a third and final volume, in which they have endeavored to gather from print and manuscript such verses as have not hitherto been put into book form.

Tells the story of an attempt by the "C. & S. C." Ry., a trunk line from Chicago to the west, to seize illegally the "M. & T." (the short line), an important "feeder" to the larger road. The president of the "M. & T." is James Weeks, a typical product of the middle west, who devotes all the energy and resource of his rugged character to the defence of the short line. Stock manipulation and an unsuccessful attempt to take forcible possession of the road go to make up the plot.
- White, Mrs. Ellen G. Harmon. The desire of ages. Oakland, Cal., Pacific Press Publishing Co., [1899.] c. '98. 2+866 p. il. Q. cl., subs., $8.50 and $4.25; lib. style, $5; full mor., $7.

The purpose is "to set forth Jesus Christ as the one in whom every longing may be satisfied"; "to present the love of God as revealed in His Son, the divine beauty of the life of Christ, of which all may partake, and not to satisfy the desire of the merely curious nor the questionings of critics." The work is a life of Christ handsomely printed and illustrated.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BARRE, VT.—Smith & Robins have removed their book and stationery store into the Durkee block.

BOSTON, MASS.—Mr. Lamson, of the firm of Lamson, Wolfe & Co., will go to Kansas City, Mo., where he has taken a position.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Mutual Book Company will remove on the 10th inst. to much more commodious quarters at 79 Franklin Street, where they will also carry a larger stock of books and stationery.

CHICAGO, ILL.—It is reported that the firm of Hayes, Cooke & Co. is bankrupt. We believe the firm at the last consisted only of H. H. Cooke, R. B. Hayes having long ago separated from the concern and Walter M. Hill more recently.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—George H. Felt, bookseller, has sold out.

MABLE, MINN.—O. K. Flaater, bookseller, has sold out to Caroline Thompson.

NEWPORT, R. I.—George H. Carr has removed his book and stationery business into the large double store in the Daily News building.

NEW YORK CITY.—The accounts of John De C. Ireland, receiver of the Merriam Company, book publishers and jobbers, formerly at No. 67 Fifth Avenue, have been passed upon by Nelson Smith, referee. The receiver has collected $8649 and paid out $4005, leaving a balance of $4644, together with other assets not disposed of worth $1400, against which there are charges of $1595, leaving $4449 available for the creditors.

NEW YORK CITY.—The following circular letter has been issued by William R. Rose, receiver for Brentano's: "I hereby notify you that on Monday, May 1st, I shall transfer all of the assets and effects of the firm of Brentano's in my hands as receiver unto Malcolm R. Lawrence, and from and after to-day [May 1] I shall not be accountable for any sales which may be made by you to Brentano's. Any balance for which I am indebted to you for purchases made by me during the term of my receivership, will be paid promptly at maturity at the office of Brentano's, No. 31 Union Square, as heretofore." Mr. Lawrence was the highest bidder at the recent public sale of the effects of the firm of Brentano's, at New York, Chicago, and Washington. As already noted, the firm of Brentano's has been incorporated, as Brentano's Incorporated, and commenced business under a new regime on May 1.

NEW YORK CITY.—Lewis R. Hamersley, of 38 Park Row, filed a petition in bankruptcy April 21, with liabilities of $84,576, and no assets. Mr. Hamersley was for twenty years identified with the publishing business in Philadelphia, pushing a line of army and navy books and a magazine, and has been a special advertising agent here for several years.

NEW YORK CITY.—Mitchell Kennerley, until recently in charge of the American branch of John Lane's publishing house, "The Bodley Head," expects to start a publishing house of his own in this city.

PEKIN, ILL.—Charles Duisdieker has bought H. G. Bass's stock of books (subject to a chattel mortgage,) and will place the business in charge of his son Charles.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.—Charles P. Penfield has leased the store at 328 Broadway, opposite the Grand Union Hotel, and has removed his book and stationery business into it.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 6, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

THE KIPLING "EDITION."

MR. KIPLING's law suit against G. P. Putnam's Sons, and, nominally, others, will not be tried until autumn, the taking of testimony so far being simply a preliminary step necessitated by the temporary presence in this country of the witnesses. It is difficult to see from the testimony, and from the facts so far developed in the case, what ground there may be for either copyright or trade-mark suit. That, however, is for the courts to determine, should the case come to trial. The question of equity or of recognition outside the law of an author's right to control his own works, is another matter.

As we indicated last week, the use of the word "edition," in binding up a set of books, certainly tends to confuse trade terms and to mislead the public, and it is to be regretted that a firm which stands among those at the front of the American publishing trade, particularly with reference to copyright and the recognition of authors' rights, should have set so unfortunate a precedent. It is gratifying that this fact has been recognized to the extent of giving up the use of the phrase Brushwood Edition and simply calling the set a "complete collection."

Mr. Kipling's grievance as an author seems to be founded not so much on copyright or trade-mark bases, as on these three facts: that Will M. Clemens's "Ken of Kipling," the correctness of which he repudiates, should have been included with a set of his works as though authorized; that the "Recessional," dedicated to the public without copyright by its original method of publication, and "The Vampire," which was a poem written as a personal matter and not for publication, should have been included with "The Seven Seas" in the binding-up, as apparently a part of that volume; and that the "Departmental Ditties," of which there was no authorized American edition, should have been coupled with the copyright editions of his other books. It appears that the reason Mr. Kipling's "Departmental Ditties" have not been published here in an authorized edition is that he had originally sold this work in England outright without reserving royalty or other rights in that volume. Probably any author would feel aggrieved by this treatment from a publishing house; and although this was an enterprise essentially of the retail or book-selling department of the publishing house in question, yet that department assumed some of the functions of a publishing department, and thus identified the Brushwood Edition with the Putnam house as publishers. Mr. Kipling would seem to have been entitled to, and we presume would have received apologies from a house like the Putnam's, when the importance of the matter was called to their attention; and it is much to be regretted that the controversy should have been so promptly put in such shape as to make an appeal to the courts the remedy.

We regret to learn that the example set by the Putnam house is likely to have the effect of starting up a crop of incomplete "editions" made by collecting Kipling's books that are not under American copyright; but we presume that any such move will be met by Mr. Kipling's authorized publishers with editions which can hold the market against such competition.

THIRTY-ONE YEARS OF LAW-BOOK PUBLISHING.

OTTO MÜHLBRECHT, in the introduction to his "Uebersicht der gesamten staats- u. rechtswissenschaftlichen Litteratur des Jahres 1898," gives statistics of the production of law-books in Germany, France, England and America, Italy, the Netherlands, Scandinavia (including Denmark, Sweden, and Norway,) and Spain, from 1868 to 1898 inclusive. The total of books published in the countries named for the thirty-one years amounts to 111,954. Of this number Germany (including Austria and German Switzerland) published 55,319; France, 20,556; England and America, 15,771; Italy, 8978; the Netherlands, 5413; Scandinavia, 3973; and Spain, 1944. The figures for Spain are incomplete, as the compiler was unable to obtain statistics of the years 1869, 1873, and 1874. In 1898 Germany published 2171, or 51 more than in 1897; France, 739, an increase of 141; England and America, 613, or 25 more than in 1897; Italy, 316, a gain of 15; the Netherlands, 141, showing a decrease of 64; Scandinavia, 90, against 94 of the preceding year; and Spain, 77, or 9 less than in 1897. The total for the year was 4147.

The totals by years of the book production of the countries named are as follows: 1868, 3204; 1869, 3051; 1870, 3129; 1871, 2788; 1872, 2512; 1873, 2594; 1874, 2749; 1875, 3187; 1876, 3407; 1877, 3396; 1878, 3393; 1879, 3920; 1880, 3756; 1881, 3975; 1882, 3515; 1883, 3761; 1884, 4394; 1885, 4192; 1886, 4051; 1887, 3621; 1888, 3872; 1889, 3796; 1890, 3623; 1891, 3765; 1892, 3761; 1893, 4003; 1894, 4125; 1895, 4139; 1896, 4136; 1897, 3992; 1898, 4147.

BOOK STEALING.

BORROWERS of books, according to Albert Simin La Révère Bleue (as translated for the London Bookseller), have always, and that much more so even than rats or bookworms, fire or water, been the terror of bibliophiles. "Ite ad vendentes!" Scarron had inscribed over the entrance to his library. "The devil take all borrowers of books," was one of the humorous mottoes with which the cynical and learned artist Du Moustier, in the reign of Louis XIII., ornamented the door of his study in the garrets of the Louvre.

But something beyond selfishness and jealousy are found to be connected with the passion for books: a mania for appropriating them, it has been often proved, occasionally and by degrees creeps in; occasionally and unconsciously the lover of books becomes a thief. How many people even are tempted to think as Tallemant des Reaux once said, "That to steal books is not stealing, provided that one does not afterwards sell them." In support of this avowal, the tell-tale author of the "Historiettes" relates the curious scene which took place one day between Monsignor Pamfili, who became later on Pope Innocent x., and the artist Daniel du Moustier, he who consigned so emphatically to the devil all borrowers of books. "Cardinal Barbarini having come to France as legate during the pontificate of his uncle, felt a curiosity to see the study of Du Moustier and Du Moustier himself. Innocent x., then Monsignor Pamfili, was at the time datary and chief officer of the legate's suite. He accompanied Barbarini on his visit to Du Moustier, and seeing on the table 'L'Histoire du Concile de Trente,' in the beautiful London edition, he said to himself: 'What on earth does a man like that want with such a precious book?' Accordingly, he takes it and hides it under his cassock, thinking that no one observed him. But the little man (Du Moustier,) who was on the lookout, saw what the datary had done, and, furious, said to the legate that 'he was greatly obliged by the honor his excellency did him, but it was a scandal that he should bring thieves in his company;' and on the instant, taking Pamfili by the shoulders, he thrust him out of doors, having first taken the book from him. Later on, when Pamfili was elected Pope (September 15, 1644,) some one said to Du Moustier that the Pope would excommunicate him, and that he would turn as black as a coal. 'He will do me a great kindness,' returned the artist, 'for I am only too white as it is' (meaning his hair and his beard)."

Another Italian church dignitary, Cardinal Dominique Passionei, who himself was very nearly made Pope, and of whom the President de Brosses has given us, in his "Lettres sur l'Italie," such a lively and amusing portrait, had succeeded in getting together a magnificent library by means similar to that told of Innocent x. Being sent in 1721 to Lucerne in the capacity of Nuncio, Passionei was seized with an extraordinary curiosity with regard to the abbey and convents of Switzerland, and with a vast admiration for them. He was unflagging in his inspection of them, remaining for long hours in the libraries of these establishments; and he never left without having his cloak well lined and bulging extensively. He went so far as to contrive a less compromising and more expeditious way of getting the books into his possession. He pretended to be engaged in serious study, and that he had to make minute research in these libraries, had himself locked in, that he might be undisturbed, and then threw out of the window to one of his trusty servants the most precious volumes.

The most singular and dramatic testimony to the follies and crimes begotten by a fondness for books is furnished us by a bookseller of Barcelona, who lived in the early part of this century. This dealer, named Vincente, seeing that one of his fellows had got the better of him at a sale, and acquired a very rare work, a copy supposed to be unique, of the "Ordonaciones por los Gloriosos Reyes de Aragon" (1482,) was filled with such vexation and fury on this account that he did not stick at getting admittance the next night into the house of his successful rival and murdering him to get possession of the inestimable treasure. When arrested the following day Vincente did not attempt to deny it. He was imprisoned and brought to trial, but what caused him the deepest concern and engrossed his mind to the point of making him forget his judge and the fate that threatened him, was learning that in London there had been discovered a second copy of this book, for the possession of which he had not hesitated to commit a murder. And this is not all. The inquiry elicited that this terrible amateur of books was not at his first essay—that he had already murdered twelve of his customers merely to get back the rare works that he himself had sold them! This brutal monomaniac was condemned to be garrotted; and up to the day of his execution he had but one solicitude: he asked but one favor, which was that after his death his private books and his stock-in-trade should not be put up to auction and dispersed, but that they should be placed religiously, and as a whole, in the public library of Barcelona.

Amongst the most famous and the least scrupulous borrowers of books is cited, by common consent, Edme Courtois, concerning whom Louis Paris, formerly librarian at Rheims, tells us in his "Souvenirs" some very amusing anecdotes. The academician Villemain, so Jules Richard affirms in his treatise on "L'Art de Former une Bibliothèque," "never returned borrowed books, and the co-operation of his secretary was necessary, that the lender might go surreptitiously and recover his property." Another immortal, Louis de Loménie, according to the same bibliographer, was touched with the same foible.

But it is not always to stow away in book-cases, to contemplate and gloat over, that amateurs lay violent hands upon volumes that come in their way and happen to take their fancy, it is also for the sake of traffic. In this second category of unhandsome bibliophiles belongs the case of Harmand, whose trial took place before the Assize Court of the Aube in February, 1883. Auguste Harmand had filled the post of librarian to the town of Troyes since 1842. The havoc made by him in the establishment confided to his care baffles all attempt at computation. Being informed against by the porter of the mayoralty, who had noticed the abstraction of books, Harmand was condemned to four years' imprisonment. He tried to pass himself off as a political martyr, and attributed the proceedings instituted against him to personal enmity, and in particular to the ill-will of a former mayor of Troyes. Harmand had taken care to remove from the catalogue the names of the books he appropriated, so that the experts, Ludovic Lalanne and Anatole de Montaiglon, could find no trace of these volumes, and their task became an almost impossible one. A discovery, which one may call providential, enabled them to complete anew a good part of the original catalogue, and to offer proof as to a portion of what had been carried off. The loose slips which had been used in compiling the catalogue had been consigned to the garret. During many years the mice overrunning these attics had had plenty of opportunity to nibble at these papers; so that whole sections of the catalogue, "Fine Arts" and "Polite Literature," were reduced to shreds. On the other hand, other sections, "Theology" and "History," the loose slips of which were in another corner of the garret, under a loft, had remained intact; and it was these which enabled the experts to restore the catalogue to its entirety as regarded those sections. But what had saved these last-named portions from the depredations of the mice? An owl, which had slipped in under the tiles of the loft, had for long had her dwelling there, thus taking "History" and "Theology" under her wing.

Removals effected from public libraries by the caretakers are very difficult, and consequently relatively infrequent. The curator always has some assistant, whose vigilance it would be necessary to elude or whose complicity would have to be bought. Thefts effected by readers are also not at all easy, and, considering the number of readers, they are very rare. Everywhere the most minute precautions are taken to baffle thieves. Every work which comes into a public library, whatever it may be and from whatever source, whether purchased, given, or taken in exchange, is, as soon as received, entered in the register, marked with a number corresponding with this entry, and stamped with the stamp of the establishment. This last impression, which is in indelible ink, is made in several places, two at least, on the title-page to begin with, then on another page, which is always the same in each respective library. If the plates or illustrations are bound up with the volume, it is usual to stamp each one of them; and in addition very often the binding bears on the sides the arms of the library. How many almost indestructible tokens, therefore, has the thief to get rid of if he wishes to sell the stolen goods? But, even supposing the expunging and erasing to have been effected with the greatest skill, where is the dealer in old books, who at the moment of purchase, in turning over the leaves, will not detect some trace of the operations? And what trouble, what care, labor, time, what ingenuity, to achieve more or less successfully these erasures and suppressions!

Lately a wretched clerk was detected by a bookseller to whom he offered a work purloined from the Sainte Geneviève Library, a "Traité de Machines à Vapeur." He had effaced—God knows at what pains! the four marks of this establishment—that is to say, the monogram on the binding, the stamp on the title-page, on page 41, and on the last page—and thought himself safe from discovery. He had not observed, however, that the treatise was composed of two volumes bound in one; he had, therefore, not erased the stamp from the title-page nor from page 4 of the second volume, and these marks, striking the notice of the bookseller, betrayed the theft immediately.

STRUGGLES OF A BOOK AGAINST TAXATION.

In June, 1833, Charles Knight began the publication of the "Penny Cyclopaedia" in numbers and monthly parts. At the time it was issued there was nothing of the kind in the English language, and the value and importance of the book was very great, and Charles Knight must be regarded as the father of modern cheap literature on account of this and other business ventures. The attitude of the British Government at that time toward literature, according to the Scientific American, certainly did not tend to the multiplication of works. The "Cyclopaedia" was begun in 1833 and was completed in 1846, and the result to the originator was a loss of $150,000. This loss was practically caused by the excessive taxation of the British Government, and the story of its publication is interesting now as showing how printed matter was discriminated against in those days. The quantity of paper required to produce a single copy, was two reams, which weighed 35 pounds. At the time when its publication was begun an excise duty of six cents per pound was collected on all paper. Of the entire edition 20,000 reams paid this duty, which amounted to about $42,000, and the remaining 30,000 reams paid a reduced duty of three cents per pound, which amounted to $32,000, so that the total duty was not far from $75,000. In addition, a duty was charged on the millboards employed in binding the volumes and on the wrappers for the monthly parts, so that, with interest and various losses caused by stocks on hand at the time the paper duty was reduced, the total amount of duty paid on the work was between $150,000 and $160,000, and the loss to the publisher was just about the same amount.

THE SIX BEST-SELLING BOOKS IN APRIL.

ACCORDING to the Bookman, the six books which have sold best in the order of demand during the month are:

1. David Harum. Westcott. D. Appleton & Co.
2. Day's Work. Kipling. Doubleday & McClure Co.
3. Aylwin. Watts-Dunton. Dodd, Mead & Co.
4. When Knighthood was in Flower. Caskoden. Bowen-Merrill Co.
5. Red Rock. Page. Charles Scribner's Sons.
6. Mr. Dooley in Peace and War. Dunne. Small, Maynard & Co.

It is said that the sales of "David Harum" are averaging nearly 1500 a day.

THE KIPLING COPYRIGHT SUITS.

THE taking of testimony in the suit brought by Kipling against G. P. Putnam's Sons was not resumed. The testimony was taken on April 27, because the witnesses were going to Europe and it was necessary to get their statements before they went. Mr. Watt, the literary agent, sailed on April 29, and Mr. Kipling's father is going to the northern part of this country for a short tour before sailing for Europe. It is not known when the case will be brought before a jury. It is expected that it will come up at the October term of the court. If Mr. Kipling's health permits of his testifying before then, his testimony will be taken; otherwise it will be taken in October.

A perpetual injunction protecting the copyright of Rudyard Kipling's poem, "The White Man's Burden," was granted April 29 by Judge Kohlsaat, in the Circuit Court at Chicago, against the publishing firm of F. B. Whipple & Co. It was charged by Mr. Kipling and his publishers that the defendant had published and circulated his poem in a pamphlet without permission. By the order of the Court the defendant is obliged to surrender as many copies of the poem as he can recover.

LITTLE-HOLT LIBEL SUIT DISMISSED.

JUDGE COWING in the Court of General Sessions, New York, on April 28, dismissed the indictment against Prof. Nicholas Murray Butler, editor, and Henry Holt and Charles Holt, publishers, of the Educational Review, which was alleged to have criminally libelled Joseph J. Little, President of the Board of Education, last February, by referring to him as a "fine old educational mastodon." The indictment was dismissed on the ground that the legal evidence before the grand jury does not prove that alleged crime was committed within the jurisdiction of the court.

AUTHORS ASK FOR REDUCTION OF POSTAGE ON THEIR MSS.

THE SOCIETY OF AMERICAN AUTHORS has started a movement to procure the passage of an act of Congress for the reduction of postage on authors' manuscripts, to send them as second instead of first-class mail. The bill is to come up at the next session of Congress. If this law is enacted the charge for authors' manuscripts will be placed on an equality with other merchandise. In England manuscript goes at third-class rates. It costs four cents to send a manuscript in England that here would cost sixteen cents.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE regular monthly dinner of The Booksellers' League will be given at the New Amsterdam, 265 Fourth Avenue, S. E. corner of Twenty-first Street, New York, on Wednesday evening, May 10, at 6.30 o'clock sharp. Mr. E. H. Mullin, a well-known writer, will deliver an address on the occasion on "English Novelists of the Second Rank, 1850-1875." Members are requested to notify Cass Richardson, at E. P. Dutton & Co.'s, 31 West Twenty-third Street, not later than the 8th inst., otherwise no provision will be made for them. Extra tickets may be had at $1 each.

NOTES OF ENGLISH AUCTION SALES.

AT Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge's London auction-rooms there was sold on April 25, for the large sum of £510, one of the two copies known of "The Troublesome Raigne of John, King of England," 1591, the other copy being in the Capell collection, Trinity College, Cambridge, England. Bale's "Kynge John," a manuscript play of about 1560, is thought to have been used by the anonymous author of the "Troublesome Raigne," which, once attributed to Shakespeare, is now believed to be the work on which he based his "King John," the first genuine text of which appeared in the First Folio, 1623. Collier says that Shakespeare converted the two parts of the "Troublesome Raigne" into one drama, and, in many of its main features, followed the story, not as he knew it in history, but as it was fixed in popular belief. A facsimile of the title-page of the "Troublesome Raigne" was given in Halliwell's folio edition of Shakespeare, volume viii., page 276, and also in Winsor's "Original Quartos and Folios of Shakespeare," plate 20. The Capell copy, which was long since removed beyond the reach of all collectors, is a fine one. The copy, sold last week, according to the New York Times, lacks the title-page to the first part, the leaf to the "Gentleman Readers" is cut round and mounted, a corner of B 4, first part, is one-sided, A 4 and B 1, second part, are re-margined, and the text of these leaves is rubbed. A few headlines also are cut into. Rumor says that the collector who secured the present copy is Marsden J. Perry, of Providence, who possesses the Halliwell Shakespeare collection, one of two copies known of the "Venus and Adonis" of 1636, and other precious things.

On April 27 Sotheby's sold an important collection of the minor works of R. L. Stevenson, many of which are but rarely seen. These were given by the author to his mother and are being sold by order of her executor. The most noticeable entries in the catalogue comprise a copy of the original unpublished leaflet edition of "Kidnapped," "Father Damien," the original Sydney edition, 1890, the scarce "Notice of a New Form of Intermittent Light for Lighthouses," 1871 (four copies,) several copies of "The Pentland Rising," 1866, "Black Canyon," an extremely scarce brochure of four leaves, printed by the author at Davos-Platz, and the single leaf of the "advertisement" of the same pamphlet, which, if anything, is scarcer still. It has been said that one of those Davos pamphlets, a little four-page pamphlet lettered "The Marguerite, Larks! What a beautiful flower!! T. S." is unique, and in the collection of a well-known London amateur, but no fewer than eight other copies figure in the catalogue. The "T. S." stands for Thomas Stevenson, the author's father, and Robert Louis used to say that it was the only "poetry" he was ever guilty of. It is curious that collectors should be prepared to pay such high prices for trifles which have only a sentimental interest. Among the other entries in this catalogue we notice "The Graver and the Pen," "A Martial Elegy for some Lead Soldiers," and "Moral Emblems."

Sotheby's sold on May 1 and following days that portion of the remarkable collection of ancient MSS. made by the late Earl of Ashburnham known as the "Appendix," which was sold en bloc by the Earl to a gentleman by whose instructions they were offered for sale. The MSS. (catalogued into 177 lots) were mostly on vellum and more or less illuminated, and extended from the eighth to the seventeenth centuries, with two or three quite modern. The bulk of them, however, were the work of scribes of the thirteenth to the sixteenth centuries. In some cases the documents were bound in old pigskin or leather and boards, but the bindings were not generally contemporaneous with the writing. The last lot was a somewhat late copy of Wycliffe's Bible, in double columns of about sixty lines, written in the early part of the fifteenth century and known as the "Bramhall ms." On one of the originally blank pages is this note: "This book I will (God willing) leave for an heiress-loome to my right heiress of Bramhall.—William Davenport, 1620." It was sold by one of the heirs, and was the last ms. bought by the late Earl of Ashburnham. It fetched at the sale this week $8750. There were also Latin Bibles of the eleventh, thirteenth, and fourteenth centuries, a New Testament and Psalter of the thirteenth century, and the Four Gospels of the twelfth century, besides several Missals, Books of Hours, and Offices of various early dates.

OBITUARY NOTES.

EDWARD R. PELTON died suddenly at Lakewood, N. J., on the 2d inst., aged 58 years. We must defer until another issue an extended account of Mr. Pelton's career as a publisher and bookseller.

EUGENE BURRITT MYERS, the senior partner of the law publishing firm of E. B. Myers & Co., of Chicago, died in that city April 19. He was born in Schoback, N. Y., in 1833. He went to Chicago early in life, and in 1860 established the firm of E. B. Myers & Co., which succeeded to the business of D. B. Cooke & Co.

FRIEDRICH KARL CHRISTIAN LUDWIG BÜCHNER, author of "Kraft und Stoff" (Force and Matter,) died at Darmstadt, Hesse-Darmstadt, on the 1st inst. Dr. Büchner was born at Darmstadt, March 28, 1824, and studied medicine at Giessen, Strasburg, Würzburg, and Vienna. After practicing his profession for some years in his native city he settled at Tübingen as a private lecturer and assistant clinical professor. In 1855 he published "Kraft und Stoff," setting forth an atomistic and materialistic view of the universe, which raised such a storm in Germany that he was obliged to resign his position in the university and return to his private practice. His book had great influence in its day as a popular exposition of the ideas of modern materialism. He wrote many other works of the same character—"Natur und Geist," "The Darwinian Theory," "The Idea of God and Its Meaning To-Day," "The Power of Heredity," "Future Life and Modern Science," and "The Book of Long Life." He was a brother of George Büchner, the poet Herwegh's friend; of Louisa Büchner, the novelist, and of Prof. Alexander Büchner, the literary historian. Dr. Büchner's fame rests on his popularizing works on materialistic philosophy at a time when the ideas were not accepted as subjects of general discussion even in Germany.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

POULTNEY BIGELOW is continuing his history of Germany, beginning with 1815, where his already published work left the subject of his study.

DR. JAMES MARTINEAU on April 21 reached his ninety-fifth birthday. It is nine years since his last book, "The Seat of Authority in Religion," was published; his first work, "The Rationale of Religious Inquiry," was published in 1836.

JOKAI, the Hungarian novelist, is preparing to show at the Paris Exhibition a copy of every edition of his works that has appeared in any language. A special pavilion will contain these books—not a small one, by the way, for this author has written over three hundred novels, and some of them have been translated into every European language.

PROF. J. L. WORTMAN has been chosen by the Yale Corporation to succeed the late Prof. O. C. Marsh as Professor of Paleontology and curator of the scientific collection in Peabody Museum. Dr. Wortman was born in Oregon City, Oregon, August 25, 1856. Dr. Wortman is the author of numerous bulletins published by the American Museum of Natural History, at New York, where he has acted as Assistant Curator of Vertebrate Paleontology since 1891. "The Ganodonta and Their Relationship to the Edentata" (1897) is one of the most important of these publications. It goes into the subject of the origin of the entire group of edentata, and is probably Dr. Wortman's best piece of scientific work. He contributed in 1883 to the Revue Scientifique of Paris a series of papers on "The Origin of the Horse." He has written many works on paleontological subjects. His connection with the American Museum of Natural History will in all probability continue until the completion of the usual summer explorations in the West. It is expected that Dr. Wortman will furnish the treatise on the fossil bones of the great reptiles, which his predecessor was working at up to his death. Dr. Wortman had already entered into an agreement to assist Professor Marsh in the preparation of this work for the United States Geological Survey.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

EDOUARD ROUYEYRE, Paris, the well-known editor and publisher of "Connaissances Necessaires à un Bibliophile," is now bringing out a fifth edition of this celebrated book with many critical notices and bibliographic documents which he has been collecting for years. He has also collected illustrations on all subjects connected with printing, bookmaking, cataloguing, etc., and the new edition of his book will run into ten volumes. The first, which is now ready, deals with the origin of books, with amateurs, bibliophiles, and bibliomaniacs, the establishment of libraries, the preservation and housing of books. Beginning with April a volume is to appear every month. Each volume will be complete in itself with special title. (Pt. 1, xxiv.+176 p. 8°, pap., 6 francs.)

PUTTKAMMER & MÜHLBRECHT, Berlin, have issued in one volume, with comprehensive index and statistical prefatory matter, the twelve numbers of their Allgemeine Bibliographie der Staats- und Rechtswissenschaften, under the title of "Uebersicht der gesammten staats- und rechtswissenschaftlichen Litteratur des Jahres 1898, zusammengestellt von Otto Mühlbrecht." We note that the work appears for the thirty-first time. Each year this work has gained in fulness, and consequently in usefulness and importance. (30 + 274 p. [4147 titles,] 8°, pap., 6 marks.) Mr. Mühlbrecht has in preparation an enlarged edition of his "Wegweiser durch die neuere Litteratur der Rechts- und Staatswissenschaften, für die Praxis bearbeitet." The new volume will embrace the literature from 1892 to 1899 inclusive.

THE FREE LIBRARY OF PHILADELPHIA has issued No. 2 of its bibliographic Bulletin, devoted to a "Descriptive Catalogue of the Series of Works known as the Library of Old Authors," compiled by John Thomson, librarian. In style and arrangement this is modelled upon the preceding bulletin, which catalogued and indexed the works of Walter Scott. The sixty-one volumes of the "Library of Old Authors" are catalogued alphabetically by authors, with full biographic and descriptive annotations, while a 24-page two-column index gives clue to all persons, places, and subjects alluded to in the entries and notes. The whole is a revelation of the variety and extent of the information concealed in this series, while in details of execution the bulletin is most creditable to its compiler and to the library. (2+70 p. 8°.)

CATALOGUES OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKS.—H. Gateau, 8 Rue Castiglione, Paris, Miscellaneous. (No. 28, 871 titles.)—Otto Harrassowitz, Leipzig, Bericht über neue Erwerbungen. (No. 28, 2424-2582 titles.)—George P. Johnston, 33 George St., Edinburgh, Miscellaneous. (No. 65, 526 titles.)—Lemcke & Buechner, 812 Broadway, N.Y., Monthly Bulletin of World Literature, February, March. (Nos. 2, 3, 384-1145 titles.)—Marlier, Callanan & Co., 172 Tremont St., Boston, Catholic books, also list of church ornaments, etc. (106 p. 12°.)—Martinius Nijhoff, the Hague, (Holland.) Periodicals, standard works, scarce and valuable works of the last four centuries. (Part 4, Kohl-Niclaes, 1537-1995 titles.)—Pickering & Chatto, 66 Haymarket, London, Miscellaneous. (No. 116, The Book-Lover's Leaflet, 2162 titles.)—Bernard Quaritch, 15 Piccadilly, London, Geography, voyages, travels, history of America, Africa, Australasia, and Asia, with books on the languages of America, Africa, and Oceania. No. 188, 1839 titles, 1s.)—G. E. Stechert, 9 East 16th St., N.Y., Catalogue of French books and short list of Spanish books. (159 p. 16°. A very full catalogue, attractively bound.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish at once Justin McCarthy's eagerly expected Reminiscences.

F. TENNYSON NEELY, New York, will publish shortly Dr. Madison C. Peters's remarkable lectures, entitled "Justice to the Jew, the story of what he has done for the world."

"THE Satchel Guide for the Vacation Tourist in Europe," published for twenty-seven years anonymously, makes its appearance for 1899 with Dr. W. J. Rolfe's name as editor.

C. DE HASBROUCK, 57 Bromfield Street, Boston, will publish in the fall "Two Summer Island Papers," a new book about Bermuda, "in effect a literary history of the islands," by J. C. L. Clark.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have secured a biographical work of considerable literary importance in "The Autobiography of Mrs. Margaret Oliphant, 1828-1897." It will probably not be published until the fall.

WILLIAM B. HADLEY, New York, has brought out a new fine edition, in four volumes, of "The Tatler," edited with introduction and notice by George A. Aitken, author of "The Life of Richard Steele," etc.

GINN & Co. have nearly ready in their College Series of Greek Authors, "The Hippolytus of Euripides," edited, with introduction, notes, and critical appendix, by Professor J. E. Harry, of Georgetown (Ky.) College.

MARLIER, CALLANAN & Co., Boston, have in press an interesting pamphlet on "The Friars in the Philippines," by Rev. Ambrose Coleman, O.P. The matter first appeared as separate articles in an English magazine, and attracted considerable attention.

D. VAN NOSTRAND COMPANY have just published a work on "The Purification of Sewage," giving a brief account of the scientific principles of sewage purification and their practical application, by Dr. Sidney Barwise. The volume contains several illustrations and diagrams.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish shortly the fourth and fifth volumes of the Murray edition of Byron's works. One volume will contain Byron's correspondence from 1814 to 1816, and the other a portion of his verse beginning with the "Thyrza" poems and "Childe Harold."

THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION OF THE REFORMED (DUTCH) CHURCH IN AMERICA, 25 E. Twenty-second Street, New York, announces for immediate publication a new edition, with map, of "Forty Years in South China," being a biography of the late Rev. J. V. N. Talmage, by the Rev. J. G. Fagg.

ASSEMBLYMAN O'CONNOR seems ambitious to go down to posterity as the friend of the school-book publisher. After July 1, 1899, he wants all school-books that have been in use in Greater New York for six months or more to be burned. This semi-annual holocaust is, he declares, in the interest of health and not of the school-book publishers.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. announce a work entitled "The Romance of Wild Flowers," by Edward Step, which is to be the first volume of The Library of Natural History Romance; "The Day of Recompense," a new novel by Silas K. Hocking, whose latest novel, "God's Outcast," is now in its seventh edition; and "Fortune's Tangled Skein," a novel of the detective character, by Jeanette H. Walworth, an American writer.

As the teaching of Spanish is receiving some attention at the present moment, Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., announce the early publication of several volumes of a new series of their "Rapid" Modern Language Manuals. The first will be a Spanish edition of the "Tourist's Vade Mecum," on the same lines as their French and German handbooks. The subjects of photography and cycling will be enlarged and brought up to date.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish shortly a new book by David Starr Jordan, President of Leland Stanford Junior University, entitled "Imperial Democracy," which is said to present a series of striking studies of the subjects so much discussed at present. They will publish at once "A Double Thread," a new novel by Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, author of "Concerning Isabel Carnaby." The new novel deals for the most part with English country-house life.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD & Co., 810 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, will publish on the 10th inst. the fourth edition (revised throughout and enlarged by about 310 pages,) of "The Prospector's Field Book and Guide in the Search for and the Easy Determination of Ores and other Useful Minerals," by Prof. H. S. Osborn, LL.D. This edition, which has been revised with the greatest care, is believed to be a complete and thoroughly reliable guide to the intelligent searcher after ores and other useful minerals, including gems and gemstones. The volume has been illustrated by 58 engravings.

MOSES KING, New York, has recently published a sumptuously illustrated volume, entitled "Notable New Yorkers of 1896-1899," which properly form a companion volume to "King's Handbook of New York City." The volume is unique from a literary point of view, inasmuch as the text proper consists of 2337 portraits with the name and a condensed biography of each person represented. The portraits are exact reproductions of photographs from life. More than 1500 original portraits were made specially for the collection. The portraits are arranged mainly in a succession of groups, and are fully indexed, by name and by topics. The work will have more than temporary interest, and its value will undoubtedly increase with years.

R. H. RUSSELL will publish on May 10 the long-expected "Eden vs. Whistler—The Baronet and the Butterfly," J. McNeil Whistler's book, promised for last fall, but kept back by Mr. Whistler, who objected to the great publicity given the book by advance notices. About May 28 will be ready Charles Henry Meltzer's English version of Gerhart Hauptmann's "Die Versunkene Glocke," (The Sunken Bell,) which is next season to be added to E. H. Sothern's diversified repertoire. This publisher has also just ready "The Peace Cross Book," containing the order of services gone through on the occasion of raising the Peace Cross on St. Alban's Hill, Washington, on the proposed site of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral. The address of the Bishop of Washington and of President McKinley are included in the pretty little volume.

FOREIGN NOTES.

GIBBON'S autobiography is to be edited with introduction, elaborate notes, and an index by Dr. Birkbeck Hill.

JAMES BOWDEN, London, will publish this summer "The Musical Memoirs of Sir Arthur Sullivan," written by Arthur Lawrence.

SWAN SONNENSCHNEIN & Co. will publish shortly the exhaustive "History of Free Thought" upon which John M. Robertson has long been working. Free thought in India, Persia, Greece, and Rome, under Christianity and down to modern times has been carefully studied by the author.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & Co. are about to publish "The Cathedral Builders," by Mr. Baxter, who writes on Italian art under the pseudonym of "Leader Scott." The work will be divided into four sections, treating respectively of the Romano-Lombard, the Romanesque and the Italian, Gothic and Renaissance architects.

NOVELS are rapidly running into specialist treatises. Rider Haggard's latest is all about vaccination, and a female dipsomaniac is the heroine of Mrs. Atherton's "A Daughter of the Vine." All diseases, it is clear, will soon have each its "study" in a romance, and, as an English alarmist suggests, we may expect such titles as "The Elephantiasis of Esther Egerton," "The Sequelæ of Irene's Influenza," and "Chloe the Chloralists."

GEORGE ALLEN, London, is publishing in portfolios two sets of plates associated with Dickens, which, in some mysterious way, have been lost for twenty years. They are steel engravings by Onwhyn, one of the original illustrators of Dickens, who used the pseudonyms of "Peter Palette" and "Sam Weller." The first set of thirty-two pictures was evidently intended to supplement those in "The Pickwick Papers," and the other set of thirty-eight those in "Nicholas Nickleby." In their present form they appear on India proof paper.

C. J. CLAY & SONS, of the Cambridge [Eng.] University Press Warehouse, will publish at once the first part of the "Fauna Hawaïensis, or the Zoölogy of the Sandwich Isles," being results of the explorations instituted by the joint Committee appointed by the Royal Society and the British Association, and carried on with the assistance of those bodies and of the Trustees of the Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum at Honolulu. This work is published by the Committee and edited by their secretary, David Sharp, Curator in Zoölogy of the Museum of the University of Cambridge. When complete it will probably consist of two volumes, as it is intended to give an account, more or less full, of the whole of the land-fauna of the islands. This fauna is of very great interest, not only from its geographical isolation, but also on account of its being rapidly extirpated by the progress of cultivation, and the introduction of foreign species which prey upon, or consume the food of, the original natives—many of the latter being already extinct. This first part will include the "Hymenoptera Aculeata" (bees, wasps, and ants.) of which about 200 species, mostly undescribed, have been obtained, and has been prepared by R. C. L. Perkins, who has carried out the explorations under the direction of the Committee and Prof. Auguste Forel. For the remainder the Committee is receiving the assistance of numerous British and foreign naturalists, and the parts will appear as soon as they can be completed.

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 50 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

[C] In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

[C] Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

HAVE READY TO-DAY:

A SYSTEM OF ETHICS.

By FRIEDRICH PAULSEN. Translated and edited by Frank Thilly, Professor of Philosophy in the University of Missouri. 8vo, $3.00 net.

Professor Paulsen's work is a guide for all persons interested in ethics as a practical science of conduct. The first book surveys moral philosophies from Greek times to the present. The second reviews the fundamental questions of ethics, answering them in each case with soundness of judgment and common sense. The third defines virtues and duties. The passages treating of modern pessimism, hedonism, and Nietzscheanism, suicide, temperance, the lie of necessity, and other applications of ethical principles, are bound to attract as much attention in this country as they have already excited in Germany.

A THEORY OF REALITY.

An Essay in Metaphysical System upon the Basis of Human Cognitive Experience. By GEORGE TRUMBULL LADD, Professor of Philosophy in Yale University. 8vo, $4.00.

This new volume by Professor George Trumbull Ladd brings to its close the series of books in which the author has dealt with the general problem of reality—things and minds—and the possibility and the validity of knowledge. The former volumes were "Philosophy of Knowledge" and "Philosophy of Mind."

ACROSS THE CAMPUS.

A Story of College Life. By CAROLINE M. FULLER. 12mo, $1.50.

Miss Fuller's book is a story of the college life of a group of girls, and reflects the atmosphere of the place with extraordinary fidelity, and with delightful humor, enthusiasm, and gaiety of spirits. The story carries the girls through the four years' course and deals with the gradual development of their characters in that period, as affected by the social life of college life and as revealed by their relations with each other.

A TEXAS RANGER.

By N. A. JENNINGS. 12mo, $1.25.

The true story of surprising adventures on the Mexican border by a young man who enlisted in the early eighties in a company of the famous Texas rangers. The book is as thrilling as a border romance, and in addition is a hitherto unpublished record of a body of troops who were the prototypes of the Rough Riders.

A CIVILIAN ATTACHÉ.

A Story of a Frontier Army Post. By HELEN DAWES BROWN. The Ivory Series. 16mo, 75 cents.

A charmingly told love story, with a series of pictures of life at a frontier army post on the plains as a background.

JUST PUBLISHED:

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

A Political, Geographical, Ethnological, Social, and Commercial History. By JOHN FOREMAN, F.R.G.S. Second edition, revised and enlarged. With 3 maps and 32 illustrations. Large 8vo, $5.00.

Mr. Foreman is undoubtedly the highest living authority on the Philippines. He was consulted as an expert by our Peace Commissioners at Paris. His work is full, accurate, exhaustive, and authoritative, and brought down to date. It is indispensable to any one wishing to visit the Philippines. Besides containing the most comprehensive historical account of the islands in English, the book treats in detail of its commercial and agricultural opportunities, its mineral wealth, the character and disposition of the natives, and gives the itineraries of 22 journeys through the interior of the islands. The additional matter in this new edition, which enlarges the volume to nearly double its former size, includes the history of the Naval Battle of Cavite, the surrender of Manila, and the occupation by the United States.

THE THIRD
International Congress of Publishers,
LONDON, 1899.

President, Mr. JOHN MURRAY. Secretary, Mr. EDWARD G. FAIRHOLME.

The Congress will take place at Stationers' Hall, London, E. C., on June 7th, 8th and 9th.

Delegates and other invited guests are earnestly requested to send in their replies and subscriptions (£1) at the earliest date possible to the Secretary, together with the titles of any papers to be read or questions to be discussed.

English will be the official language and all papers must be written or translated into English, but French and German will be permitted in the discussions, and for this purpose it has been decided to obtain the services of an interpreter for both these languages.

The Worshipful Company of Stationers has expressed its intention of giving a dinner at Stationers' Hall, on Wednesday, June 7th, to the delegates and guests of the Congress, and as the space at its disposal is somewhat limited it is of great importance that the list of adherents should be completed at once.

The Secretary will send copies of the programme, together with all papers relating to the Congress, to the delegates and guests attending the Congress, and he is prepared, should such be the wish of any guest, to arrange for hotel accommodation for the guests during the time of the Congress.

EDWARD G. FAIRHOLME,

Secretary to the Organizing Committee.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To be Published May 16

A New Story by the author of "BY RIGHT OF SWORD."

A DASH FOR A THRONE.

By ARTHUR W. MARCHMONT.

Illustrated by D. Murray Smith. Printed on featherweight paper, richly decorated cover.

Large 12mo, $1.25.

A new novel by the author of that popular story, "By Right of Sword," will be welcomed by all lovers of good fiction. The scene is laid in Bavaria, mostly in the neighborhood of Munich, and the plot centres around the throne of the late King Ludwig, known as the "Mad King," whose eccentricities were the talk of Europe a few years ago. The characters, one of whom is the present Emperor of Germany, are excellently drawn, and the interest of the reader is sustained from start to finish.

The publishers are pleased to note that the advance orders bid fair to exhaust the first large edition in advance of publication.

The Market-Place

By HAROLD FREDERIC,

Author of "The Damnation of Theron Ware," "March Hares," etc.

The last work of the greatest American author of this decade.

A story of finance and business schemes for business men and of social struggles and English country life for women.

It deals in part with a phase of English life that has no counterpart in this country and that was so fully exposed in the Hooley scandals. It compares so closely with these disclosures that recently shook London to the centre, that it would seem almost as if the talented author had the gift of prophecy.

The story represents the best work of Mr. Frederic. It holds the reader enthralled until the end.

The book's merit, coupled with the fact that it is Mr. Frederic's last book, should ensure it a tremendous sale.

“Summer Reading.”

To Retail Dealers :

THE SUMMER CATALOGUE, issued for twenty-one years, has been found so useful and profitable by enterprising dealers in working up business during the slow summer season, that it has become a regular feature of the trade. The twenty-second issue, with an attractive cover, in a special pamphlet adapted for imprint circulation all through the summer, will be published in connection with THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY about the first of June.

The imprint editions will contain, in addition to a catalogue of guide-books and light literature for summer reading, an entirely new selection of reading-matter both of a practical and entertaining character, chiefly intended for the use and amusement of tourists, pleasure-seekers, and visitors of summer resorts.

Booksellers should remember that, while summer is usually a dull time, the sales of light literature, etc., can be pushed to make a successful business even in this season. The classes who travel are of course those who have money to spend, even in dull times, and the summer is the time when very many bookbuyers do the greater part of their reading. Booksellers at or near summer resorts should especially avail themselves of this publication, while city dealers should remember that it will also be useful to tempt stay-at-homes to make investments, or to follow up customers otherwise out of reach.

☞ Orders for imprint editions at subscription rates should be sent in at once, as the quantity is limited.

Terms for Editions with Imprint:

Directions for shipping should be given with the order. If sent by mail, postage will be charged extra.

RAPHAEL

In his short life of thirty-seven years (1483-1520), condensed an amount of work that has been the marvel of three centuries. In composition and drawing he has never had an equal, and Jean François Millet, the greatest of modern idealists, said that the Raphael drawings for his paintings were the ne plus ultra of design in its best sense. The volume on Raphael in Knackfuss' brings out that Raphael must be given, if not the supreme rank which his contemporaries gave him, at least a place in the front rank among the half-dozen who have endowed art with a higher nobility. Among them all he stands first for the sense of beauty, and next to Michelangelo for refinement; first as academician and composer, and side by side with Giotto for fertility of invention. The comparison between the modern type of painter who holds the mirror up to nature and thinks more of his brush-work and means of expression than of his conception and the classic painters to whom the beautiful idea was first, gives suggestive thoughts for many who perhaps can hardly appreciate the paintings artistically.

MONOGRAPHS ON ARTISTS

Every bookseller will find it profitable to keep the volumes of this series in stock. There are now ready the volumes on Raphael and Holbein. Others are in preparation. Each, profusely illustrated, $1.50.

NEW BOOKS

Children of the Mist

By EDEN PHILLPOTTS, author of "Down Dartmoor Way," "Lying Prophets," etc. 8vo, $1.50.

Mr. R. D. Blackmore, the author of "Lorna Doone," writes of this book: "I was simply astonished at the beauty and power of this novel. A pleasure is in store for many, and literature is enriched with a wholesome and genial and noble tale."

George Borrow

The Life, Writings, and Correspondence of George Borrow, 1803-1881. Based on Official and other Authentic Sources. By WILLIAM I. KNAPP, Ph.D., LL.D. With 22 illustrations. In two vols. 8vo. $6.00.

George Borrow was born in East Dereham, Norfolk, England, in 1803. He was noted for his eccentricities, his fondness for the gypsies, his passion for athletic exercises, his scorn for the gentilities of life, and his vigorous advocacy of the doctrines of the Church of England. Borrow was the author of many works and translations, the most important of these being "Lavengro" and "The Bible in Spain."

Gladstone

Life of William Ewart Gladstone. By SIR WEMYSS REID. In two vols. With over 200 illustrations. 8vo, per set, $4.50.

Mr. Gladstone's life was so full and his interests and work were so diverse that the editor of this biography, Sir Wemyss Reid, felt the expediency of dividing the many phases of his subject's career and character for treatment among different writers, each the person most fitted by association with Mr. Gladstone or by knowledge of public affairs to discuss the subject treated by him. In the editing the various contributions have been welded into a harmonious and well-balanced biography. Among the contributors are Canon MacColl, G. W. E. Russell, Henry W. Lucy, Arthur J. Butler, Alfred F. Robbins, F. W. Hirst, and others.

The People of England in the 19th Century

Vol. II. now ready

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P. In two vols., Nos. 53 and 54 in The Story of the Nations Series. Fully illustrated. 12mo, each $1.50.

"The Story of England's Nineteenth Century" is a picture, rather than a record, of England's development in all the arts of peace since the close of the great war with Napoleon. Since that time a complete revolution has taken place in all that relates to applied and industrial science. Railways, ocean steamships, the electric telegraph, the submarine cable, the telephone—all these are the growth of this wonderful century, which has done more for the practical movement of civilization than all the centuries that went before.

PUBLISHED THIS WEEK:

A History of Bohemian Literature.

By FRANCIS, Count LÖTZOW. A new volume in the Literatures of the World Series. Edited by Edmund Gosse. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

The author's ample knowledge is applied in a most interesting and instructive fashion to a subject which for most readers is practically unexplored. Beginning with the "Question of the Manuscripts," the author takes up the hymns, dating probably from the tenth century, which are the earliest uncontested writings. In developing the theme of early Bohemian poetry several valuable translations are furnished as illustrations. A discussion of the early prose writers precedes an important portion of the book which treats of the epoch that witnessed the serious attempts to revive the vernacular in place of Latin, and to institute linguistic as well as religious reforms, an epoch ending with the burning of John Hus and religious persecutions. Another large phase of the subject, the development of Bohemian prose in the sixteenth century, is fully treated, together with the various new impulses of the last hundred years. The author has developed a comparatively unknown field with tact and scholarly discrimination, and his treatment of the subject is happily re-enforced by translations of characteristic examples of Bohemian literature.

Idylls of the Sea.

By FRANK T. BULLEN, author of "The Cruise of the Cachalot." Uniform edition. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

The success which Mr. Bullen has won by the force and vividness of "The Cruise of the Cachalot" imparts a special interest to the announcement of his forthcoming book, "Idylls of the Sea." This book sketches varied phases of the life and experiences of those who go down to the sea in ships. It is not confined to the whaler's exploits, but includes the things which are seen and the adventures which are undergone by all manner of men upon the sea. The keen observation and dramatic quality of the author's first book are vividly illustrated in this fascinating volume.

"Books like this are rare. The 'Idylls' gives us a new sensation, fresh, delightful, stimulating. It is salt with the sea winds and glowing with the colors of the sea."—London Literary World.

The Taming of the Jungle

By DR. C. W. DOYLE

12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.00

"Dr. Doyle has succeeded in making his sketches vivid as well as picturesque, and he seems to have seen deep into the 'motif' of the half civilized life about him. . . . Books of this character add immeasurably to our knowledge of Indian life; indeed they give it a clearer interpretation than can be gathered from the narratives of travellers. 'The Taming of the Jungle' is a charming book both as a story and as a picture of human conditions."—Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

"In all Kipling's marvellous Indian tales, informed as they are by true genius, there is nothing superior to this series of episodes. Dr. Doyle has 'arrived' and Kipling has a worthy rival on his own ground. . . . The little volume is not an echo of Kipling in any way, but an original interpretation of the primitive people of the Terai, the great jungle that skirts the foothills of the Himalayas in the province of Kumaon."—The Press.

The Taming of the Jungle

By DR. C. W. DOYLE

"Not in many a long day has there appeared such a refreshingly original and strikingly meritorious work of fiction. Dr. Doyle must be hailed as a new star on the horizon. . . . 'The Taming of the Jungle' is unique, masterly, delightful. The spirit of the Jungle Mother hovers over its pages; we have glimpses of the morning beauty and moonlight romance and terror of the Terai—the great tract of jungle that skirts the foothills of the Himalayas, in the province of Kumaon. With the realism of highest art, inspired by an intimacy of a dozen years, Dr. Doyle depicts these simple, primitive jungle-folk, their child-like affection for their natural paradise, their rather 'low-caste' Hindoo superstitions, their peculiar manners, vendettas, Padbani, love bargains, love idyls and love tragedies."—The Record, Philadelphia.

The Taming of the Jungle

By DR. C. W. DOYLE

"'The Taming of the Jungle,' by Dr. C. W. Doyle is less a story than a series of sketches dealing with India and Indian life; they are written with vigor; the characters are firmly drawn and the local color admirably preserved. The subject matter naturally recalls Mr. Kipling, but Dr. Doyle is no imitator, he records at first hand and with a full knowledge of his subject; he draws a character or a situation in a few bold strokes, and like the great master he has the happy art of selection and condensation; and some of his most effective scenes are reached through hints rather than by elaborate description. The book is admirable both in style and matter, and everywhere reveals the taste and imagination of the true literary artist."—Saturday Evening Gazette, Boston.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready Lord Charles Beresford's book, "The Break-Up of China." A fitting introduction to this work may be found in an article by Lord Charles, which appears in the current number of The North American Review.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY call special attention to Dr. C. W. Doyle's "Taming of the Jungle," which is among the most notable new books of the hour. Dr. Doyle is a physician of Southern California who was born under the shadow of the Himalayas, and must not be confounded with his distinguished professional brother, the author of "Sherlock Holmes." "The Taming of the Jungle" is an original work of fiction which has been highly praised by very competent critics.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have ready to-day Theodore Roosevelt's long-expected description of the work of "The Rough Riders," with many excellent illustrations from photographs. They have also just ready "A History of the Jewish People," by Charles Foster Kent, covering the Babylonian, Persian, and Greek periods; the second volume in the Coleridge-Brothers' edition of Byron's Works, containing "Child Harold;" and "The Cable Story Book," selections for school reading, edited by Mary E. Bert and Lucy L. Cable, which is added to Scribner's Series of School Reading.

DOUBLEDAY & McCLURE COMPANY will publish early in June new editions from new plates of those volumes by Kipling, the rights of which they recently purchased from The Macmillan Company. The author has revised thoroughly at least two of the volumes—"Plain Tales from the Hills" and "The Light that Failed." Many pages of the latter, it is said, have been entirely rewritten. They will publish at the same time Kipling's latest volume, "From Sea to Sea," which will include some hitherto unpublished matter, the first accurate text of the "American Notes," "The Smith Administration," "Letters of Marque," and "The City of Dreadful Night."

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish shortly "A History of the American Nation," by Professor A. C. McLaughlin (the first volume of the new Twentieth Century Series), the purpose of which is to trace the main outlines of national development and to show how the American people came to be what they are; "A History of Bohemian Literature," by Count Litzow, a new volume of the Literatures of the World Series; Cy Warman's new novel, "Snow on the Headlight," in which the author deals with a great railroad strike, and throws light on certain characteristic situations that are usually unknown; also, "Idylls of the Sea," by F. T. Bullen, author of "The Cruise of the Cachalot," in which the author will sketch varied phases of the life and experiences of "those who go down to the sea in ships."

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have just ready "Richard Carvel," by Winston Churchill, a novel of far wider scope and more serious import than his delightful "The Celebrity," which is illustrated by Malcolm Fraser; "The Trail of the Goldseeker," by Hamlin Garland, sketches in prose and verse, the gatherings from the author's recent tramp overland to the gold-fields; a new book by the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden," bearing the title "A Solitary Summer," also "From Comte to Benjamin Kidd—the appeal to biology or evolution for human guidance," by Professor Robert Macintosh, of Lancashire Independent College. They will publish next week the sermon preached at the ordination of the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs by the Rev. Dr. George William Douglas, at the Pro-Cathedral, New York, on the 14th inst. Two new biographies are also added to the long Macmillan list of this class: "The Life of Henry A. Wise," by his grandson, who gives a fine picture of the famous war governor of Virginia in the John Brown crisis; and "The Life of the Rev. R. H. Quick," edited by F. Storr, editor of the Journal of Education, a biography full of information for all interested in educational matters.

Cobban, J. Maclaren. The angel of the covenant. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., 1899. c. '98. 7-561 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1603]

The sub-title reads: "Memoirs of the early career of the admirable James Graham, first Marquis of Montrose, K.G. etc., including the strange true history of his sister, the Lady Katherine Graham; his friendship with certain gentlemen; and the whole truth of his alliance with the Scottish covenant, written by A. B. in the year of God 1661: and the second of the restoration of monarchy in this kingdom, now first given to the world."

Cobban, J. Maclaren. Pursued by the law. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 5+343 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 263.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c. [1604]

The hero is a very clever inventor and skilful worker in metals. His father is found murdered under circumstances which throw suspicion on his mother. He accuses himself of the crime, is tried by a coroner's jury, and then escapes on his way to prison to await final trial. The story tells his adventures while pursued by detectives with theories, tramps wishing reward money, etc. The chief interest centres in a man posing as philanthropist and socialist, whose real occupation comes as a surprise to the reader.

Gives a vivid picture of Santiago and Southern Cuba while the war was in progress, and tells the thrilling story of a young cadet of the St. Louis, who was detailed for perilous work on shore. Young Standish is a typical American boy of the right sort, doing his duty always, whether as a boarding-house keeper among the Catskills, as a cadet engineer on the St. Louis, diving for cables in Guantanamo Bay, or struggling with an infuriated mob on the mole in Santiago. Admiral Sampson and Captain Goodrich and General Wood are numbered among the cadet's friends when the war draws towards its close.

Fairbairn, H. A., M.D. The college warden. N. Y., T. Whittaker, 1899. c. 6+154 p. por. il. D. cl., $1. [1613]

Robert Brickerhoff Fairbairn, warden of St. Stephens College, Annandale, N. Y., was born in New York City, May, 1818. Annandale is one of the preparatory colleges for Protestant Episcopal clergymen. He attained this office in 1893, and remained until his death in Annandale, having retired from active work only a short time before his death in January, 1899. This biography is by his son.

Fletcher, J. S. The paths of the prudent: a comedy; il. by J. W. Kennedy. Bost., L. C. Page & Co., 1899. 6+309 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1614]

Dorinthia Evadne Clementine Annwell, the beautiful heroine, had received her training in the "Home for the Upbringing of Prudent Maidens," a charity established by a rich and eccentric lady with the object of making girls self-reliant and watchful of their own interests. The lessons here learned Dorinthia puts in practice in a public house in Yorkshire, England, where she occupies the position of barmaid. While her course is quite selfish and heartless, it is not without its amusing side. She plays with several men who fall in love with her, prudently carrying her schemes for her own benefit to a successful conclusion, irrespective of sentiment.

Fowler, Ellen Thorneycroft. A double thread. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 5+418 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1615]

To test the affection of a favored suitor the heroine, who is both rich and beautiful, resorts to an ingenious deception, which it would spoil the story to betray. The scenes take place in London and in an English country-home. The characters are all sharply drawn, and the dialogue throughout is embued with the same wit and humor so notable in "Concerning Isabel Carnaby."

Frederic, Harold. The market-place; il. by Harrison Fisher. N. Y., F. A. Stokes Co., [1899.] c. '98, '99. 3+401 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1616]

In the person of Stormont Thorpe are illustrated the modern methods of speculation. He makes a fortune out of a rubber company which has no existence except on paper. After years of manipulating these mythical shares he withdraws his gains from the scene of his labors in comparatively unknown lands, settles down, marries, and devotes himself to philanthropy. His schemes for the benefit of his relations lead to many misunderstandings with his sister, who is a well-drawn character.

Griel, Katherine A. Glimpses of nature for little folks. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1899. c. 4+103 p. il. D. bds., 30 c. [1617]

Nature studies intended for supplementary reading in the second half of the first year and the first half of the second year. The matter contained is based, for the most part, on a year's work in a first grade. The ideas were suggested by pupils from specimens brought into the class-room. Many of the sentences are in pupils' own language.

Griffiths, Arthur. A girl of grit: a story of the intelligence department. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., 1899. c. 2-303 p. D. cl., 75 c. [1618]

The story of a young Englishman who inherits about fifteen millions from a distant relative in America. He at once becomes the subject of a conspiracy to wrest from him his newly gotten fortune. He is constantly shadowed by a detective for protection, and is helped in his worst strait by the girl he loves. The narrative simply consists of the hero's adventures in escaping his enemies.

Guthrie, T. Anstey, ["F. Anstey," pseud.] Love among the lions: a matrimonial experience. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. 5+116 p. D. cl., $1. [1619]

A bachelor of twenty-eight, who had made a reputation as a tea-taster for a large London firm, fell in love with the daughter of a teacher of elocution connected with circuses and stage affairs. This young woman insists that the young man shall marry her inside the cage "among the lions." The plot is ingenious, and the author of "Vice versa" and "The tinted Venus" seems to have struck his old tone, pure fun and good spirits.

Harnack, Adolph, D.D. History of dogma; from the 8d German ed., by Neil Buchanan. V. 6. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. 14+317 p. O. (Theological translation lib., v. 11.) cl., $2.50. [1620]

The second of the three volumes that are to cover vol. III. of the original work. This volume brings the history down to the beginning of the sixteenth century. The next volume will begin with issues following the Reformation, and will contain an index to the complete work.

Holley, Sallie. A life for liberty: anti-slavery and other letters of Sallie Holley; ed., with introd. chapters, by J. White Chadwick. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 7+391 p. por. il. O. cl., $1.50. [1627]

The subject of this biography belonged to the little group of anti-slavery women who became world-renowned through their life-work in the cause of freedom. A great deal of her story is told through her own letters, and again through Mr. Chadwick. The chapters are entitled: The anti-slavery women; Ancestry and parentage; Childhood and youth at Oberlin; Finding her place; The anti-slavery idyll; In journeyings often, etc., etc.

Holmes, Edmond G. A. The science of love. 2d ed. N. Y., J. Lane, 1899. 8+49 p. sq. O. cl., $1.25. [1628]

Jackson, F. G. A thousand days in the Arctic; with preface by Sir F. Leopold McClintock; il. from photographs by the author, and drawings by R. W. Macbeth, A.R.A., Clifford Carleton, Harry C. Edwards, and F. W. Frohawk, from data furnished by the author. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 28+940 p. por. maps, O. cl., $6. [1629]

The narrative of the Jackson-Harmsworth expedition which was sent out in 1894 by Mr. Alfred Harmsworth to ascertain the importance of Franz-Joseph Land as a way to the Pole. This land, thought to be the southern projection of a great Arctic continent, is shown by Mr. Jackson to be a group of small islands, and of practically no value as a way to the Pole. He devoted himself entirely to exploring these islands, ascertaining their geographical limits and making a scientific examination of their fauna and flora. The present work is a popular one, recording many interesting and exciting adventures and experiences, scientific matters being left for fuller treatment in a subsequent volume.

James, H. The awkward age: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 3+457 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1630]

A dramatic satire of English social life of to-day. Mr. James has taken a young girl who, as is the English custom, has been religiously excluded from her mother's drawing-room until the time comes for her to "sit downstairs"—that is, when her mother decides that it is time for her to marry. The mother is young, pretty, and ambitious, and the conditions of her drawing-room change with Nanda's advent. For the protection of Nanda's innocence everything is expurgated, altered, generally moderated, and sifted and sorted. The development of Nanda's character under these conditions is portrayed with that wealth of observation and keen insight that Mr. James can bring to bear on such a subject.

Johnson, Jesse. Testimony of the sonnets as to the authorship of the Shakespearean plays and poems. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 6+100 p. D. cl., $1. [1631]

After a careful study of the "Shakespearean sonnets," the author's deductions are that the "sonnets" were not written by Shakespeare, but it is very probable that he was the friend or patron around whom their poetry moves and to whom most of them are addressed. While insisting that the sonnets reveal another poet whose identity is unknown, he says that they also reveal "that those great dramas, or at least that those portions of them which are in the same class or grade of poetry as the sonnets, were the work of that great unknown."

Jones, Augustine. The life and work of Thomas Dudley, second governor of Massachusetts. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. il. 8", net, $5. [1632]

Jusserand, J. J. Shakespeare in France. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. il. 8", cl., $6. [1633]

Kentucky statutes; cont. all general laws, including those passed at session of 1898; with notes of decisions of the court of appeals; prefixed by the Magna Charta, the declaration of independence, [etc.] 2d ed., prepared by J. D. Carroll. Louisville. The Courier-Journal Job Pr. Co., 1899. c. 1783 p. O. shp., $8. [1634]

Kipling, Rudyard. Glossary to accompany "Departmental ditties," as written by Rudyard Kipling. N. Y., M. F. Mansfield & A. Wessels, 1899. c. 4-63p. D. cl., net, 75 c. [1635]

Words from Oriental languages, with their English equivalents, that appear in "Departmental ditties." Every other page only is printed on, leaving space for additions.

Kipling, Rudyard. Ten gems from Kipling. N. Y., F. M. Buokles & Co., [1899.] 69+4 blank p. por. 1 il. D. bds., 75 c. [1636]

Contents: Recessional; The vampire; "Tommy"; "Fuzzy wuzzy"; Belts; Danny Deever; The betrothed; Mandalay; Gunga Din; The undertaker's horse.

Koren, J. Economic aspects of the liquor problem: an investigation made for The Committee of Fifty under the direction of H. W. Farnam. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 10+337 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1637]

The investigation covers (1) Poverty and liquor; (2)

Pauperism and liquor; (8) Destitution of children and liquor; (4) Crime and liquor; (5) The negroes and the liquor problem; (6) The Indians and the liquor problem; (7) Social aspects of the saloon in Great Britain. The results of this investigation as here recorded by Mr. Koren are startling in their revelation of the enormous waste and loss entailed by the "drink habit." Many tables of statistics in an appendix summarize results of various investigations. There is a bibliography (10 p.).

Lang, Andrew. Myth, ritual, and religion. [New rev. ed.] N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 2 v., 89+389; 6+380 p. D. cl., $2.50. [1638]

The original edition of "Myth, ritual, and religion," published in 1887, has long been out of print. In revising the book Mr. Lang has brought it into line with the ideas expressed in the second part of his "Making of religion" (1898), and has excised certain passages which, as the book first appeared, were inconsistent with its main thesis. In some cases the original passages are retained in notes, to show the nature of the development of the author's opinions. A fragment or two of controversy have been deleted, and chapters 11 and 12, on the religion of the lowest races, have been entirely rewritten on the strength of more recent or earlier information lately acquired.

Levy, J. H., ed. The necessity for criminal appeal, as illustrated by the Maybrick case and the jurisprudence of various countries. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. 8°, cl., net, $4.20. [1639]

McIlwaine, Herbert C. Martyrs of empire; or, Dinkinbar. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., 1899. c. 7+310 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1640]

Although the story opens in London, most of the scenes are in Australia, the "martyrs of empire" being the pioneer settlers of that country. A young and pretty English girl, who consents to visit relatives with a distinctive purpose in view, meets when she reaches her uncle's cattle station a former playmate; following this incident is an eventful love-story and a series of misfortunes, then comes the unexpected ending of a novel dealing with life in the bush.

McIntosh, Burr W. The little I saw of Cuba; il. by the author. N. Y., F. Tennyson Neely, 1899. c. 4+173 p. il. O. cl., $2. [1641]

Burr McIntosh represented Leslie's Weekly in Cuba. He gives a graphic account of all he saw in his capacity of war correspondent of the Santiago campaign, from the embarkation of troops at Tampa, illustrating his narrative with numerous reproductions of photographs of prominent men and interesting views and historic events taken by himself on the spot.

Marchmont, Arthur W. By right of sword: a story of adventure. N. Y., The H. B. Claffin Co., 1899. 8+338 p. il. 12°, pap., 50 c. [1642]

Moses, Alfred J. The characters of crystals: an introduction to crystallography. N. Y., D. Van Nostrand Co., 1899. c. 8+211 p. O. cl., net, $2. [1643]

Describes, simply and concisely, the methods and apparatus used in studying the physical characters of crystals, and records and explains the observed phenomena without complex mathematical discussions. In the last chapter the graduate course in physical crystallography given in Columbia University has been outlined.

Mullany, Patrick Francis ["Brother Azarias," pseud.] An essay contributing to a philosophy of literature. 7th ed. rev. and enl. Phil., J. Jos. McVey, 1899. c. 289 p. D. cl., net, $1. [1644]

"The aim is to embody in a united whole the laws and principles of literature in its most general relations."—Preface. Although the present edition is in the same line of thought as the original edition published sixteen years ago, parts of the work have been revised, other parts have been enlarged, and some portions have been rewritten.

Munro, J. The story of the British race. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 2-328 p. S. (Library of useful stories.) cl., 40 c. [1645]

This brief sketch of the origin and pedigree of the rares of the British Islands embraces the most important researches and views of modern anthropologists. Contents: Introduction; The European race; Pioneers of Britain; The English and Welsh; English and Welsh types; The Scotch; Scottish types; The Irish; Irish types; The "Celtic fringe"; The "Celtic renaissance."

New Jersey. Tax adjustment act, (known as the "Martin act"; chap. 112, laws of 1886,) with the supplements from the passage of the act, including the legislative session of 1898, together with all the opinions in full of the courts thereon to date, and a complete collection of forms; published under the direction of the board of finance of Jersey City, by Howard C. Griffiths. Newark, Soney & Sage, 1899. c. 9+181 p. O. cl., $2.50. [1646]

Alfred Barry, and introd. by Bp. H. C. Potter. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1899.] 2+566 p. S. cl., net, $1. [1649]

Raymond, Mrs. Evelyn H. A daughter of the west: the story of an American princess; il. by C. Copeland. Bost., W. A. Wilde & Co., [1899.] c. 8-347 p. O. cl., $1.50. [1650]

A story of California ranch life, about a girl whose home is upon one of those great ranches. Motherless, she grows up in the care of a father who adores her, who respects the personality of his child as he respects his own, and who guides rather than governs her. The perfect freedom allowed her, which might have spoiled a meager nature, develops in her a nobility of soul and a filial devotion well worthy imitation.

Reader, Emily E. Priestess and queen: a tale of the white race of Mexico; being the adventures of Ignigene and her twenty-six fair maidens. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 308 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1651]

Describes the rites and ceremonies of the ancient worship among the first white aborigines of Mexico. Ignigene is the daughter of the dead king and the head priestess. She and her maidens are carried away by enemies and made to do the work of slaves. The efforts of the queen and priestess to free herself and friends make the story.

Ritchie, Frank. Easy Latin passages for translation. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 6+187 p. S. cl., net, 75 c. [1652]

Scott, Hugh S., ["Henry Seton Merriman," pseud.] Prisoners and captives. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., 1899. c. 3-398 p. il. D. cl., $1.25. [1656]

Lieutenant Grace, of the English navy, first meets Claud Tyars on the deck of a derelict, whose crew and captain have died of yellow fever. Grace is sent to examine the floating charnel-house, and afterward charged with taking it safely back to England. From this time out Grace and Tyar's lives cross each other. They both are drawn into a conspiracy to rescue Russian political prisoners sent to Siberia, and there are scenes of Siberian horrors, etc. English home life, with its delightful women and charming interiors, forms no little part of the story.

Shakespeare, W: The merchant of Venice; with The adventures of Giannetto, and other illustrative pieces. N. Y., Cassell & Co., Ltd., 1899. 192 p. T. (Cassell's national lib., new ser., v. 6, no. 302.) pap., 10 c. [1657]

Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. c. 16+419 p. il. D. cl., $2. [1663]

Practically a compendium of astronomy in all its branches. The work gives full and accurate information on all important phenomena of the heavens, and makes use in this of the latest discoveries. There are chapters on "The calendar," "The astronomical relations of light," and "Solar physics"; also one on "The cosmogony," giving Professor See's new theory of cosmic evolution. Besides these and other more familiar discussions, the book contains the story of the great telescopes and the progress effected by them, together with sketches of noted astronomers; and the reader who desires to go to original sources will find these indicated in bibliographic lists, which follow each chapter.

Trumbull, H: Clay. Border lines in the field of doubtful practices. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1899.] c. 2-199 p. D. cl., $1. [1664]

Chapters on: Measurement of moral lines; As to the drink question; How about tobacco?; Taking chances in life; Which side of the theatre door?; Concerning the social dance; Gain of the higher side; What the world thinks of it.

Ward, Mrs. Wilfrid. One poor scruple: a seven weeks' story. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 8+384 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1665]

A study in two generations of Riverdales, an ancient Catholic family living upon historical estates in an old-fashioned quiet way distasteful to the heroine who has married the scapegrace son of the family. Left a widow she is hampered in her plans of second marriage by the Catholicism of the Riverdales, she herself being rather lax in many things. Race and tradition and their moulding effects on character are drawn with skill.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 20, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the Weekly solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION EXHIBIT.

We regret to note that there is a complication regarding the book trade exhibit at the Paris Exposition, which, however, should be easily removed. M. Terquem, who came first to America in 1876 as the representative of the French book trade for their collective exhibit at Philadelphia, and who had become an international expert, as it were, in book trade exhibits—having arranged for both the American exhibits at Paris in 1878 and 1889, and for the French exhibit at Chicago in 1893—had courteously proposed to make similar arrangements on behalf of the American book trade at Paris in 1900. There seems to have been some misunderstanding of M. Terquem's plan at the office of the United States Commission at Chicago, the headquarters of Mr. A. S. Capehart, Director of Liberal Arts and Chemical Industries, under the first of which divisions the book exhibit is included. Space can be allotted, of course, only on direct application of exhibitors, and this was a part of M. Terquem's plan—the collective exhibit being based upon such individual applications. There was unfortunately some impression that M. Terquem was proposing a general exhibit in his own name, instead of acting as the installing and managing representative of the exhibitors. To require separate exhibits on the part of each publisher would be to make impossible an adequate representation; we are glad, therefore, to be able to state that the Commission authorities are prepared to facilitate a collective exhibit based on the individual applications for space, making possible an American book trade collective exhibit worthy of the cordial relations between France and this country. M. Terquem is entitled to credit and praise for his work hitherto and in this instance, and the trade will be pleased to know that the general plan hitherto successful for such exhibits will be followed in this case.

A PRETENDED FORERUNNER OF THE FUST-SCHOEFFER PSALTER OF 1457.

THE newly-found edition of the "Missale Speciale" has already been the source of considerable controversy on the Continent. Its pedigree goes back about fifteen years, during most of which time it rested in the collection of a private library of Germany. Its owner had procured it from an antiquarian dealer, and Ludwig Rosenthal, bookseller of Munich, secured it from the former by way of an exchange. Less than three years ago it was unheard of by bibliographers. Dr. F. Falk wrote briefly of it in a supplement to Germania, November 5, 1896, and attributed the book to the press of Fust and Schoeffer. The most labored article concerning it was written by Otto Hupp in 1898, and is entitled "Ein Missale Speciale Vorläufer des Psalteriums von 1457."* It is a small folio monograph of thirty pages, illustrated with several facsimiles. Hupp not only claims that this Missale was a forerunner of the Fust-Schoeffer Psalter of 1457, the first printed book with a date, but by a subtle process of argument concludes, and would have us believe, that the volume has good claims to be the oldest known book printed with movable types. Hupp's treatise has considerable value in demonstrating the critical methods for determining incunabula. He makes out his case, however, on circumstantial evidence. Indeed, at times, even that fails him. Dr. W. A. Copinger, the noted English bibliographer, borrowed the book from Rosenthal, and described it in his "Supplement to Hain's Repertorium Bibliographicum," vol. i., part 2, (London, 1898.) He dates it, without query, in brackets thus: "[Mogunt., Schoeffer, 1470]." In Catalogue 100, Ludwig Rosenthal offers it for sale; but no price is stated. This catalogue was issued at the close of 1898 (our copy reached us in New York on January 3 of this year.)

Rosenthal gives an extensive account of the Missal, in German, French, and English. In his German note he asserts rather positively that it is a production of Gutenberg's press, prior to his connection with Fust; but in his French and English notes he shows less certainty, and hedges under the word "probably." Henri Stein, of Paris, wrote an article for Le Bibliographe moderne, entitled "Une

* Ein Missale Speciale | Vorläufer des Psalteriums | von 1457 | Beitrag zur Geschichte der Ältesten Druckwerke | von | Otto Hupp | 1898 | Druck und Verlag : | Nationale Verlagsanstalt, Buch und Kunstdruckerei, act.-ges., München-Regensburg. Production Inconnue de L'atelier de Gutenberg," which we have read only in a German translation, printed in the Börsenblatt, for January 19, 1899. Stein says he examined the volume with great care and consideration, and is convinced that it is an early product of Gutenberg's press. So far as we are aware, these gentlemen are the only ones who have written a de visu opinion of the book—and they do not furnish us with a unanimous verdict.

On the other hand we have the contributions of two competent critics who, although they have not had the book itself in hand, have, nevertheless, examined the pretensions of Hupp and others—claimants for an extraordinarily early date. G. Hölscher contributed two articles to the Allgemeine Buchhändlerzeitung, for January 26 and February 2; and an earlier one to the Börsenblatt, for January 2, 1899. His argument, summarized, is that the date of the Missal has not as yet been determined. Adolf Schmidt, of Darmstadt, in Centralblatt für Bibliothekswesen, claims that the book was printed by an inexperienced workman, probably one of Schoeffer's, and suggests as a counter argument to Hupp, that this workman may have purloined enough type to print the volume surreptitiously. Schmidt, too, would place the date of printing in the sixties. The British and Colonial Printer and Stationer, for February 23, 1899, has a short article, a mere summary without any critical acumen, entitled: "The Latest Gutenberg (?) Find." The controversy is by no means ended. Indeed, it is to be questioned whether it will ever find a settlement. Bias and view-point are not likely to be curbed in such discussions.

To return to the Missal itself, we find that it is imperfect, lacking, among others, the very important final leaves. This is an unfortunate imperfection, since one cannot divine what a colophon, if it had one, would discover. The full page measures 306 by 218 millimetres; the printed page 212 by 132 mm. It is printed in red and black, with the so-called small missal-type of the Mentz Psalter of 1457. There are 18 lines to a page; and the initial letters, from one to four lines in depth, were put in by hand by a rubricator. The volume contains about 20 varying quires. Originally, it is presumed, there were 192 leaves; but now only 176 leaves remain, and one of these is blank. Hupp estimated that this complete "Missale Speciale" contained about 207,000 letters, while the 42 and 36 line Bibles each contain over 3,000,000 letters. The volume has neither printed pagination, catchwords, or signatures; and a given manuscript paging is unreliable. The paper is good and strong, and its watermarks are bulls' heads and three hills crowned with a three-leaf clover—such as one finds abundantly during the fifteenth century. The ink is in some places a deep black, but in others has a brown-like color. Almost throughout the book the letters have been retraced by hand, to cover defectiveness of printing. The text is all in the same type, even the Canon—which is contrary to general usage. The binding, now loosened from the book, is embossed hogskin, and bears a contemporary semblance.

It may be added that the earliest hitherto known printed edition of the "Missale Speciale," without date, has been assigned to circa 1492; while the earliest dated edition was printed in 1493.

In conclusion let us say, it is a delicate undertaking to credit Gutenberg, by hypothetical evidence, with the production of this "Missale Speciale." It is a fact, indeed, that not a single work exists in which his name appears as the printer. After examining several of the facsimiles, and weighing the arguments pro and con, we have to conclude that the Gutenberg claim has not been established; and our own inclination is for a date posterior to the Mentz Psalter of 1457.

VICTOR H. PALTSITS,
Of the Lenox Library Building, New York.

JEWISH BOOKS AT THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The American Hebrew, for March 31, contains an interesting account, by P. Wiernik, of "Jewish Literature at the New York Public Library." It is only about a year and a half ago since the Astor Library began to pay especial attention to Jewish literature, and now it contains more than 4000 volumes and pamphlets. The Jewish Department contains all the books in the library written in Hebrew and in the Judæo-German dialect as well as works in modern languages about the Jews, their history, religion, and literature. The collection includes complete sets of many periodicals, such as the Monatsschrift für die Geschichte und Wissenschaft des Judenthums, Steinschneider's Hebräische Bibliographie, Geiger's Jüdische Zeitschrift, and others equally important. The collection of the publications of learned societies is also remarkably complete and valuable. History and biography are well represented, forming especially a good working library of Jewish history, which may soon be further enriched by having added to it the collection of the American Jewish Historical Society, as was intimated in a recent address by Dr. Cyrus Adler, President of the Society. There are also a great many books that are of special interest to bibliographers, owing to the fact that they were issued at the end of the last and the beginning of the present century, from presses in Russia and Poland little known and no longer in existence. The collection is under the able administration of A. S. Freidus, a specialist in Jewish bibliography well known to Hebrew scholars in this country.

It may be interesting to note in this connection that several attempts have at different times been made by the Mashilim [self-taught Hebrew scholars] of New York to have a Jewish library of their own. In 1881 the society Shochere Sefath Eber reported in its "Ha-Masref ba-Ares ha-Chadashah" that it succeeded in getting together 442 Jewish books as a nucleus for a future library. But both the society and the library now belong to a forgotten past. The now extinct Chebrah Shas started a library in the later eighties, of which no trace is now left. The Russian-American Hebrew Association, organized in 1891, also at one time planned the founding of a Jewish library, but the plan was never carried out. The Society for the Advancement of Hebrew Literature in the first number of its organ Ner ha-Maarabi, issued in January, 1895, stated that one of its chief objects is the establishment of a great Jewish library, but hardly any one is now able to tell what became of the society, its organ or its plans. Some time afterwards the Ohole Shem Association, organized on a similar plan, issued an appeal for the same purpose, with no better results. The Mefize Sifra Zion, a younger literary society, has also been known to cherish the project of starting a Jewish library on the lower East Side. The only society which has so far succeeded in accomplishing something practical in this regard is the Bene Zion Society, which, owing to the reawakening of the Zionist movement, is able to keep up a small reading-room at 201 Henry Street.

BIBLIOPHILANDERING.

"'NEVER allow your husbands to go in for bibliophilandering,' said the wife of a confirmed bibliophile to a group of sympathetic women who were having tea with her. 'If a man drinks or gambles you may be able to reform him, but you can't do anything with a bibliomaniac, and a collection of rare books can make more trouble in a family than half a dozen children.' She was joking, and everybody laughed, but she was also telling the truth," says the New York Sun. "The wives of bibliomaniacs haven't received half the consideration and sympathy they deserve. The wife of an artist has some compensations. She has a rival in art, but her husband does try to sell his precious pictures and she shares profits. The wife of a bibliomaniac has no such consolation. Her husband never sells. He only buys; and if she economizes in clothes and opera tickets she only makes it possible for her husband to come home some evening hugging a long-coveted volume and looking sheepish but triumphant. The apologetic manner of the man who comes home at four in the morning, after a night at the club, isn't a circumstance to the cringing guilt of the bibliomaniac who faces his wife with a consciousness that in his overcoat pocket is a copy of Keats which was a bargain, but which makes impossible that sable collar she has been talking about."

ROLLED CATALOGUES.

"THERE is one item connected with the mailing of booklets and catalogues," says a writer in Advertising Experience, "that is probably more generally slighted than any other, and that is the wrapper. It is a blunder to roll a catalogue. Advertisers seem to forget entirely the fact that their book must reach the hands of the prospective customer in such shape as not to have lost one iota of its attractiveness. They, in spite of knowing from experience that rolled catalogues almost invariably are a disagreeable nuisance, even though they arrive intact and are not torn in opening, will persist in sending out their own books rolled. They will spend thousands in the preparation of an expensive book, and then, to save a few dollars, they will mail their book protected in the poorest possible way."

COPYRIGHTED BOOKS PRINTED FROM AMERICAN PLATES MAY BE IMPORTED.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY SPAULDING has decided that copyrighted books printed in Europe from plates made from type set in the United States are not subject to the prohibition of importation in Section 3 of the Copyright act of March 3, 1891.

OBITUARY NOTES.

HENRI BECQUE, the French dramatist, author of "L'Enfant Prodigue," that very clever pantomime, etc., died in Paris on the 12th inst., aged sixty-two.

REV. DR. EDWARD A. TERRY, priest of St. Anne's parish, Albany, died on the 14th inst., aged fifty-seven. When the late Harold Frederic was struggling along in Utica, more than a quarter of a century ago, a strong attachment was begun between him and Dr. Terry, and when Frederic started writing novels he pictured his friend in the priest in his story, "The Damnation of Theron Ware."

HEINRICH KIEPERT, the celebrated geographer and professor at the Berlin University, died at Berlin April 21. He was born at Berlin July 31, 1818. He published a map of Asia Minor, a "Hand-atlas," an "Atlas Antiquus," with "yearly supplements," a map of the Asiatic provinces of the Ottoman empire and one of the Ottoman empire, a large atlas of the ancient world, entitled "Formae orbis antiqui," and a number of other geographical works.

E. S. PURCELL, author of the "Life of Cardinal Manning," whose death was announced by cable a fortnight ago, passed away in his seventy-sixth year. The announcement of the fact of his advanced age will be a surprise to many persons who recall the spirit, vigor, and strength with which he responded to the attacks made upon his work. It may also be brought to mind that the discussion aroused by the book greatly interested the late Mr. Gladstone, who was freely mentioned in it. According to Sir Wemyss Reid, the deceased statesman made it his chief topic of conversation for weeks, and no public event sufficed to drive it from his mind.

ALEXANDER PAXTON GOULD, stationer and publisher of law blanks, died at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., on the 17th inst. Mr. Gould was born in New York City in 1850, and at the age of sixteen he entered the employ of the dry goods commission house of Dunham, Buckley & Co. When his brother, W. Reid Gould, died, he took charge of the latter's law blank business. This house was established in 1802 and for a long time was conducted under the name of Gould, Banks & Gould. The firm was dissolved on the death of Mr. Gould's father, when Mr. Banks became a publisher of law books and W. Reid Gould continued the law blank department of the business.

FRANCISQUE SARCEY, the well-known French dramatic critic of the Temps, died in Paris on the 15th inst. He was born at Dourdan, October 8, 1828, and educated at the Normal School. He followed the profession of schoolmaster for some time, but then turned to literature in Paris, first writing for the Figaro and then for the Revue Européenne. In 1859, he became dramatic critic of the newly founded Opinion Nationale, and in 1867 accepted a similar post on the Temps. In that capacity he wielded to the end a very wide influence over the French theatres and the theatre-going public of France. He wrote several books, among them "History of the Siege of Paris," a lively and graphic account written from a personal diary; "Le Mot et la Chose," "Le Piano de Jeanne," "Comédiens et Comédiennes," and "Souvenirs du Junet."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

SARAH GRAND's new story is entitled "Petticoats," and forms one of the series of studies of women which began with "Ideals."

THE unsigned article on "Lawlessness in the Church," in the April Fortnightly Review, was written by E. H. Cooper, author of "Mr. Blake of Newmarket," etc.

J. M. BARRIE's sequel to "Sentimental Tommy" will be entitled "Tommy and Grizel." It is said to exhibit an artistic temperament under the influence of the passion of love.

FRANK R. STOCKTON, who for nearly twenty-five years has made Madison, N. J., his home, will remove on June 1 to the old colonial mansion, Claybourne, W. Va., which he has recently bought.

ANY one possessing a volume of poems published in 1886, entitled "Dulcie Cor," by Ford Bereton, may be interested, says the London Academy, to know that Ford Bereton and S. R. Crockett are one and the same.

THE REV. DR. EDWARD EVERETT HALE has resigned the pastorate of the South Congregational (Unitarian) Church after a service of forty-three years. It is likely that the church will offer to secure an assistant for Dr. Hale if he will withdraw his resignation.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS's new novel, "Ashes of Empire," is not permitted to circulate in Germany, either in the original or in translation. Mr. Chambers always writes his manuscripts in pencil, very carefully. Every word is as distinct and plain as print, every punctuation mark perfect, every page spotless, neat, carefully numbered and corrected with an eraser. He never sits down to resume writing without first going over all that part of the story already written and polishing and refining it. Mr. Chambers cuts his work without mercy, frequently reducing a novel from 80,000 to 60,000 words after it has been finished and revised many times. His mania for cutting out whole pages is a joke with his friends, who assert that, unless forcibly deprived of a novel by his publishers, he would in time leave nothing of the manuscript except the title. It is said that his latest book, "Outsiders," soon to be published by Frederick A. Stokes Co., was cut from 100,000 to 60,000 words, and that only the firmness of his publishers saved the book from total extinction.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—P. K. Foley and A. J. Ochs (doing business, recently, as P. K. Foley & Co.) have dissolved partnership by mutual consent. P. K. Foley having purchased entire interest in the business will settle all accounts payable and receivable.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Puritan Publishing Company, dealers in subscription books, has made an assignment. It was incorporated in 1893 with a capital stock of $100,000.

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.—A. S. Law has opened a bookstore here.

FORT WORTH, TEX.—J. S. Scheuber, bookseller, is selling out.

FREMONT, NEB.—C. B. Nicodemus, bookseller, has been succeeded by W. H. Fowler.

LEBANON, PA.—D. P. Witmeyer, who has conducted the well-known bookstore on South Eighth Street for the past thirty years, has disposed of the stand to Wesley H. Bowman, formerly principal of the Wilmington (Del.) schools. The reason given for the sale is on account of Mr. Witmeyer's failing health.

LYNCHBURG, VA.—James A. Wilkins, bookseller, has moved into larger quarters at 1024 Main Street, and has changed his firm-name to J. A. Wilkins Company.

MANCHESTER, N. H.—H. O. Washburne has bought an interest in the Dartmouth College Bookstore, which will hereafter be carried on under the name of Hatch & Washburne.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Mendel & Freedman have established a book department in connection with their big store.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Judge Company, of New York, has been incorporated with a capital of $800,000 divided into $126,000 preferred and $674,000 common stock. The directors are Charles T. Barney, A. B. Fletcher, Valentine P. Snyder, A. G. Payne, Richard Delafield, Chas. Wilhelms, David H. Bates, W. C. Clark, Louis P. Bach, and Turner A. Beall, of New York City; John M. Bailey and John A. Sleicher, of Albany, and William J. Arkell, of Canajoharie.

NEW YORK CITY.—E. L. Kellogg & Co. have been incorporated to carry on a printing business. The capital is $125,000, and the directors are Amos M., Edward L., William F., and Herbert S. Kellogg, New York; Elmer C. Sherman, South Orange, N. J.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Lockwood Trade Journal Company, of which George W. Jones is the treasurer and general manager, has succeeded to the Howard Lockwood Publishing Co. The new company will continue to publish The American Stationer, Paper Trade Journal, and "Lockwood's Directory of the Paper and Stationery Trades." Mr. Jones was for some time manager of two of the largest Western newspapers—the St. Louis Republic and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The other directors of the company are Charles H. Jones, the president; L. Alers-Hankey, the vice-president; and L. E. Jones. Col. Charles H. Jones is well known as a writer and orator. He has done considerable literary work for the Appletons, Harpers, and other publishing houses, and edited the New York World for 1893-94, and also the St. Louis Republic and St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The new company did not purchase the printing business of the old Lockwood Company. It will shortly remove its offices to the paper-trade district.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Kohler Publishing Co. has removed from 134 North Tenth Street to 1024 Arch Street. This concern succeeded the firm of Ig. Kohler & Sons, who were for years located at 911 Arch Street. The aged founder of the house is living in retirement, unfortunately now entirely blind.

RICHMOND, VA.—The Bell Book and Stationery Co. have removed to the four-story building, No. 914 E. Main Street, recently purchased by them.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

PER LAMM, (Librairie Nilsson), 338 Rue Saint Honoré, Paris, has just issued the "Catalogue Annuel de la Librairie Française," for 1898, edited by D. Jordell. The catalogue is divided into three alphabets, giving clue to the work by author, by title, and by subject. (300 p. 8°, pap.)

G. CIVELLI, Via Faenza 91, Florence, Italy, has just published the first number of the Bullettino di Bibliografia Giuridica Italiano Contemporanea, compiled on the decimal system by Saladino Saladini-Pilastri, who works in co-operation with the International Bibliographic Institute at Brussels. The Bullettino will include every current legal work published in Italy.

THE BOSTON BOOK COMPANY, 15½ Beacon Street, Boston, has just published as Bulletin of Bibliography Pamphlets, No. 6, a "Children's Reading List on Animals," consisting of descriptions, stories, poems, and verses relating to the chief mammals of the world. This is the reference list, now enlarged and revised, compiled by the Pratt Institute Library of Brooklyn, N. Y., for use with the large collection of pictures of animals made last winter for exhibition in the children's room. (24 p. 16°, pap., 10 c.)

"A CATALOGUE OF AUTHORS WHOSE BOOKS ARE PUBLISHED BY HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO." is a worthy specimen of the fine bookmaking of the Riverside Press. The arrangement of the main body is by authors, their works being given in chronological order. There is also an exhaustive index by titles, together with lists of the several libraries, series, and periodicals issued by the firm, and some account of the origin and character of these literary enterprises. The biographical sketches accompanying the names of the authors in this catalogue aim to supply that condensed information which a justifiable curiosity as to their personality demands. There are no portraits in this catalogue, with the exception of a frontispiece group presenting pictures of the six great figures in American literature, whose works the house publishes—Emerson, Longfellow, Whittier, Hawthorne, Lowell, and Holmes. To this list of stars of the first magnitude should be added Cooper; while to come down to more recent times, Bret Harte, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, and Edmund Clarence Stedman should be mentioned. A short history of the firm, from the foundation of the printing-office of Bolles & Houghton in 1849 to the present day, prefaces the catalogue. (205 p. 8°, bds., 25 cents.)

CATALOGUES OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKS.—The Burnham Antique Bookstore, cor. Milk and Washington Sts., Boston, Miscellaneous. (No. 5, 1423 titles.)—Burrows Brothers Co., Cleveland, O., Choice and rare imported books. (No. 15, 954-1432 titles.)—Francis Edwards, 83 High St., Marylebone, London, Old gardening books, old cookery books, and recipes. (No. 238, 845 titles.)—Otto Harrassowitz, 14 Queerstr., Leipzig, Skandinavische, niederländische u. englische Linguistik u. Literatur. (No. 243, 2516 titles.)—U. P. James, 127 W. 7th St., Cincinnati, O., Miscellaneous. (No. 2, 858 titles.)—M. Spitzgatis, 23 Marienstr., Leipzig, Hebraica und Judaica—Aramäisch, Phönizisch. (No. 68, 1196 titles.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE SMITH-SHAW CO., of "The Literary Shop," 143 East Fourth Street, Cincinnati, O., have in press a volume of poetry by Charles W. Tackenberg.

H. TAYLOR ROGERS, Asheville, N. C., has just ready a new issue of "Rogers's Asheville," a collection of views of Asheville and its surroundings.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY will publish in their People's Library, about June 20, "The Manxman," by Hall Caine. The American News Company has secured the entire edition of this novel in paper covers.

LEE & SHEPARD announce for the early fall "For Love's Sweet Sake: Selected Poems of Love in All Moods," edited by G. Hembert Westley; and "Camping on the St. Lawrence, or, On the Trail of the Early Discoverers," a boy's book, by Everett T. Tomlinson.

In our notice of Richard J. Leggat we spoke of his buying at the trade sales under the name of "Horne." That was an error, as Mr. Leggat's nom de guerre was "Brag." "Horne," we believe, was the name under which Tibbals bought at the trade sales.

MRS. EMMA MARSHALL, whose death is noted elsewhere in this issue, had just completed two new stories—"A Daughter of the People" and "The Parson's Daughter and How Mr. Romney Painted Her," both of which will be published in the autumn by E. P. Dutton & Co.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. will publish next week "The House of Strange Secrets," a detective story, by A. Eric Bayly, an Englishman who has already achieved a reputation in London; also, "The Cruise of the Ocean Wave," an interesting story of a sea voyage, by W. N. Oscar.

STREET & SMITH have just published five handbooks on timely topics by A. D. Hall, entitled "Cuba: its past, present, and future," "Puerto Rico," "Hawaii," "A Life of the Pope," and "The Philippines." The material collected is said to have been written, compiled, and translated from the best sources of information.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXPRESS COMPANY, 52 Broadway, New York, have published an interesting chart of the world, showing the lines travelled by ships employed in the world's commerce. The chart was prepared by the Hydrographic Office of the U. S. Navy, and may be had mounted for 50 cents and unmounted for 25 cents.

It is an open secret, we believe, that an authorized cheap edition of Kipling's collected works will shortly be placed on the market. The collection will include all the writings that Kipling wishes to see in print, including the "Departmental Ditties," which have recently been revised by the author. The selling agents will be the H. B. Claflin Co.

JOHN LANE has just ready a volume of highly emotional poems by Edmond Holmes, entitled "The Silence of Love," which has the ring of true poetry; and "The Duke of Linden," a novel by J. F. Charles, of which the scene is the Rhineland in the first half of the century, and of which the characters have an ancestry dating back to the eleventh century.

CHARLES ORR, (Case Library,) Cleveland, Ohio, has just issued a small volume entitled "One Hundred Mushroom Receipts," by Kate Sargeant. Owing to the present popular interest in the subject of mushrooms, and as there is no cook-book devoted exclusively to them, the present volume therefore fills a decided want and will no doubt meet with favor.

THE drawings and plates made for "Mr. Isolate of Lonelyville," by C. C. Converse, one of the books R. H. Russell expected to issue this summer, were recently destroyed by fire at a Boston electrotypers. The drawings are being remade, however, and further than a short delay in the manufacture, which will necessitate postponing its publication until fall, no harm has been done.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have just issued a second volume of Dr. Dennis's "Christian Missions and Social Progress." The original plan of completing this work in two volumes, made before the magnitude of the undertaking was fully realized, has now been changed, and it will appear in three volumes of corresponding size. The second volume contains more illustrations than the first. They have also just published a new volume by Dr. H. Clay Trumbull, the well-known editor of the Sunday-School Times, on the subject of questionable amusements, entitled "Border Lines in the Field of Doubtful Practices."

DAVID MCKAY, Philadelphia, has made arrangements with the American Academy of Political and Social Science, by which he will have the sale of "The Foreign Policy of the United States—Political and Commercial," containing the addresses and discussions at the annual meeting of the society, April 7-8, 1899, by professors from the leading universities, His Excellency Wu Ting-Fang, Carl Schurz, and others; also, a translation from the German by Prof. F. W. Moore of "The Outlines of Sociology," by Prof. Ludwig Gumplowicz, of Graz, Austria, a book which has received considerable attention from scholars in Europe and America.

THE GLEASON PUBLISHING COMPANY, of Fremont, Ohio, has published a book entitled "It Was Marlowe, a story of three centuries," by Wilbur Gleason Zeigler, who gives point to his theme in the following lines in his book: "On the night of the murder in the old Deptford tavern, the man who was to profit most from the false shadows thrown by the crime and its concealment was at the Boar's Head Tavern in London. This man was William Shakespeare." Although clearly a romance, Dr. William J. Rolfe, the well-known Shakespearean scholar, says of the book, "The Baconian heretics might be forgiven if they had put their mad hypothesis in the same readable form."

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have just published a handy book on astronomy, entitled "Stars and Telescopes," by David P. Todd, professor of astronomy and director of the Observatory at Amherst College. The author's aim has been to give full and accurate information on all important phenomena of the heavens, and to include an account of all the latest discoveries. Some of the chapters treat of "The Calendar," "The Astronomical Relations of Light," and "Solar Physics," and there is one of special importance on "The Cosmogony," giving a careful exposition of Professor See's new theory of cosmic evolution. The volume contains upward of two hundred illustrations, maps, etc.

D. APPLETON & Co. have received the following letter from the sister of the late Edward Noyes Westcott, author of "David Harum," which should set at rest the various speculative opinions which have been scattered abroad concerning the supposed originals of the characters contained in Mr. Westcott's novel. Mrs. Margaret Westcott Muzzey writes: "Having frequently been asked from whom the various characters in 'David Harum' were drawn, and noticing that several people in different parts of the country assert themselves to be the originals of the hero (John Lenox) or heroine (Mary Blake,) it seems worth while to state, for the benefit of those whom it may interest, that to my certain knowledge no character in my brother's book was drawn from life. 'David Harum' may be called a composite photograph. All the other people in the book are entirely creatures of Mr. Westcott's fancy and imagination."

SMALL, MAYNARD & COMPANY have in press "The Dreyfus Story," a short book about the Dreyfus case, by Richard W. Hale, a Boston lawyer. The books now available on the subject are the work of avowed partisans of Dreyfus, and are longer than most persons, perhaps, care to read through. Mr. Hale has tried to put in handy compass enough of the broad, general facts to make a complete and easily read story of the case. He has tried to answer concisely the question, "What is it all about?" He has also given, without technical language, a little explanation of the French law bearing on the case, something which has not before been done for the general reader, but which will do more than anything else to explain the complications—the trials, retrials, and debates—of the last two years. They will publish next September F. P. Dunne's new book, "Mr. Dooley in the Hearts of His Countrymen." "Mr. Dooley in Peace and in War" is now in its 50th thousand. The 60th thousand is in preparation.

DREXEL BIDDLE, Philadelphia, expects to publish early next month "Ouida's" new volume of short stories, entitled "La Strega." He has in preparation an excellent translation of Maupassant's "Strong as Death," by Teófilo E. Comba, member of the Anglo-American firm of Truslove, Hanson & Comba; a volume of short stories, entitled "In the Bivouac of Life," by Miss Sarah P. Brooks, author of "In Divers Paths," etc.; and "Madam Paradox," a novel, by Mrs. Ormerod, author of "My Intimate Enemy." Of W. Clark Russell's novel, "An Atlantic Tragedy," 1100 copies were sold in advance of publication. In the early fall a volume of "Arctic Romances," by Albert White Vorse, will be published. Mr. Vorse was a member of Lieutenant Peary's expedition of '92, which reached about the same latitude as that attained by the second Grinnell expedition under Ellsha Kent Kane in '53-'55. Mr. Vorse, also, assisted Professor Hellprin in making the changes now found on the latest maps of Greenland.

CHARLES B. HALL, New York City, has compiled, illustrated, and published in exceedingly handsome form a work entitled "Military Records of General Officers of the Confederate States," which presents 108 portraits of Confederate State Generals and Major-Generals, engraved or etched on steel or copper. The rank of each officer in the Civil War is given and his place in the United State service before the strife. All the ante-bellum records, military or civil, are set forth in strictest accordance with facts. For twenty years Mr. Hall has worked to obtain the portraits, often finding a specially desired one in a most unlikely place. Conspicuous are the portraits of Robert E. Lee, Samuel Cooper, Albert Sidney Johnston, G. T. Beauregard, and John B. Hood. Mr. Hall has prepared a monumental work which should find its place in every library that wishes to have its history of the Civil War complete. Now that the sons of the Southern heroes of the Civil War have fought shoulder to shoulder again for the United States, it is fitting that such a record of their fathers' deeds should be among the historical documents of the United States.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish immediately a volume entitled "Vassar Studies," by Julia A. Schwartz, A.M. ('96.) Miss Schwartz's collection of studies has been planned to offer, by means of emphasizing in each paper a characteristic element or quality of student life, a faithful impression of the spirit and the personality of modern Vassar. The author states her aim thus: "To embody in literary form for the alumnae memories and impressions of their college days, and to present before the public a truthful picture of the life in such a community." She has treated of character rather than incident; yet her stories are not lacking in action nor in the picturesque background of college pastime as well as that of college work. The work will contain a dozen illustrations. They will also issue at once "Miss Cayley's Adventures," by Grant Allen, author of "Flowers and Their Pedigrees," etc. This is the obverse of the old story of the youth who starts forth with a sound heart and tuppence in his pocket to win his fortune. Mr. Allen's youth is a girl, a graduate of Girton, who is left penniless, and who is compelled to make her own way in life. Her varied experiences are told in Mr. Allen's old-time graceful manner, which won for him an international reputation. The book will contain 80 illustrations by Gordon Browne.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY have in preparation a volume entitled "Our Conquests in the Pacific," by Oscar King Davis, the correspondent of the New York Sun, whose account of the capture of Guam by our naval forces is considered to be one of the best things of the kind written during the Spanish-American war; "Active Service," by Stephen Crane, who uses as a background for his story the Greco-Turkish war; a "Nonsense Almanack," and "A Lively City o' Ligg," by Gelett Burgess; "Pabo, the Priest," a historical novel by Rev. S. Baring-Gould, which has to do with the invasion of Wales by the Norman rulers of England; "What Women Can Earn," a suggestive volume for American women and girls who are looking about them for some means of earning a livelihood, to which Miss Grace H. Dodge, Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, Thomas Hunter, and others have contributed; "Letitia Berkeley, A. M.," a novel by Josephine Bontecou Steffens, who has spent some years in the study of philosophy and medicine in Germany and France and whose experiences there have been drawn upon to some extent in the construction of her story; and a story for young people, entitled "Loyal Hearts and True," by Mrs. Charles W. Ide, whose work in this field, written under the pseudonym of Ruth Ogden, is known to thousands of American boys and girls.

FOREIGN NOTES.

MACMILLAN & Co., London, will publish in the fall an édition de luxe of Canon Alinger's edition of Charles Lamb's works, with important new letters.

HODDER & STOUGHTON, London, will publish shortly "Iona March," by S. R. Crockett, which was published serially under the title of "A Woman of Fortune."

HUTCHINSON & Co., London, will issue soon Joseph Hatton's new work, an Anglo-Spanish romance, including for the first time a love-story of Sir Walter Raleigh.

J. M. DENT & Co. have begun the issue of the Haddon Hall Library, a new series, the first volume of which is "Fly Fishing," by Sir Edward Grey. The next two volumes will be Dean Hole's "Our Gardens" and Dewar's "Wild Life and Sport in Hampshire."

THE Trustees of the British Museum, assisted by the principal librarian and director, Sir Edward Maunde Thompson, are issuing, under the supervision of Geo. F. Warner, "Facsimiles of Illuminated Manuscripts in the British Museum," consisting of miniatures, their borders and initials, reproduced in gold and colors by William Griggs, with descriptive text by George F. Warner, M.A., assistant keeper of manuscripts. The first series—fifteen plates—has just been published, and is already out of print. How many series of this undertaking will be published will depend, firstly, on the public patronage, and, secondly, upon the health and strength of Mr. Griggs. Each series is sold separately.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN STEVENS, who has been conducting a library, literary, and general book agency business in London for the last thirty-five years under the firm-name of B. F. Stevens, has taken H. J. Brown into partnership, and will hereafter do business as B. F. Stevens & Brown. Benjamin Franklin Stevens, of Vermont, went to London with Dr. Cogswell, of the Astor Library, in July, 1860, and was with his brother, Henry Stevens, as clerk until he began business on his own account in August, 1864. Henry John Brown has been with Mr. Stevens twenty-seven years as clerk, confidential clerk, and managing clerk, and since his forty-third birthday at Easter, 1899, has been co-partner with Mr. Stevens.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusives of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 times a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

HAVE READY TO-DAY:

The Rough Riders.

By GOV. THEODORE 'ROOSEVELT,

Colonel 1st Volunteer Cavalry, U. S. A.

With 40 full-page illustrations and 2 portraits of Governor Roosevelt, and with an Appendix. Octavo, 298 pp., $2.00.

Governor Roosevelt's book has already claimed everybody's attention as in all respects a national event. It has the distinction of being an authoritative narrative, personal and intensely vivid, of a unique fighting corps. The illustrations, from photographs by experts, are especially noteworthy.

A History of the Jewish People

During the Babylonian, Persian, and Greek Periods. By CHARLES FOSTER KENT, Ph.D., of Brown University. Vol. III. of the HISTORICAL SERIES FOR BIBLE STUDENTS. Maps. 12mo, $1.25 net.

The little understood epochs treated in this volume are in many respects the most important of Biblical history, for they not only witnessed the birth and development of Judaism, but are now also regarded as the background of the majority of the Old Testament books.

The Messages of the Earlier Prophets.

Vol. I. in THE MESSAGES OF THE BIBLE. Edited by Prof. F. K. SANDERS, of Yale, and Prof. C. F. KENT, of Brown University. Square 16mo, $1.25 net.

The first volume in a new series in which emphasis is placed upon the concise, forcible, and realistic interpretation of the Bible. The books of the Bible are grouped according to a natural classification, their contents arranged in the order of appearance, and a scholarly yet popular paraphrase of their distinctive thought given in plain and expressive English.

Windy Creek.

By HELEN STUART THOMPSON. 12mo, $1.25.

A series of sketches which tell, in a straightforward and quite unconventional way, the story of a community of Colorado settlers who are new in literature. These people are characterized by Miss Thompson with an unflinching instinct for what is most poignant and humorous in them.

The Cable Story Book.

Selections for School Reading. Edited by MARY E. BURT and LUCY L. CABLE. (The Scribner Series of School Reading.) Illustrated. 12mo, 60 cents net.

This book has been prepared in response to an urgent demand from various sources for a volume of selections from Mr. Cable's most popular books for school readers.

The Poetical and Prose Works of Lord Byron.

Edited, from a new text with many unpublished additions, by ERNEST HARTLEY COLE-RIDGE and R. E. PROTHERO. Illustrated. To be in 12 vols. Each, crown 8vo, $2.00.

The Best Key to Educational Books.

THE

American Educational CatalogueFor 1899,

whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its thirtieth year, and that claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school books.

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most complete order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue is made entirely new each year, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and all new books (ready or to be ready for the Fall) are added in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS:

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements:

*With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5.00 ;
per 1000, $40.00.*

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or for $1.00 if plate is sent.

Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

The regular Educational Number of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY" will be supplied at 50 cents per copy in leatherette.

“Summer Reading.”

To Retail Dealers :

THE SUMMER CATALOGUE, issued for twenty-one years, has been found so useful and profitable by enterprising dealers in working up business during the slow summer season, that it has become a regular feature of the trade. The twenty-second issue, with an attractive cover, in a special pamphlet adapted for imprint circulation all through the summer, will be published in connection with THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY about the first of June.

The imprint editions will contain, in addition to a catalogue of guide-books and light literature for summer reading, an entirely new selection of reading-matter both of a practical and entertaining character, chiefly intended for the use and amusement of tourists, pleasure-seekers, and visitors of summer resorts.

Booksellers should remember that, while summer is usually a dull time, the sales of light literature, etc., can be pushed to make a successful business even in this season. The classes who travel are of course those who have money to spend, even in dull times, and the summer is the time when very many bookbuyers do the greater part of their reading. Booksellers at or near summer resorts should especially avail themselves of this publication, while city dealers should remember that it will also be useful to tempt stay-at-homes to make investments, or to follow up customers otherwise out of reach.

☞ Orders for imprint editions at subscription rates should be sent in at once, as the quantity is limited.

Terms for Editions with Imprint:

By GOV. THEODORE ROOSEVELT

COLONEL 1st VOLUNTEER CAVALRY, U.S.A.

With 40 full-page illustrations from photographs by Dwight L. Elmendorf and others, and with two portraits (one in photogravure), of Gov. Roosevelt.

Octavo, $2.00.

CONTENTS.—I. Raising the Regiment—II. To Cuba—III. General Young's Fight at Las Guasimas—IV. The Cavalry at Santiago—V. In the Trenches—VI. The Return Home—Appendices.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT'S account of the ROUGH RIDERS is naturally awaited with intense eagerness from one end of the country to the other. His book has already claimed everybody's attention as in all respects a national event. The distinguished author was, with General Wood, the organizer and commander of the Rough Riders, and he tells in his book the picturesque story from the inception of the original idea to the mustering out of the justly famous regiment. His book has the distinction of being an authoritative narrative, personal and intensely vivid, of a unique fighting corps. The illustrations, from photographs by experts, are especially noteworthy.

THE DREYFUS CASE.

By RICHARD W. HALE.

A brief and interesting statement of the Dreyfus case, containing what will be new to most readers, a simple explanation of those features of the French law under which the various trials and appeals have been held.

ON THE BIRDS' HIGHWAY.

By REGINALD HEBER HOWE, Jr.

One of the most beautiful of recent "Bird Books." It contains over sixty illustrations from photographs by the author and a remarkable frontispiece in colors reproduced from a painting by Louis Agassiz Fierstein. Cloth, decorative, $2.00.

THE PEDAGOGUES.

By ARTHUR STANWOOD PIER.

One of the cleverest of all the novels which have treated of the various phases of Harvard life—and unique in that it has to do with the contrasts and humors of that little-known department of the University, the Harvard Summer School.

Cloth, decorative, $1.25.

PLAIN TALK IN PSALM AND PARABLE.

By ERNEST HOWARD CROSBY.

A volume of serious and forcible verse, appealing at once to the lover of poetry and to the advocate of "a better order." Cloth, $1.50.

SEA DRIFT.

By GRACE ELLERY CHANNING.

A book of poems which ranges attractively from Italy to Southern California. Its lyric quality is notably fine and spontaneous. Cloth, decorative, $1.50.

"From the first page to the last the atmosphere is that of pure romance, in which every touch is convincing. The historical personages, while sketched in firmly, receive their just values. The main characters are treated with a breadth that recalls Dumas and equals the very best of Stanley Weyman. All live, unaffectedly human. Perhaps the most successful is the Irish Viscount Barrymore, who, with his knavery, loyalty, and breezy fatuity, is a creation. The narrative grips all the way through. Mingled with stirring adventure gallantly told are scenes of quiet humor and charm. In fact, nothing but unstinted praise can be given to this singularly delightful romance."

JUST PUBLISHED:

THE LAUNCHING OF A MAN.

By STANLEY WATERLOO,

Author of "Story of Ab," "A Man and a Woman," etc.

This is one of the few late novels whose pages make good the title of the book. The author has constructed his great story on the understanding that before a man is "launched" he has some further graduating to do after receiving his sheepskin from the university. He takes his hero, duly laureated, out into the exacting world of American business life, where he fully develops his manhood.

IN THE CORN-FIELD STUBBLE.

Novels That Are Being Talked About.

NOVELS that are generally talked about may not always be of the highest literary merit, yet they must have some special quality, intellectual or otherwise, to pique curiosity and arouse interest. Not to have read them places us in the position of not knowing the latest news. Our intention is to give some account of the more recent works of fiction that have met with wide discussion and have sold largely, so that summer tourists or migrators to summer homes may have a slight guide in choosing books to carry away with them. Novels, good, bad and indifferent, are the chief literary fruits of the present season. They are being turned out by the presses in overwhelming numbers. We shall make no attempt to be critical, nor shall we name the novels in the order of their merit. Our readers may rely upon it, however, that all that we do name will be found extremely readable. Whether in all cases the reader will be made "better" by the reading we cannot insure. That he will be made "happier" is almost a certainty—for, whatever his choice may be, he is sure to be entertained.

On the top wave of popularity just at present is "David Harum," by Edward Noyes Westcott, written out of the author's own experience as a country banker for at least fifty years in Central New York. The book appeals more strongly to the masculine intellect, which has found it a rich mine of humor. Mr. Westcott, sad to record, did not live to know of the success of his one novel.

Another author who has captured the public with a first book is Charles Major, who wrote under the pen-name of Edwin Caskoden. His work, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," is a romantic story of the reign of Henry the Eighth, rich in historical details and one of the prettiest love tales of the Middle Ages yet written. The selfishness of the rich and the hopelessness of the very poor find picturesque treatment in "No. 5 John St.," by Richard Whiteing. The address stands for a lodging-house in the slums of London, in which a wealthy young baronet sometimes sought a home in pursuit of his socialistic studies. The story particularly lends itself to discussion.

Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler's first novel, "Concerning Isabel Carnaby," quickly won its way with readers of fiction. Though not without faults, its freshness and originality outweigh defects. The wit of its dialogue and its pleasant humor make it delightful reading. A second novel by Miss Fowler, called "A Double Thread," has recently been issued. Here again we are met with the extreme modernity of thoughts that so charms in "Isabel Carnaby," and also with an embarrassment of riches almost in epigrammatic sayings and repartee. Both novels are strong in character delineations taken from English middle-class life and fashionable life. The first book presents a very pleasant and apparently true picture of a Nonconformist family. Beatrice Harraden has just finished "The Fowler," upon which she has worked for a number of years. It is more elaborate than "Ships That Pass in the Night," but possesses like that novel a morbid strain. Its scene is laid in England, and it is largely a character study of a most disagreeable young man, whose mesmeric or hypnotic power is used unscrupulously. Miss Harraden recalls an American writer, Miss Ellen Glasgow, a Southern girl, whose knowledge of the seamy side of life is as marvellous as her own. Miss Glasgow's reputation was made but a short time ago with "The Descendent." Her recent novel is called "Phases of an Inferior Planet," a fourth or fifth rate Bohemia in New York City being the "inferior planet." Poor authors, struggling artists, imppecunious journalists, and starving scientists are the characters. An intense love-story told with painful truthfulness has its rise and fall in this environment. The Ibsen influence is even more strongly marked in "The Open Question" than in either of the former novels. C. E. Raimond, the name that appears on the title-page, is the pseudonym of Elizabeth Robins, an American woman living in England, who has personated on the stage several of the characters of Ibsen's dramas. Her book deals with heredity, and is a special plea against the marriage of near relations and persons suffering from incurable disease. The argument is cleverly and strongly presented, but the question remains an open question at the end. Sad as is the subject, and hopelessly as it is treated, the book nevertheless abounds in most enjoyable reading-matter, and is a notably intellectual effort. The character drawing is incisive and picturesque, while the wit and wisdom in which the conversations are so rich make the rereading of many of the pages an unalloyed pleasure.

Mrs. Gertrude Atherton's "A Daughter of the Vine" is another "heredity" story, with a background of California life in the forties. "The Californians," a more cheerful story from her clever pen, deals altogether with the love affairs and social triumphs of two pretty girls. Frank Norris became known to novel-readers within the year by his "Moran of the Lady Letty." His latest and much talked about story is "McTeague." Sordid life in San Francisco, with characters taken from the lowest stratum of society, whose ignorance and vulgarity are emphasized by their love of money and pursuit of it, are what he there writes about. Mr. Frank Norris belongs to the realistic school, his Zola-like touches leaving nothing unknown of the repulsiveness of his subject. As an antidote to these pessimistic estimates of life we offer Maurice Hewlett's charming story of "The Forest Lovers," as innocent and delightful as a fairy tale, and Miss Mary Johnston's "Prisoners of Hope," both marked successes of the year, the latter being a fresh and vigorous story of Virginia in 1663, when Sir William Berkeley was Governor. "Poor Human Nature," by E. Godfrey, apparently a great lover of Wagner's music, is a most interesting story of a German tenor and prima donna before the footlights and in private life. Music lovers have a treat before them in reading the book. Mrs. Barr's "I, Thou, and the Other One" is a love-tale of the closing days of the reign of George IV. and of the beginning of the reign of William IV. "The Dull Miss Archinard," by Anne Douglas Sedgwick, and "The Confounding of Camellia," by the same author, are charming stories of English home life. Mrs. Burton Harrison's "Good Americans" and "A Triple Entanglement" have been widely read; they show intimate knowledge of the ways of good society in two continents. Lily Dougall's "The Mormon Prophets" weaves a romantic narrative around Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism, aiming seemingly to place both the prophet and his religion in a better light. The motive of "A Tent of Grace," by Adelina C. Lust, is the deep gulf of racial distinction that existed between the Christian and the Jew in Germany about the middle of the century. "A Duet," by Conan Doyle, is quite a departure from his usual style, being a simple domestic story charmingly told of the first year in a young couple's married life. Howells's "Ragged Lady" goes back to his early hunting ground, New England, and to his favorite New England girl. Selma Lagerlöf, a Swedish writer, has only recently had her works translated into English. Her acquaintance may be made through two remarkable novels—"Story of Gösta Berling" and "The Miracles of Anti-christ," which are full of a loving kindness to all humanity. "Red Rock," by Thomas Nelson Page, is a romance of Virginia in the days of reconstruction directly after the Civil War. Picturesque romances of pure adventure are included in Munro's "John Splendid," S. R. Crockett's "The Black Douglas," Weyman's "The Castle Inn," Rider Haggard's "Swallow," Gras's "The Terror," Anthony Hope's "Rupert of Hentzau," and Richard Harding Davis's "The King's Jackal."

Among volumes of short stories that have attracted special attention, Kipling's "The Day's Work" may be first mentioned. Others in this line containing entertaining reading-matter are Long's fascinating tales of Japanese life under the title of "Madame Butterfly," Miss Brown's "Tiverton Tales," Mrs. Burnham's "A West Point Wooing," Yeats' "Heart of Denise," Wildman's "Tales of the Malayan Coast," and Williams' "The Stolen Story."

The prices of all these novels quoted may be found further on under lists of "Books for Summer Travellers," with a special heading—"The New Novels." Attention is also called to lists in this department giving new works on nature, books of travel and adventure, outdoor sports and exercises, etc. Readers should also carefully consult the advertising pages.

The Beginnings of Our Navy.

From Churchill's "Richard Carvel." (Macmillan.)

"I AM now on my way to Philadelphia to obtain a commission in the navy soon to be born."

Mr. Chase smiled. John Paul little suspected that he was a member of the Congress.

"This is news indeed, Mr. Jones," he said. "I have yet to hear of the birth of this infant navy, for which we have not yet begun to make swaddling clothes."

"We are not yet an infant state, sir," Mr. Carroll put in, with a shade of rebuke. For Maryland was well content with the government she had enjoyed, and her best patriots long afterwards shunned the length of secession. "I believe and pray that the king will come to his senses. And as for the navy, it is folly. How can we hope to compete with England on the sea?"

"All great things must have a beginning, sir," replied John Paul, launching forth at once, nothing daunted by such cold conservatism. "What Israelite brick-maker of Pharaoh's dreamed of Solomon's temple? Nay, Moses himself had no conception of it. And God will send us our pillars of cloud and of fire. No fight ever was won by man or nation content with half a victory. We have forests to build an hundred armadas, and I will command a fleet and it is given me."

"I faith, I believe you, sir," cried Captain Daniel, with admiration.

"What plan would you pursue, sir?" asked Mr. Chase.

"What plan, sir!" said Captain John Paul, those wonderful eyes of his alight. "In the first place, we Americans build the fastest ships in the world—yours of the Chesapeake are as fleet as any. Here, if I am not mistaken, one hundred and eighty-two were built in the year '71. They are idle now. To them I would issue letters of marque, to harry England's trade. From Carolina to Maine we have the wood and iron to build cruisers, in harbors that may not easily be got at. And skilled masters and seamen to elude the enemy."

"But a navy must be organized, sir. It must be an unit," objected Mr. Carroll. "And you would not for many years have force enough, or discipline enough, to meet England's navy."

"I would never meet it, sir," he replied instantly. "That would be the height of folly. I would divide our forces into small, swift-sailing squadrons of sufficient strength to repel his cruisers. And I would carry the war straight into his unprotected ports of trade. I can name a score of such defenceless places, and I know every shoal of their harbors. For example, Whitehaven, might be entered. That is a town of fifty thousand inhabitants. The fleet of merchantmen might with the greatest ease be destroyed, a contribution levied, and Ireland's coal cut off for a winter. The whole of the shipping might be swept out of the Clyde. Newcastle is another likely place, and in almost any of the Irish ports valuable vessels may be found. The Baltic and West Indian fleets are to be intercepted. I have reflected upon these matters for years, gentlemen. And I'll warrant you cannot conceive the havoc and consternation their fulfilment would spread in England."

If the divine power of genius ever made itself felt, 'twas on that May evening, in the Annapolis Coffee House. I myself witnessed two able and cautious statesmen of a cautious province thrilled to the pitch of enthusiasm by this strange young man of eight and twenty.

BLUE SKY AND BLUER SEA.

From Bates's "Under the Beech-tree." (Houghton, Mifflin.)

Blue sky and bluer sea,
And harebell at my feet;
Blue yet more utterly,
Why is your hue so sweet?

What fibre of my soul
Thrills at your loveliness?
Why should a tint control
My heart like a caress?

Blue sky and bluer sea,
And harebell at my feet;
How can mere color be Beyond all telling sweet?

A Negative and a Positive Ritualist.

From Mason's "A Wind Flower." (American Baptist Pub. Soc.)

EUNICE was reading aloud to her father with all gravity, but with languid interest, certain passages from "Barclay's Apology." Lifting her eyes, she saw Father Norman approaching. She had not spoken with him since Sunday.

He addressed Moses Herendean in kindly greeting, and the old man held his hand a moment in his cold, delicate fingers, looking up with kindly, musing scrutiny.

"Let me see," he said, "thy name is —?"

"Francis Norman," was the quick response, and Eunice noted the bright, unconstrained smile which lighted up the clergyman's face. "I am almost a neighbor of yours, Mr. Herendean; that is, I am from Coalport, and I have known of your family for years."

"Not Mr. Herendean, if thee pleases," said the old man gently; "simply Moses Herendean is what I wished to be called."

"Pardon me, I should have remembered," replied the other.

"Eunice has been telling me something of thee, Francis Norman," continued the Friend, bowing a quiet acknowledgment. "I understand that thee preaches in the stone meeting-house on Minster Street; was thy father Edward Norman, the lawyer?"

It was to be noticed that while his daughters used the "plain language" only in their own family, Moses Herendean used it to all alike.

After a reply in the affirmative, Francis Norman proposed that they should take a short walk together and discuss the points of family history which were of common interest. Moses Herendean rose with a word of apology for his halting gait, evidently gratified with the attentive courtesy of his new acquaintance.

Eunice, with a long breath of relief, dropped the dull, black-bound book, and watched the two as they moved slowly across the lawn.

A singular resemblance between them, real or fanciful, struck her eye, and brought a slight smile to her lips. Both were tall, slenderly built men of a certain elegance and grace of mold; both wore a noticeable garb, the coat of peculiar cut, the broad brimmed hat, and the faces bore a subtle likeness in the peculiar stamp which a life of contemplation and self-denial never fails to give; in both men alike was the quality of distinction, that of the outer man and that of the inner spirit.

Eunice was not the only one to observe this resemblance.

"What a sight!" exclaimed Miss Arnold. "The conjunction of an orthodox Friend and a High Church priest! And the intensely funny thing about it is that, in spite of the difference of age and all, they are so much alike! Don't you see, Mrs. Mather?"

"Perhaps so," replied that lady, reluctantly, "although the resemblance seems to me entirely superficial."

"I am not sure but the two views require the same habit of mind. Those who leave Friends almost always run straight to ritualism. Both are ritualists, when you come to think of it," proceeded Miss Arnold, nothing daunted by Mrs. Mather's slightly defensive air, "only with one it is a negative, with the other a positive formalism."

"I suppose you would naturally prefer the negative variety," remarked Mrs. Mather, dryly.

"Yes, of the two," was the frank response.

"Still, it is always the positive side which prevails in the world."

A Nineteenth Century Jonah.

From Bullen's "Idylls of the Sea." (Appleton.)

"ALTHOUGH counted a good swimmer even among such amphibia as our crew, I lay there supine, stretched at length upon the sea—a still, white figure grasping numbly at the fragment of bottom-board. Suddenly I became aware of a whirling in the water again, but I was in a sort of stupor of the physical faculties, though mentally alert enough.

"Then up reared above my head an object I recognized with a long wail of terror; the tremendous lower jaw of the sperm whale, bristling with its double row of gleaming teeth. Before I could gasp a prayer, or even think what was happening, I was gliding down the vast gray cavern of his throat, with but one thought left—'the descent into Hell is easy.' Down, down I went into utter darkness, among a squirming, fetid heap of snaky coils, that enveloped me, and seemed to gnaw and tear at my shuddering body, as if devouring me at second hand. Then came an explosion—a dull, rending report—that sent an earthquake shock through me and my unutterable surroundings. Immediately following this there was a convulsive upheaval, in which all the contents of that awful place took a rising motion growing faster and faster, until, with a roaring rush, came the dear daylight again.

"What ensued then for some time I do not know. A sensation of heavenly peace and calm possessed me, when, as if released from some unimaginable nightmare, I found myself floating placidly as a Medusa upon a calm sea. There I felt content to lie, without effort, conscious only of life—life so sweet that I wondered dreamily whether I was still in the body, or had passed into that blissful state imagined by speculative psychologists as awaiting man after death. Gradually my mind became clearer, my limbs felt willing to obey the impulse of my brain. I began to swim, feebly at first, almost automatically, but with increasing vigor as the significance of my position became clearer to me.

"I had swum but a short distance when the blessed sound of my shipmates' voices greeted my ears, but from my lowly position I was unable to see them, until one of them gripped me by the arms, dragging me into the boat among them.

"Then I learned without surprise that I was the only survivor of my boat's crew. Every one of my fellows had disappeared before the horror-stricken gaze of the men in the other boats, who, being but a short distance astern of us, had witnessed the whole tragedy. It appeared that we had attacked a cachalot in the act of devouring one of the gigantic cuttle-fish, or 'squid,' upon which these cetaceans feed, and of which it is most probable no mortal eye has yet beheld a full-sized specimen. For they inhabit the middle depths of oceans, never coming to the surface voluntarily."

Lowell's Summers at Whitby.

From Hale's "James Russell Lowell and His Friends."
(Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

FOR his summer holiday, however, Lowell could run across the ocean and visit his English friends in the country, or go back to his pleasant Whitby surroundings. Whitby had for him a peculiar charm, and one really wishes that he had been in the mood at some time to make a monograph on Whitby, so interesting are some of the references which he makes to it in his letters:

"I am really at Whitby, whither I have been every summer but 1885 for the last six years. This will tell you how much I like it. A very primitive place it is, and the manners and ways of its people much like those of New England. The people with whom I lodge, but for accent, might be of Ashfield. It is a wonderfully picturesque place, with the bleaching bones of its Abbey standing aloof on the bluff and dominating the county for leagues. Once, they say, the monks were lords as far as they could see. The skeleton of the Abbey still lords it over the landscape, which was certainly one of the richest possessions they had, for there never was finer. Sea and moor, hill and dale; sea dotted with purple sails and white (fancy mixes a little in the purple, perhaps;) moors flushed with heather in blossom, and fields yellow with corn, and the dark heaps of trees in every valley blabbing the secret of the stream that fain would hide to escape being the drudge of man."

We shall find this "hiding of the stream" again. "I know not why wind has replaced water for grinding; and the huge water-wheels green with moss and motionless give one a sense of repose after toil that to a lazy man like me is full of comfort." "I wish you could see the 'yards,' steep flights of stone steps hurrying down from the west cliff and the east, between which the river, whose name I can never remember, crawls into the sea." The river appears to have been the Esk River, which Lochinvar swam where there was no ford.

A year afterward Lowell writes from Whitby: "I am rather lame to-day, because I walked too much and over very rough paths yesterday. But how could I help it? For I will not give in to old age. The clouds were hanging ominously in the northwest, and soon it began to rain in a haphazard kind of way, as a musician who lodges over one lets his fingers idle among the keys before he settles down to the serious business of torture. So it went on drowsily, but with telling effects of damp, till we reached the Falling Foss, which we saw as a sketch in water colors, and which was very pretty.

"Thunderstorms loitered about over the valley like 'Arries on a Bank Holiday, at a loss what to do with their leisure, but ducking us now and then by way of showing their good humor. However, there were parentheses of sunshine, and on the whole it was very beautiful."

'Tilda in the Art Galleries.

From Whiteing's "No. 5 John Street." (Century Co.)

WE have visited the National Gallery—for the first time in 'Tilda's life. She proposed that we should take nuts with us, but I discouraged it; though I afterward caught her nibbling crumbs of cake from her pocket, as though to fill a void of interest in the school of Urbino. She was greatly impressed by the beauty of the staircase, and by the decoration of the rooms, and her first explanation was: "Oh, mother! don't the paint make you feel good!" I took this to be her untutored tribute to the way in which the rich glowing colors, in their entirety, were harmonized by the suffusion of soft light from the roof. Nor was she insensible to the beauties of the collection in detail. Her test in art of all kinds, I find, is literal truth—verisimilitude of imitation. She lingered long before a fruit-and-flower piece, and observed with satisfaction that there were no grapes of that quality in the street shade, and that to get them you must go to the West End shops. She judged the most spiritual compositions from this point of view, and by the simple rule of fixing her attention on the one accessory she did understand, and asking herself, or me, if it looked like nature. Where the picture failed in this, martyrs aspired to heaven and angels sang them into glory in vain. For this reason she was about to reject the entire school of Florence as unworthy of attention until she caught sight of a shepherd, in Botticelli's "Nativity," whose nose is twisted on one side in the ardor of an angel's congratulatory embrace. "It's the gristly part as gives," she remarked, simply; "I've seen 'em go jest like that." She praised this part of the composition, but she objected to the parting of the ass's mane as "too O. K. for a moke." Having caught this critical chill, I am afraid she missed the effect of the rapture of joy which pervades the entire work. The school of Venice was scarcely more fortunate in her esteem, owing to an oversight of the painter of the "Family of Darius," which led her to condemn one of his accessory figures as "not much of a monkey." In contemplating the artless simplicity of pose, or the oddity of costume in some of the earlier works, she with difficulty resisted a temptation to open mockery. She pronounced the "Ulysses" of Pinturicchio a "cure;" and at sight of the "Jan Arnolfini" and his lady, she frankly gave way, taunted the male figure on the shape of his hat, and indulged in a fit of laughter which drew upon us a severe glance of the attendant. A neighboring "Venus and Adonis" seemed to excite her indignation, and she turned from it muttering that the painter "ought to have had a month." My look of disappointment seemed to strike her with remorse for a certain want of gratitude on her part. She sought to right herself, therefore, by remarks of an appreciative nature, by which I was infinitely touched. If they were not very much to the purpose, they were certainly well meant. Thus, in Bellini's "St. Jerome in His Study," she commended the extremely lifelike drawing of the shoes; and her entirely favorable verdict on the immortal "Virgin and Child" of the Florentine master was: "He do seem to enjoy hisself, the kid!"—in unmistakable reference to the energy of the infant in the act of nutrition.

But she atoned for all these mistakes by her behavior before the great "Pieta" of Francia. She paid an unforced tribute of awe to its majesty of sorrow by standing perfectly still before it for five minutes, without either eating a sweetmeat or speaking a word.

Oxford in the Middle of the Sixties.

From "Sights and Scenes in Oxford City and University." (Casell & Co., Limited.)

THE Goths were at the gates, and the colleges generally had already begun hospitably to build lodgings for their entertainment. I fear Merton set the example (at least after a considerable interval previously) of these erections. Christ Church built its huge and, in comparison with Merton, not hideous front towards the river exactly during the years of my time; Balliol, I think, followed next; and then they all went helter-skelter, till it seems the once trim front lawn of Trinity is shut out from the eyes of men, and half the high westward of St. Mary's has been transformed by an irruption of Brasenose. To remember the Angel is now almost as rare as to be on the side of the angels; and something like five undergraduate generations have passed since they widened Magdalen Bridge to give a tramway room. Few who see the present ruin of the Broad Walk can imagine what it was, not three decades ago, though, of course, it was nothing like perfect even then, and in one of the plates that follow I observe tumblers on the table of a hall apparently prepared for dinner! Is it possible that the undergraduates of the present day drink out of tumblers instead of from the college plate? Did the last Commission make them sell it? Have they presented it to the town in that fever of fraternization which, I understand, was the greatest glory of Mr. T. H. Green to have brought about? I cannot answer these questions; but I can quite understand why no "Anatomy of Melancholy" has proceeded from Oxford of late years: if undergraduates have to drink out of tumblers instead of silver, or even (if agricultural depression and the multiplication of men require it) authentic pewter itself.

Let it not, however, be supposed that there is a tone of depression other than agricultural about these remarks. I confess that I am not sorry that I was at Oxford in May, 1865, instead of May, 1895. 1295 (for 1265 would have been too early by a few years) might have suited me better still. But still I am disposed to think that there is nobody at the present day more to be envied than an Oxford undergraduate of twenty in such a month of May as we have partly had. The observation has, I think, been made more than once before that though it would be the height of bad taste in an Athenian (the term is not merely Dryden's, it is as old as Lyly) to extol his mother University at the expense of others, it is legitimate to call attention to this fact, that those others very rarely seem to excite in their own nurslings the peculiarly fanatical affection which "Athens" does in all the best of hers. There may be other towns, university or cathedral, which possess individual set pieces of greater landscape beauty—this position if not affirmed need not be denied. But where, from Exeter to Durham, and from Canterbury to Carlisle, from the towers that look down on Severn to those that border on Cam and Ouse, will you find anything like the variety of the charms of Oxford to the eye.

Doing It For the Baby.

From "The Greater Inclination." (Scribner.)

SHE was very pretty when I first knew her, with the sweet straight nose and short upper lip of the cameo-brooch divinity, humanized by a dimple that flowered in her cheek whenever anything was said possessing the outward attributes of humor without its intrinsic quality. For the dear lady was providentially deficient in humor: the least hint of the real thing clouded her lovely eye like the hovering shadow of an algebraic problem.

I don't think nature had meant her to be "intellectual;" but what can a poor thing do whose husband has died of drink when her baby is hardly six months old, and who finds her coral necklace and her grandfather's edition of the British Dramatists inadequate to the demands of the creditors?

Her mother the celebrated Irene Astarte Pratt had written a poem in blank verse on "The Fall of Man;" one of her aunts was dean of a girls' college; another had translated Euripides—with such a family, the poor child's fate was sealed in advance. The only way of paying her husband's debts and keeping the baby clothed was to be intellectual; and, after some hesitation as to the form her mental activity was to take, it was unanimously decided that she was to give lectures.

They began by being drawing-room lectures. The first time I saw her she was standing by the piano, against a flippant background of Dresden china and photographs, telling a roomful of women preoccupied with their spring bon-nets all she thought she knew about Greek art. The ladies assembled to hear her had given me to understand that she was "doing it for the baby," and this fact, together with the shortness of her upper lip and the bewildering co-operation of her dimple, disposed me to listen leniently to her dissertation. Happily, at that time Greek art was still, if I may use the phrase, easily handled: it was as simple as walking down a museum gallery lined with pleasant familiar Venuses and Apollos. All the later complications—the archaic and archaisitic conundrums; the influences of Assyria and Asia Minor; the conflicting attributions and the wrangles of the erudite—still slumbered in the bosom of the future "scientific critic." Greek art in those days began with Phidias and ended with the Apollo Belvedere; and a child could travel from one to the other without danger of losing his way.

Mrs. Amyot had two fatal gifts: a capacious but inaccurate memory, and an extraordinary fluency of speech. There was nothing she did not remember—wrongly; but her halting facts were swathed in so many layers of rhetoric that their infirmities were imperceptible to her friendly critics. Besides, she had been taught Greek by the aunt who had translated Euripides; and the mere sound of the aic and oic that she now and then not unskillfully let slip (correcting herself, of course, with a start, and indulgently mistranslating the phrase,) struck admiring awe to the hearts of ladies whose only "accomplishment" was French—if you didn't speak too quickly.

A SKI PARTY IN SUMMER.

How We Kept the Queen's Jubilee.

From Jackson's "A Thousand Days in the Arctic," (Harper & Brothers.)

May 24, 1897, Monday.—We arrived back at the hut at 12.30 A. M., having done ninety-two miles in three marches. It was snowing heavily, with thick mist, as we ascended the east glacier from Gunter Bay. We had some food directly we got back, as we felt simply ravenous after our scanty feeding and long marches, and then turned in and slept the clock round like rocks. We never enjoyed sleep more! Armitage and I got our gear, which was soaked with salt water, into the hut, and hung it up to dry. I then set to work to develop negatives taken on our journey to Cape Cecil Harmsworth, which I am agreeably surprised to find undamaged, although all the unused plates and films are spoiled.

As we were on the point of having dinner about 9 P. M. a bear appeared at the flag-staff, no doubt attracted by the waving jack hoisted in honor of the Queen's birthday and the sixtieth year of her reign. We had spent nearly three years up here, only once having had communication with the outer world in all that time, and were not very certain of the dates. Still, we did know it was about sixty years since she ascended the throne. The dogs, however, scared the bear before we got a shot, and although I followed him as far as the big berg to the southwest, he soon increased his distance from me and took to the open water.

We had a bottle of the little that remained of the few bottles of champagne sent us last year for dinner, and rum and milk afterwards followed to drink the Queen's health. Her birthday no doubt has been kept by us farther north than anywhere else in the world.

We feel especially loyal to-day, and we are all gratified that we have been able to give her name—Queen Victoria Sea—to the frozen ocean to the north of these islands.

I proposed the toast, "The Queen, God bless her," which we drank with enthusiasm.

The climate is very Arctic here, but no warmer or more loyal hearts can be found than amid the snows and ice of this silent, frozen land of the north. May her flag extend from pole to pole!

Commerce and the Muse.

From Norris's "Giles Ingilby." (Drexel Biddle.)

ARTHUR REYNELL was not, in truth, a very happy man, although he passed for being one of those to whom Fortune has shown herself exceptionally kind. He was known to have inherited a considerable fortune, he enjoyed a great literary reputation, his acquaintance included all the most distinguished personages of the day, and if he was without domestic joys, the inference was that he preferred to be without them, since he could unquestionably have married well, had he been so minded. He had (when he liked) a singularly pleasant and winning manner; but it was also within his capacity to be so chillingly polite that his popularity was not quite universal. However, there was nothing chilling about his reception of young Ingilby.

"I am very glad you were able to come," he said simply: "it is so much more easy to make oneself understood by word of mouth than by letter."

"Your letter was delightfully, gloriously explicit," Giles declared, laughing.

"Well, you gathered from it, I suppose, that I am anxious to secure you as a regular contributor; but I want to say rather more than that. Can you discuss matters of importance while you are eating?"

"Of course," answered Giles.

"Ah! at your age, no doubt, and with your physique— As for me, I am ancient and dyspeptic; but the fact is that I have an engagement at ten o'clock, so I must break through rules for once."

His rules apparently did not include doing justice to an admirably served little dinner, which he scarcely touched. He talked the whole time, and was so helpful, as well as complimentary, in what he said that his guest was fairly entranced.

"You should try your hand at prose, though," he concluded. "In some respects it is more difficult than poetry; but then it is also a good deal more lucrative, which is a point that most writers have to take into account. Have you attempted anything in that way?"

Giles shook his head. "I don't know whether I could," he answered. "What sort of prose do you mean?"

"Oh, it doesn't really matter much. Fiction, essays, short descriptive articles—fiction, of course, for choice. With your imagination and your knack of hitting upon the right words to use, you ought to take to story-telling as a duck takes to water. And the thing pays, you see: there is a living to be made out of it."

"Do you really think, then," asked the young man breathlessly, "that it would be possible for me to adopt literature as a profession?"

Mr. Reynell laughed. "Now I am in a hole," he remarked; "now I am upon the brink of offering what may prove disastrous advice to a fellow-creature who has done me no injury—bien s'en faut! Nevertheless, since I invited you here with the deliberate intention of doing that very thing, I won't equivocate. Yes; I do think so. Naturally, I can't speak with absolute assurance as yet; but I should very much like you to try. Is there time for trying when the day's grind in the city is over?"

"Oh, heaps of time!"

"Why not try, then? Ultimately you might relinquish that city grind, which you need not tell me is abhorrent to you. I am a prejudiced counsellor; for, personally, I find the whole pleasure of my life in literary art, and nothing else seems to me to be worth while. In reality, many other things may be better worth while—the acquisition of a big income amongst them. All depends upon the point of view of the individual concerned."

Giles neither aspired to a big income nor had the remotest prospect of ever earning one out of tea. He hastened to make this announcement, and followed it up by a rapid, but exhaustive sketch of his hitherto uneventful life. "You see," he observed in conclusion, "that twenty songs or sonnets in the course of the year would bring me in two or three times as much as I am likely to get from my uncle for making a hash of his correspondence. And then if I could make a little by prose-writing, into the bargain!"—

Reynell nodded. "But, for heaven's sake, don't throw the tea overboard until we can see our way!"

Things Are Not What They Seem.

From "The Real Lady Hilda." (Buckles.)

"I MUST say, Gwen," said my stepmother, "that you are a girl that it is a pleasure to dress; you have quite a grand air, such a remarkable carriage."

"Carriage!" I repeated, with a laugh of scorn. "I wish I had a carriage—yes, and a pair—so that I need not intrude upon the Miss Bennys; three in a fly are too many."

"Oh, and do take care of your gown, darling, lift it up well, and hold the train in your lap. This is only a dress rehearsal for Christmas Day, and I should be so vexed if you got your frock tumbled or soiled."

I promised in the most solemn manner to take the greatest care of my toilet, and refused for the tenth time the eagerly pressed loan of her diamond brooch, "just to give the lace a finish."

"My dear Emma, I am going to this party to please you; I am wearing lace and satin fit for a duchess to please you; but I really must decline the diamonds. As it is, people will be quite sufficiently tickled, when they compare my position and surroundings; they will say all sorts of nasty things."

"They will say you are a princess in disguise!"

"Pooh! they will say I am a pauper who has been swindling some London dressmaker! I shall make myself small, and sit in a corner, and try and escape notice," and I sailed into the sitting-room.

Here I found an immediate opportunity of testing the effect of my transformation. Mrs. Gabb, who (as an excuse to obtain a private view) was making up the fire, dropped the poker with a frightful clang, as she ejaculated:

"Good laws—laws me! Well—I never!" which I accepted as a very handsome tribute to my splendid appearance. In another five minutes the glories of my costume were concealed beneath a long fur-trimmed evening cloak (yet another relic of Emma's wealthy days), and I found myself shut into a fly, with my back to the horse, and driving away with the two Miss Bennys and Mrs. Montmorency Green, their cousin. I ventured to thank them, rather timidly.

"It is so very kind of you to take me," I murmured; "and I am quite ashamed of crushing you like this."

"Well, you must only make yourself as small as you can," said the elder, with asperity.

"We would do anything to oblige dear Mrs. Cholmondeley; and she made quite a point of our taking you with us."

"I suppose it will not be a large party?" I hazarded, still more timidly.

"Not a large party! We shall have half the country; every one will be there. The Moate is such a dear old place—splendid pictures, grand reception-rooms—and the Cholmondeleys do everything so well; they gave three weeks' invitation, so it's sure to be extra smart!"

Three weeks' invitation, and I had been asked at the eleventh hour! I now shrank into my corner of the fly and relapsed into silence, feeling as small as Miss Benny could possibly desire.

He Only Laughed.

From Risley's "Men's Tragedies." (Macmillan Co.)

AFTER admiring the view from the top of the hill, we all sat down among the boulders and had lunch. The serving-men spread tablecloths on the flat rocks and balanced dishes in the crannies. We made a delightful cold lunch. But I thought that I caught a glimpse once of Sigurd holding Evangeline's hand under a napkin. That was her name, Evangeline; but everybody called her "Vangy."

We straggled back to the castle in couples. Sigurd and Vangy went side by side. He carried her alpenstock over his shoulder, and there was a gayer, more boyish ring in his laugh than I had ever heard before.

When we arrived at the castle, I went up to his room with him and seriously remonstrated. He laughed! He laughed at me, at whom he had never laughed before!

"My dear young friend," I said, seating myself in front of the fire, "now kindly listen while I give you a little most excellent advice."

He leaned against the mantelpiece, with his hands in his pockets, and I joined my finger tips over my white vest, and began.

"Women," I commenced, "are like sauces; they should only be partaken of in conjunction with a heavier substance. A sauce without the meat would be an abomination! So, when a man allows a slip of a girl to hold his whole heart and attention, it is an unnatural and ridiculous exaggeration! There should be ambition, self-respect, patriotism, learning, anything you will, as the principal course. Woman is an entrée; or, to use another simile, woman bears the same relation to man that the mantel ornaments bear to the clock. The man makes the hours important. The woman waits to be admired. The greatest folly of the ages is the exaggerated view of the importance of woman! Oh, yes, they are delightful creatures—no man could possibly be more chivalrous toward them than I am! But to sacrifice one's whole career to them! Bah! To live for them! Bah! To die for them even! Bah! Bah! Bah!"

"But," remonstrated Sigurd, "I am not wasting my career, and I am not sacrificing my life, and I am not expecting to die!"

"Oh, my dear friend," I responded, "only too well I see what you are going to do! You are going to make love to her! If you would have the sense to assure her before you begin, that there is nothing in it, that she is not to think that anything will come of it! But no! You will do it seriously! That is the trouble! A woman is worth making a comedy of, sometimes; but a tragedy, never!"

It was no use. He only laughed. I got up and went into my room mournfully.

The Twins Decide It.

From Mrs. Burton Harrison's "A Triple Entanglement." (J. B. Lippincott Co.)

STUART's decision, announced to his mother during a visit to New York, caused Mrs. Wallis's imagination to inflame with a simultaneous desire for foreign parts. It was so long since they had been abroad, she had so much enjoyed her last trip with him, she could take Bessie and the children and stop "anywhere" while Stuart followed his own devices; they would shut up Hillhurst, their large, comfortable country house on the Hudson, and indulge themselves in a summer change of scene. To this suggestion "Bessie," the widowed Mrs. Staines, proving highly acquiescent, the plan was quickly matured. They secured deck staterooms for the whole party on one of the favorite ocean liners; trunks covered with old curling labels were brought down from the storeroom, and Stuart was in the act of cabling to engage some good quarters he knew of for their stop in London, when his mother, looking much worsted from conflict, came into the library, where he sat at his father's desk.

"My darling boy, we shall have to give it up."

"Give what up, mother?" asked Stuart, filling in his cable blank leisurely.

"Going to London—the journey—the whole thing. For the last hour Bessie Staines and I have been discussing it with the twins. Tom says he won't leave his pony, and Toto declares she will never be happy away from her dogs and Hillhurst. They have so much sensibility, those two, I am afraid we can't induce them to change their minds. After all, Hillhurst has everything to entertain them, and they keep so well there, and in such splendid spirits, and lead such fine outdoor lives, I hardly wonder at their feeling as they do."

"How old are the twins, mother?" inquired Stuart, mildly.

"Eight in June, the 21st, and larger than most children of their age," answered the lady, promptly. "You know poor Bessie spent that summer after her husband died in lodgings in England; and the little creatures remember just enough of what a contrast it was to Hillhurst and their free life in a big country place. Bessie is doing her best to persuade them to go, but I don't know. They are so very resolute. And whatever Tom says, Toto backs up, and sticks to it through thick and thin. It is really Tom's pony that is our difficulty; we might get over Toto's dogs."

"Perhaps we could prevail upon the captain of the Campania to set aside a cabin for Tom's pony. But it looks to me as if you would have to leave your rebellious angels at home with Bessie, and let them keep the house and servants going at Hillhurst till your return."

"I might do that," replied Mrs. Wallis, in a lukewarm tone.

"And you and I will try to revive some of the days of our journey three years ago."

"Yes, dear, that was a very happy time for me. All went so well, and we had such capital weather on the whole. I have known summers abroad when tourists had their umbrellas up six days out of seven. Fancy lodgings, or a hotel, with Tom and Toto during a week of rain! When I think of such a chance, I almost believe the darlings know better than we what they ought to do."

"HENCEFORWARD SHE WOULD LIVE FOR OTHERS."

Fashionable Solution of Social Problems.

From Merriman's "Prisoners and Captives." (Fenno.)

"I have never," Easton said, as he seated himself, "been at an entertainment of this description before. I am only a beginner. In our country we manage things differently; and I cannot yet understand how so much talking and so little action can benefit any cause."

"But," said Miss Winter "you are not new to England. There is nothing about you to lead one to that conclusion."

"Thank you," he replied, gravely. "My clawhammer coat was made in Piccadilly, so I suppose it is all right."

He looked down at the garment in question, and dusted the sleeve lightly with a perfectly gloved hand.

"Do you like it?" he inquired, simply.

Miss Winter was becoming interested. She therefore quelled a sudden desire to laugh, and answered—

"Yes; it is a very nice coat."

"I am not," he said, after a pause, "new to England, but I have not moved—I think you call it—much in London society. I suppose the men do all the moving in your society?—they seem to. The women sit mostly still and wait till the men come to them. With us it is different."

"The women," replied this womanly lady, "are beginning to move with us, and, from what I have seen of the result, I rather incline towards the old policy of sitting still."

He turned and looked at her with a little nod. There was in his queer, restless eyes a distinct glance of approval.

"Yes," he said, "yes. So I should surmise. Our ladies are very fascinating, and very clever, and all that, but—but the young men do not seem to make such a pretty show of loving them as we read of in olden times. At all events they do not continue to show them that regard which, I remember, my father showed towards my mother."

"I myself am a humble admirer of the womanly school."

"And I," added Easton. "Now," he continued, after a pause, "do tell me. What do all these good people think they are doing here to-night?"

"They think, firstly," replied Miss Winter, "that they are getting their names into the fashionable society papers. Secondly, that their natural or artificial adornment is creating a distinct impression. Thirdly, and lastly, that they are assisting in some definite way towards the solution of a problem of which the rudiments are entirely unknown."

"Then in England, as well as in my own country, charity is a recognized plaything of society," suggested Easton.

"Yes. We take it up in late autumn and winter, when there are no races, nor regattas, nor lawn-tennis parties."

"Ah, then," said the American, "society is very much the same here as elsewhere."

A Morning's Work.

From Frederic's "The Market Place." (Stokes.)

THORPE remained on his feet, looking down at the pair with satisfied cheerfulness. He took a slip of paper from his pocket, to support a statement he was making.

"I'm forever telling you what a strain the City is on a man in my position," he said—"and to-day I had the curiosity to keep an account of what happened. Here it is. I had thirty callers. Of those, how many do you suppose came to see me on my own business? Just eight. That is to say, their errands were about investments of mine, but most of them managed to get in some word about axes of their own to grind. All the rest made no pretence at all of thinking about anybody but themselves. I've classified them, one by one, here."

"First, there were six men who wanted me to take shares of one sort or another, and I had to more or less listen to what they tried to make out their companies were like. They were none of them any good. Eight different fellows came to me with schemes that haven't reached the company stage. One had a scheme for getting possession of a nigger republic in the West Indies by raising a loan, and then repudiating all the previous loans. Another wanted me to buy a paper for him, in which he was to support all my enterprises. Another wanted to start a bank—I apparently to find the money, and he the brains. One chap wanted me to finance a theatrical syndicate—he had a bag full of photographs of an actress all eyes and teeth and hair

WITH HESITATION THE OFFICER RAISED THE BRIM OF THE LARGE HAT.

—and another chap had a scheme all worked out for getting a concession from Spain for one of the Caroline Islands, and putting up a factory there for making porpoise-hide leather.

"Then there were three inventors—let's see, here they are—one with a coiled wire spring for scissors inside a pocket-knife, and one with a bottle, the whole top of which unscrews instead of having a cork or stopper, and one with an electrical fish-line, a fine wire inside the silk, you know, which connects with some battery when a fish bites, and rings a bell, and throws out hooks in various directions, and does all sorts of things.

"Well, then there was a man who wanted me to take the chairmanship of a company, and one wanted me to guarantee an overdraft at his bank, and two who wanted to borrow money on stock, and one parson-fellow who tried to stick me for a subscription to some home or other he said he had for children in the country. He was the worst bounder of the lot.

"Well, there's twenty-seven people—and twenty of them strangers to me, and not worth a penny to me, and all trying to get money out of me. Isn't that a dog's life for one?"

"I don't know," said Miss Madden, contemptively. "A lady may have twice that number of callers in an afternoon—quite as great strangers to all intents and purposes—and not even have the satisfaction of discovering that they had any object whatever in calling. At least your people had some motive: the grey matter in their brain working. And besides, one of them might have had something to say which you would value. I don't think that ever happens among a lady's callers; does it, Edith?"

Edith smiled, pleasantly and yet a little wistfully, but said nothing.

"At any rate," Thorpe went on, with a kind of purpose gathering in his eyes, "none of those fellows cost me anything, except in time. But then I had three callers, almost in a bunch, and one of them took out of me thirty thousand pounds, and another fifteen thousand pounds, and the third—an utter stranger he was—he got an absolute gratuity of ten thousand pounds, besides my consent to a sale which, if I had refused it, would have stood me in perhaps forty or fifty thousand pounds more. You ladies may thank your stars you don't have that kind of callers!"

The sound of these figures brought a constrained look to the faces of the women. Seemingly the subject was not to their liking.

Katydid.

From Badenoch's "True Tales of the Insects."
(Dutton.)

AMID the teeming exuberant insect orchestra of the American fields in autumn may be heard the notes of the Katydid, the most notorious of the singing Locustids—essentially American. There are several species of them—they belong, indeed, to several genera—but the song of all is supposed to suggest, more or less, the words of their popular name. Katy-did, katy-did, or, with variations, "O-she-did, katy-did-she-did," vociferates the garrulous "testy little dogmatist." Green leapers from leaf to leaf and from branch to branch, they might far more appropriately be called tree-vaulters than grasshoppers. Riley thus describes the music of the angular-winged Katydid, Microcentrum retinerve, the commonest species in the Western and Southern States: "The first notes from this katydid are heard about the middle of July, and the species is in full song by the first of August. The wing-covers are partially opened by a sudden jerk, and the notes produced by the gradual closing of the same. The song consists of a series of from twenty-five to thirty raspings, as of a stiff quill drawn across a coarse file. There are about five of these raspings or trills per second, all alike, and with equal intervals, except the last two or three, which, with the closing of the wing-covers, run into each other. The whole strongly recalls the slow turning of a child's wooden rattle, ending by a sudden jerk of the same."

From the setting of the sun till he begins to shed his rays in the east, these noisy choristers, during their most active period, will have it, with never an hour's remission, that "Katydid"—the species being so numerous that the sound as it comes from the woods is one prolonged rattling. Scudder states that these katydids sing by day and night, but their day song differs from that of the night. "On a summer's day it is curious to observe these little creatures suddenly changing from the day to the night song at the mere passing of a cloud, and returning to the old note when the sky is clear. By imitating the two songs in the daytime, the grasshoppers can be made to respond to either at will; at night they have but one note."

THE first of the sports was a series of foot-races between Malay and Kling boys, almost invariably won by the Malays, who are the North American Indians of Malaysia—the old-time kings of the soil. They are never, like the Chinese, mere beasts of burden, or great merchants, nor do they descend to petty trade, like the Indians or Bengalese. If they must work they become horsemen.

Next came a jockey race, in which a dozen long-limbed Malays took each a five-year-old child astride his shoulders, and raced for seventy-five yards. There were sack-races and greased-pole climbing and pig catching.

Now came a singular contest—an eating match. Two dozen little Malay, Kling, Tamil, and Chinese boys were seated at regular intervals about an open circle by one of the governor's aids. Not one could touch the others in any way. Each had a dry, hard ship-biscuit before him. A pistol shot and two dozen pairs of little brown fists went pit-a-pat on the two dozen hard biscuits, and in an instant the crackers were broken to powder.

Then commenced the difficult task of forcing the powdered pulp down the little throats. Both hands were called into full play during the operation, one for crowding in, the other for grinding the residue and patting the stomach and throat. Each little competitor would shyly rub into the warm earth, or hide in the folds of his many-colored sarong, as much as possible, or when a rival was looking the other way would snap a good-sized piece across to him.

The little brown fellow who won the fifty-cent piece by finishing his biscuit first simply put into his mouth a certain quantity of the crushed biscuit, and with little or no mastication pushed the whole mass down his throat by sheer force.

The minute the contest was decided, all the participants, and many other boys, rushed to a great tub of molasses to duck for half-dollars.

Successful or otherwise, after their powers were exhausted they would suddenly pull out their heads, reeking with the molasses, and make for the ocean, unmindful of the crowds of natives in holiday attire who blocked their way.

Then came a jinrikisha race, with Chinese coolies pulling Malay passengers around a half-mile course. Letting go the handles of their wagons as they crossed the line, the coolies threw their unfortunate passengers over backward.

Tugs of war, wrestling matches, and boxing bouts on the turf finished the land sports, and we all adjourned to the yachts to witness those of the sea.

Strasburg in the Franco-Prussian War.From "The Garden of Swords." (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

"It is hard to be a woman when those in whom you trust have ceased to be men. At Wörth I believed that nothing in all the world could defeat the armies of France. I dare not tell you all I saw there. Strasburg cannot be like that. Nothing will ever be like that again."

"It will be as our destiny writes it, my child. And we must have faith, faith always. It is all a woman can offer—her whole heart and soul and sympathy for those who suffer that she may have a home. Let us give unstintingly while me may."

They went together to the windows of the house to watch the marching of a regiment, which went by with banners flying and drums rolling, and all the glorious panoply of war. It was a sunny Sabbath morning of August, and in all the steeples the bells were calling the citizens to Mass. When the troops had passed and the cheering for the "Mother of the City," whose white hairs the soldiers had seen at the window, had died away, Beatrix quitted the house and went alone toward the Minster; for thither the citizens now turned, and there the great service of the day was to be held. She had never seen so many people abroad in the streets of Strasburg before; nor did they wear the air of those who feared for themselves or their houses. Women anticipated coming victories in colors which would not mourn the past irrevocable. Men walked in groups and spoke of the brave General Urich. Bands played everywhere. The cafés were scenes of mirth and excitement. In the churches themselves priests spoke of a nation fighting God's battles, and moved their flocks to a frenzy of applause. Old soldiers told of Jena and of Italy. Little children carried long swords at their belts, and their watchward was "Aux armes."

By these she passed quickly, for the bells told her that the service was about to begin. In the cathedral square she found a great concourse of people moved by some savage impulse she could not at first understand. Ferocious cries were raised; she heard the smashing of glass in the doors of a café, and saw bludgeons and sticks raised threateningly above the heads of the people. A man at her side told her that they had caught a spy and were about to kill him. They had taken him in the Minster itself. He had run to the café for shelter, but they would settle his affair, and he would go back to Germany no more. Had it been possible, she would have drawn back from the crowd; but the human wave engulfed her and carried her forward, almost to the doors of the house. Half fainting in the press, unable to make her voice heard, she became unwillingly the spectator of that tragedy of the Sabbath. She saw the white-faced man in the porch of the house; she heard his frenzied appeals for mercy. Foamed dripped from his lips, his hair was dishevelled, his coat torn, his hands upraised to protect his face; but no one thought of pity or of justice. Men struck at him with their fists; a drunkard threw a glass at him and cut his forehead; the blows of canes fell upon his face as whips that strike a board; blood flowed from his nostrils. He fell fainting, and those about him beat out his brains as he lay senseless upon the floor.

The people swept by with clamorous shouts. The spy was dead. Strasburg had settled with him. For an instant, Beatrix reeled back against the window of the café. Everything in the cathedral square swam before her eyes. She thought that she would fall, but a strong arm was placed suddenly about her waist, and a voice that she knew whispered a word in her ear.

"Silence," was the word; "I have brought the news I promised you."

She looked up at the man's face and read it through his disguise. Brandon North himself was at her side.

A Host on His Own Preserve.

From Hamblen Sears' "Fur and Feather Tales."
(Harper.)

It is probable that there is no greater test of the gentleman in a man than when he acts the host on his own preserve. Any one may be a gentleman when he is in a theatre fire or on a wreck at sea. He may even keep his instincts of chivalry in a football game; but when he can take a friend for a day's shooting over his own uplands and keep his anger, his sarcastic smiles, his involuntary criticism, and his gun from interfering until three o'clock in the afternoon, he has actually proved himself worthy to stand by the side of a Bayard or a Charlemagne.

My host did himself proud. He gave his guest the left side of the day so that he could swing easily as the quail jumped off to the left. The guest missed—Heaven knows how many times he missed that day—and George did not crack a smile. I fired at a bird that was half a mile away two or three times and spoiled his shot, and the dogs only received a reprimand. Finally I fired at a cock-pheasant and missed him because of the unforeseen interference of a large tree, and when he brought him down my host insisted that it was my shot which laid the bird low. Any other mortal, after such occurrences, would either have thrown down his gun and stamped upon it, or would have shot his guest; but George did neither. He only said that sometimes you could shoot and sometimes you could not, and that this was his bad day.

However, we started out a second time, and at perhaps fifty yards from the house, as we were in the act of breaking our guns to put in a couple of cartridges, one of us nearly stepped on something that moved, rose, fell, rose again higher, and then made a prodigious noise among the bushes. This particular person stood a moment in amazement as a huge creature rose and flew directly away from him. He did not even close his gun until the agonized cry of the host of "Shoot! shoot, man! Why don't you shoot?" came indistinctly to his ears. Then he closed his gun as the bird disappeared. The dogs stood stock-still and cocked one eye at him, and George put another cartridge into his gun, remarking in his placid tones that that was pretty sudden—so near the house, you know! It was a pheasant, a beautiful cock, and we watched him sail along in the sunflower-field over a hedge to the northwest, and then started for his second hiding-place.

Only a Philanthropist to Blame.

From Cy Warman's "Snow on the Headlight." (Appleton.)

ONE day a desolate looking striker was warming his feet in a cheap saloon when a well-dressed stranger came and sat near him and asked the cause of his melancholia. "I'm a striker," said the man; "and I have had no breakfast. More than that, my wife is hungry at home and she is sick, too. All day yesterday I begged for work, but there was nothing for me to do. To-day I have begged for money to buy medicine and food for her, but I have received nothing, and now my only hope is that she may be dead when I go home to-night, empty handed and hungry."

The stranger drew his chair yet nearer to that of the miserable man and asked in a low tone why he did not steal.

"I don't know how," said the striker, looking his questioner in the face. "I have never stolen anything and I should be caught at my first attempt. It'll be easier anyway after she's gone, and that won't be long; she don't want to live. I think she has almost ceased to care for me, for of course she blames me for going out with the strikers, but how's a man to know what to do?"

The switchman went over to the bar where a couple of non-union men were shaking dice for the drinks. He recognized one of them as the man who had taken his place in the yards, but he scarcely blamed him now. Perhaps the fellow had been hungry, and the striker knew too well what that meant. Presently, the switchman went back to the stove and began to button his thin coat up about his throat.

"I'm dead broke myself," said the well-dressed stranger, "but I'm going to help you if you'll let me."

As the striker stared at the stranger the man took off a sixty-dollar overcoat and hung it over the switchman's arm. "Take it," he said, "it's bran new; I just got it from the tailor this morning. Go out and sell it and bring the money to me and I'll help you."

When the striker had been gone a quarter of an hour the well-dressed man strolled up to the bar and ordered a cocktail. Fifteen minutes later he took another drink and went out in front of the saloon. At the end of an hour he ordered another dose of nerve food and sat down to think. It began to dawn upon him that he had been "had," as the English say. He had been waiting nearly two hours when the switchman came in. "I had a hard time finding a purchaser," explained the striker, "and finally when I did sell it I could only get twelve dollars, and they made me give my name and tell how I came to have such a coat. I suppose they thought I had stolen it."

"And you told them that a gentleman had given the coat to you to sell because he was sorry for you?"

"Yes, I gave them a description of you and told them the place."

"That was right," said the gentleman, glancing toward the door. "Here are two dollars; come back here to-morrow and I'll have something more for you—good-by." And the philanthropist passed out by a side door which opened on an alley.

The striker gripped the two-dollar bill hard in his hand and started for the front door. All thought of hunger had left him now, and he was thinking only of his starving wife, and wondering what would be best for her to eat. Two or three men in citizens' dress, accompanied by a policeman, were coming in just as he was going out, but he was looking at the money and did not notice them. "There goes the thief," said one of the men, and an officer laid a heavy hand on the striker's shoulder.

"Did you sell an overcoat to this gentleman a little while ago?" asked the policeman.

"Yes," said the striker glancing down at the two dollars he still held in his hand.

"And yer sthold dot coats fun mine vindo," said a stout man, shoving his fist under the switchman's nose.

A Solemn Betrothal.

From "The Secret of Fougereuse." (Martier, Callanan.)

WHILE Robert was speaking, Isabelle turned, little by little, towards him.

"My lord of Villepreux," she said, as Robert knelt before her to hear her decision, "my lord of Villepreux, you and I have nothing to do with light and idle talk. My truthfulness shall be equal to yours. If you would owe your bride neither to some debt of thankfulness, nor to some assurance given in her name; if you wish to leave her to the free choice of her heart"—

There Isabelle's voice failed her. She stopped

A SUMMER DAY ON THE SKAGUAY.

"A gentleman gave me the coat in this saloon," urged the striker. "Why, he was here a moment ago."

"Ah! dot's too tin," laughed the tailor; "tak' 'im away, Meester Bleasman, tak' 'im away," and the miserable man was hurried away to prison.

That night while the switchman sat in a dark cell his young wife lay dying of cold and hunger in a fireless room, and when an enterprising detective came to search the house for stolen goods on the following morning, he found her there stiff and cold.

Of course no one was to blame in particular, unless it was the well-dressed gentleman who had "helped" the striker, for no one, in particular, was responsible for the strike. It may have been the company and it may have been the brotherhood, or both, but you can't put a railroad company or a brotherhood in jail.

in despite of herself, and reddened, and breathed hard. Villepreux's forehead bent lower, like that of a man who resigns himself to the death-sentence.

"Well, my dear one," Guy prompted her, "what must become of Villepreux, if he would owe his bride to the free choice of her heart?"

The sister laid her little trembling hand in her brother's. "Then let him receive this hand from you, Guy! and tell him that I had vowed it should never be given to any other."

"Robert," Fougereuse continued solemnly, "here is my last legacy, my treasure. I pass it to him who is worthiest."

The young man pressed to his lips, again and again, the hand so sweetly accorded him. He could not answer.

"Come, my Father," Guy called to the hermit, "come and consecrate this betrothal by the preliminary rite of the Church. Isabelle must be able to say to the King: 'Sire, I am bound before God.'"

The aged monk came forward, and after a short, simple exordium, he questioned the lovers. The vows were pronounced, two rings were blessed and made to serve, and their lives were joined in a sacred link which no human power could break.

"Noël!" cried Loïc. "Honor to the affianced wife of the Lion! And may that fox of a Moulney die now of rage and spite!"

Fougereuse silenced the enfant terrible with a gesture. Then he embraced Isabelle, holding her long against his breast, and at last he placed his sister's hand again in that of his friend.

"Take her, Robert, my brother; she is yours. The feud between us is indeed destroyed. May the Lord God Himself be our bond of union, and cement forever the alliance between your line and ours! . . . Good-by, Isabelle. I confide you, without one fear, to your Lion-heart. Tell the King that my last thought"—

"Guy, why should you talk thus?" Villepreux remonstrated. "Have you sworn to act like a defenceless sheep, who runs to death? I shall not suffer it. My Thieves are mine yet, and I and they will attempt to save you, be it by attacking the royal troops, contending for your life with the very executioner, or snatching you alive from the burning stake!"

"Isabelle," said her brother, "rather shall you be my ambassadress, since the King appears to have preserved his good will towards you. Here is a ring which he gave me, in a moment of friendly confidence. He engaged never to refuse any request of mine, should this be presented to him in my name. I will intrust it to you. Bring it to His Majesty, and add only this: 'Sire, Fougereuse claims the performance of the royal promise: he demands to be heard before he is condemned.' Go: and God be with you. And you, Father, be pleased to return to the Right Reverend Abbott, and report to him what you have seen; for the hour to act is at hand."

Within a few moments, Robert, the lady Isabelle, and the hermit had quitted the prison. Hours later, Artauld entered.

The Record of the College Men.

From Roosevelt's "The Rough Riders." (Scribner.)

WE drew recruits from Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and many another college; from clubs like the Somerset, of Boston, and Knickerbocker, of New York; and from among the men who belonged neither to club nor to college, but in whose veins the blood stirred with the same impulse which once sent the Vikings over sea.

Harvard being my own college, I had such a swarm of applications from it that I could not take one in ten. What particularly pleased me, not only in the Harvard, but about Yale and Princeton men, and, indeed, in these recruits from the older states generally, was that they did not ask for commissions. With hardly an exception they entered upon their duties as troopers in the spirit which they held to the end, merely endeavoring to show that no work could be too hard, too disagreeable, or too dangerous for them to perform, and neither asking nor receiving any reward in the way of promotion or consideration.

Some of them made appeals to me which I could not possibly resist. Woodbury Kane had been a close friend of mine at Harvard. During the eighteen years that had passed since my graduation I had seen very little of him, though, being always interested in sport, I occasionally met him on the hunting field, had seen him on the deck of the Defender when she vanquished the Valkyrie, and knew the part he had played on the Navajo, and, in her most important race, that otherwise unlucky yacht vanquished her opponent, the Prince of Wales's Britannia. When the war was on, Kane felt it his duty to fight for his country. He did not seek any position of distinction. All he desired was the chance to do whatever work he was put to do well, and to get to the front; and he enlisted as a trooper. When I went down to the camp at San Antonio he was on kitchen duty, and was cooking and washing dishes for one of the New Mexican troops; and he was doing it so well that I had no further doubt as to how he would get on.

My friend of many hunts and ranch partner, Robert Munro Ferguson, of Scotland, who had been on Lord Aberdeen's staff as a lieutenant but a year before, likewise could not keep out of the regiment. He, too, appealed to me in terms which I could not withstand, and came in like Kane to do his full duty as a trooper, and like Kane to win his commission by the way he thus did his duty.

I felt many qualms at first in allowing men of this stamp to come in, for I could not be certain that they had counted the cost, and was afraid they would find it very hard to serve—not for a few days, but for months—in the ranks, while I, their former intimate associate, was a field officer; but they insisted that they knew their minds, and the events showed that they did. We enlisted about fifty of them from Virginia, Maryland, and the Northeastern States at Washington. Before allowing them to be sworn in, I gathered them together and explained that if they went in they must be prepared not merely to fight, but to perform the weary, monotonous labor incident to the ordinary routine of a soldier's life; that they must be ready to face fever exactly as they were to face bullets; that they were to obey unquestioningly, and to do their duty as readily if called upon to garrison a fort as if sent to the front. I warned them that work that was merely irksome and disagreeable must be faced as readily as work that was dangerous, and that no complaint of any kind must be made; and I told them that they were entirely at liberty not to go, but after they had once signed there could then be no backing out.

Not a man of them backed out; not one of them failed to do his whole duty.

The "Yes" Flag.

From "Transatlantica." (Brentano's.)

THERE are various kinds of objectionable people in this world. Their sins range all the way from flattering to horse-stealing. But there is one vice which is more practically disagreeable than all the others put together. I refer to souvenir-collecting.

There is nothing sacred to collectors. They would chip pieces from the ghost in "Hamlet," could he be found, with the same composure with which they secrete their unsuspecting host's salt-spoons and sugar-tongs at a tea-party.

Girls develop this vice as well as men; perhaps more so. As long as they confine themselves to hitting off fragments from ancient tombstones while the guide is not looking, nobody cares. But the moment they encroach on the prosaic, living present, they come into conflict with a number of well-established customs.

The girl I am telling you of was witty, bright, and pretty, and she stole souvenirs. She had never been on an ocean steamer before, and therefore she had decided that she ought to have something to remember her first trip by. But everything was screwed or tied fast, except a few articles that would hardly add to the charm of a young girl's boudoir.

After the girl had unsuccessfully roamed about the ship for four days with the souvenir craze strong upon her, something happened: a wave dashed over the port bow of the ship. It wiped away everything in its path, and left remnants of one of the life-boats clinging to the davits.

Then it climbed into the box holding the signal-flags, and from this point took a hand in the destinies of the girl. In this way: It thoroughly water-logged the signal-flags, and necessitated their drying the next day.

The officer who had charge of this (I have forgotten whether his grade was one or two, but he was good to look upon, and also in love with the girl, having known her before he went to sea) ordered the flags to be strung along to dry on a rope stretched parallel with the deck, and about three feet above it.

In the code each consonant of the alphabet is represented by a flag. There is one which marks the letter "C," and also means "yes." The officer had shown this particular flag to the girl the day before, because it was the initial of her Christian name.

The morning when the flags were hung out to dry was chilly; but the girl, possessing a superabundant amount of vitality, came on deck and saw her chance. The wind must have frozen her intellect, for realizing that she was alone, she came to the conclusion that there were flags enough for the ship, plus one, and that that particular one had been placed there providentially for her to steal; only she did not call it by that ugly term.

The "yes" flag, which, as I said before, was also the initial of her name, was hanging there among the others, but she soon had it hidden under her ulster.

A few hours later a steamer passed and asked a question by flags, and there were replies by flags. Then the other steamer, not satisfied, drew up another color combination, and our captain politely prepared to do the same. The "yes" flag was to occupy a prominent position in this reply, but the "yes" flag could not be found, as it reposed at that moment in the girl's stateroom.

The captain said several miserable things about the officer, who, it seems, had these minor details of the ship's wardrobe in charge. He also expressed a desire that the officer might go to —, but there is no reason for repeating, as the scene was painful enough at the time, and long remembered by those who had the misfortune to be in the neighborhood.

When the captain had made it clear to all about him that they were unfit for everything except eternal damnation, he double-reefed his temper and ordered up another flag combination, which did quite as well as the one he had first intended to fly. Then he took another look at the compass and forgot all about the incident.

Roger Williams in Unsheltered Exile.

From "Mistress Content Cradock." (A. S. Barnes & Co.)

"Do you see yonder woods?" Archer asked, indicating a path towards the south.

"Yes."

"It was there that Roger Williams spent his first night of unsheltered exile."

"And you were with him?"

"Yes; but what was it to me—a lad used to court the elements for naught but pleasure? But to him—his heart bound to his people, his head weary with thought and struggle, his love hurt with wounds met in the house of his friends, his shoulders bowed beneath the burden of reproach!"—the young man's voice trembled, and he paused.

"Tell me further," said Content, gently.

"The heathen of the forest was kinder to him than were they in the bonds of Christian fellowship; for the non-believer made him welcome when those of his own household of faith sent him forth. It was cold—cold with the very coldness of death—and he might have warmed himself at many hearths had he but respected less the sanctity of his own conscience; he was hungry, and he might have been fed at many tables had he but admitted that some may give and others only take. He wandered, lost in the dreary sameness of untrodden forest, because he would not follow the leadership of blind guides!"

Archer had risen, and a stern indignation swept his words in a current so impetuous that Content was thrilled by his emotion; he was no longer the somewhat literal youth she had jested with. His eyes were sad with the same sadness that now and then looked forth from those of his leader and friend. Again she perceived that resemblance between them that was rather spiritual than physical.

"But how should they know?—they did not know—" she stammered. His eyes fell upon her with a certain scorn that seemed, for the moment, to be for her.

"They knew that winter is cold," he said, slowly; "that wild beasts are in the forest; that bread lies not in the path that a wanderer makes through the wilderness; that the endurance of a man unspared and ungrudged in the service of his God, cannot forever withstand cold, hunger and exhaustion. They knew these things, and they sent him forth. And the Lord led him to a pleasant place; but it was from out the shadow of a great weariness."

Content's eyes were full of tears; she shivered in the warm rays of the sun; looking at the patches of snow in the hollows, she felt their cruel, wet chill.

"I knew not," she half whispered; "it was a wrong. And you were with him," she said again; "and you saw him. And you have listened to my levity and my reproaches, and you rebuked me not—till now."

Archer's face softened. "And I rebuke thee not now," he said; "I do but tell thee. Yes, I was with him, and what think you? That he railed at the severity of those at whose hands he had received exile? Nay, Mistress Content, from the lips of yonder man who was driven forth a second time to find a home, there fell not a word of bitterness against those whose will it was. They were in his eyes men who stood ever before the Lord, though they saw not all things clearly, even in the light of His presence."

"Truly he is one among many," murmured Content.

JUNE.

From Whiting's "From Dreamland Sent." (Little, Brown & Co.)

SUMMERS may come, and summers may go,
But never another will be, I know,
So full of greenness and fragrance and bloom,
So laden with sunshine and rare perfume,
So full of its mystic, intangible lore;
Oh, there never was summer like this before!

The summers that wait in the coming years
May be full of sadness and full of tears;
The starry nights that are now so fair
May be darkened then by a weight of care,
And the sunshine and song, the greenness and glow,
May change to sorrow and trial, I know.

Ah, love! the summer a year ago
Was full of blossoming grace, I know;
The sunshine sifted through swaying trees,
The lilies beckoned the wandering breeze;
But a voice that is now my music, I know,
Had not called through the silences one year ago.

So the summers may come, and the summers may go;
Nothing can shadow this golden glow.
Never from out my life shall fade
This love that is perfect and undimmed;
For on through the years we together shall go,
Though there never come summer like this below

A Gruesome Inspiration.

From Stacpoole's "The Rapin." (Henry Holt & Co.)

"LIGHT a candle, Toto, whilst I build up the fire."

"There are no candles," said Toto, hunting about, match in hand.

"True—I forgot," cried the poet, running into the little bedroom adjoining, and returning with a night-light in a soap-dish; "I used them all to-day."

"Why, you don't burn candles in the day-light?"

"Indeed," said Gaillard, "I do. When I am working I always close the shutters and work by candlelight. My ideas are like moths; day-light dispels them, candlelight attracts them. They are like gray moths, the color of decay; could you look in when I am at work you would perhaps see them flitting about my head—reveling around their maker. Bon Dieu! this bellows is broken. Toto, hand me that bundle of wood. I have written by a night-light. 'Satanitie' was written by a night-light, finished in the first rays of the dawn; that book was written at a single sitting in one night of sheer madness."

"I know; you told me so the other day," replied Toto, whilst Gaillard, his hat still on his head, and his frock-coat hanging round him like a skirt, squatted on his hams before the fire, putting pieces of stick upon it with finger and thumb, whilst the flames leapt up and, assisting the feeble flame of the night light, illuminated the room.

The carpet was blue, the tablecloth red, the curtains maroon rep. Sundry German engravings adorned the walls. One represented an angel in a long chemise, saying, evidently, "Coosh!" to a lion in a den, whilst Daniel, with a head four sizes too large, stood by with an air of attention. Another, Tobias being haled along by an angry-looking seraph to the music of cherubs playing upon wooden harps and seated upon wooden clouds. Another, Ananias dying apparently of strychnine.

In a bookshelf close to the mantel stood a volume of Schopenhauer, Baudelaire's "Fleurs de Mal," and ten volumes by Gaillard—that is to say, two volumes of each of his works; twin-lets delicately bound, some gray as grisettes, but "Satanitie," ash-colored, with a black devil dancing on its back.

"Why," said Toto, glancing at Daniel, "do you keep those odious prints in your room?"

"I don't keep them," said Gaillard, rising with a distracted air, and wiping his fingers on his coat. "My poverty keeps them; they are part of the furniture. Look at the carpet, look at the curtains—what a background! I am like a butterfly pinned to an outrageous tapestry, an indecent arras; they are my cross. I took them up with the rooms. Why do I remain in the rooms? They are haunted, Toto, by a man called Mirmillard. He was an opium-eater, and lived by writing for the Quartier Latin. You know the Quartier Latin? It is a farouche little journal of sixteen pages or so, and appears monthly—or is it quarterly? He blew his brains out just where you are sitting now; the hole was extant in the wall a month ago, but I had it stopped up with plaster. Have I seen his ghost? Many times; it is one of my inspirations, and that is why I endure those terrible curtains, that terrible carpet, and—ah, mon Dieu!—those terrible pictures. Toto, lend me your cigarette case; I will take three, and make you some coffee; I have all the implementa in this cupboard. Fanfouillard is not coming, it seems. No matter; I will seek him to-morrow myself. To-night, perhaps, if we are lucky, we may see Mirmillard. He appeared to me only three nights ago, and the gash in his throat gaped."

"I thought you said he blew his brains out?"

"He completed the work with a razor," said Gaillard, putting the little kettle on to boil. "But enough of Mirmillard. These cigarettes are very good. Let us talk of flowers."

Lawless Readings and Fortune Telling.

From "A Tent of Grace." (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

ALL day Saturday she could read. The contents of the Herr Pastor's bookshelves were at her disposal. There she rioted to her heart's content. Heaven only knows what that young brain absorbed and brooded over the rest of the week. Kant, Schlegel, Schiller, Heine, Goethe, Bulwer, all were mixed up in a heterogeneous jumble. If the Herr Pastor had known, his fine silky gray hair would have stood on end. He thought she confined herself to the light works of fiction which had been Fritz's own particular property when he was her age, the beautiful Rhine legends, works of chivalry, a careful selection of Sir Walter Scott, books of travel, German history, simple biographies of celebrated men and women. She saved up her kreutzers and commissioned Müller, the carrier, with many vows of secrecy, to buy her a pocket edition of Schiller's poems. She knew them by heart, but she went to bed and rose again with this precious little volume hidden in her breast. The same carrier brought a liberal supply of books and magazines once a fortnight to the Herr and Frau Pastorin from Cologne. That was always a feast day to Jette. Such books as were thought suitable for her, she was allowed to read. Secretly she devoured them all. Once Babbett found "Ernest Maltravers" under her pillow, and suspecting something wrong, threatened to tell the Frau Pastorin. Babbett, good soul, never read anything herself, except the cards, which she punctually consulted every Friday before going to bed. In a moment of good nature, she had confided this secret to Jette, who was a great deal awestruck by this necromancing. Each Friday night of the new moon she reverentially tiptoed into Babbett's room, where, by the dim light of a tallow dip, they crouched like a pair of conspirators, breathlessly alert for the slightest noise, while they revelled in the dim mysteries of the future. Jette sat shivering at the foot of the bed, wrapped in an old quilt, while Babbett perched on a stool, the cards spread out on a little table before her. Only Minka, who had attached herself to Jette and slept on the rush-bottomed chair near her bed, was the sole witness of these secret conclaves; and Minka, of course, could not tell, and would not if she could. Babbett was perfectly well aware that the Herr and Frau Pastorin would have strongly disapproved of these proceedings. So when she threatened Jette with exposure, that young damsel spiritedly promised to retaliate; whereat complete rout and vanquish of the old peasant woman; and Jette was left in undisturbed possession of her lawless readings.

IN FRANCONIA NOTCH.

From Whiting's "From Dreamland Sent." (Little, Brown & Co.)

CLOUD-CROWNED mountains and mists of light
Shining fair through the summer night;
Starry sheen just trembling through
Exhalations of evening dew;
The lingering gleam of the golden mist
Threaded with amber and amethyst;
The lessening light of the summer tide
Where mountains and valley are glorified;
Clouds of sapphire and clouds of pearl,
Ruby-tinted, their wings unfurl.
Beautiful temples that seem to wait;
Portals of gold at the Heavenly Gate;
Topaz and chrysal at the walls,
And over them all the glory falls.

Bicycles vs. Horses.

From Miss Pool's "Sand 'n' Bushes." (Stone.)

Yes, we had a pleasant gallop down that lonely road, and the occupants of the two or three carriages we met did not look upon us as if they saw deformed creatures disporting themselves in a strange way.

We saw no bicycles until we turned on to a fine, wide highway, a strip of State road that had been macadamized, and that consequently was dear to the heart of the wheelman. Here we began to feel old-fashioned, for here the wheels were coming and going, and young men in sweaters and long wool stockings, lying down with the stomach well over the steering bar, rolled up their eyes pityingly at us who were sitting upright, and who were not pedaling for dear life.

It was only a transient strained glance that they could give us from crimson, sweat-grimed faces. They looked as if they were undergoing some kind of torture, but I knew that really they were happy, and were pitying us. So we exchanged pity.

Under a pine tree there was a pump and a trough of water. Also under this tree there leanded two bicycles and near them sat two girls. They wore dust-gray short skirts and knickers, their hats were on the ground beside them. Their faces were red; but a red face, even in a girl, is not an infallible sign of unhappiness.

Our horses walked up to the trough and put their noses in, drinking a little, and then splashing their lips about in a sort of luxury. The sun was hot by this time. The girls were eating doughnuts and oranges. We two looked at those two, and we all smiled. Then one of them approached with a folding cup in her hand. She paused at Amabel's side and asked:

"Won't you have a drink yourself? You look so red and tired."

"Thank you," said Amabel, "I am thirsty. And," she added, smiling, "we were just pitying you and your friend for looking so red and tired."

She took the cup and drank.

"It must be awful to be bounced up and down like that," said the girl, as she brought me a cup of water.

"Oh, but," said Amabel, as I drank, "we can keep our legs still. And we don't intend to bounce—much."

"You can't help it," remarked the girl who had not spoken, and who now rose and came forward. She had a half-eaten doughnut in one brown hand. The other hand she put on The Thane's mane, combing it with her fingers.

"You've got to bounce more or less. Just awfully unhealthy. I would not ride horseback for a thousand dollars. I should have a weak spine again. I'm wheeling partly for my spine now. Come into the country for my spine. Learned to row for my spine; but I don't row now, I'm biking it—can't do everything; got to have some time to sleep. Why, for more than a year I've just lived for my spine. What do you live for?" glancing up in an apparently incidental way at me as she put the question.

"I? Oh, just now I'm living for a kitten. We must live for something, you know."

The Anglo-Saxon 'Lience.

From "Mr. Dooley in Peace and War." (Small, Maynard & Co.)

"You an' me, Hinmissy, has got to bring on this here Anglo-Saxon 'lience. An Anglo-Saxon, Hinmissy, is a German that's forgot who was his parents. They're a lot iv thim in this country. There must be as many as two in Boston; they'se wan up in Maine, an' another lives at Bogg's Ferry in New York State, an' dh rives a milk wagon. Mack is an Anglo-Saxon. His folks come fr'm th' County Armagh, an' their naytional Anglo-Saxon hymn is 'O'Donnell Aboo' Teddy Rosenfelt is another Anglo-Saxon. An' I'm an Anglo-Saxon. I'm wan iv th' hottest Anglo-Saxons that iver come out iv Anglo-Saxony. Th' name iv Dooley has been th' proudest Anglo-Saxon name in th' County Roscommon f'r many years.

"Schwartzmeister is an Anglo-Saxon, but he doesn't know it, an' won't till some wan tells him. The Great Ball Game.

From "The Launching of a Man." (Rand, McNally & Co.

THEN came another struggle, and the City men did well, for, at the end of the ninth inning the score stood: University 20, City 20, and there must be another inning. To quote again from the University publication: "Now the work is sharp and short—the friends of the contesting nines at one moment dancing, yelling, throwing their hats for joy, and at the next, with lugubrious faces, sitting in the depths of despair. . . . One tally beats the University, high into the air goes the ball, holding its course close to the foul line toward the left. What a cheer greets the successful batter as he strains every muscle for the home! But other eyes see the ball not at all, they are gazing at the white figure running with inconceivable rapidity across the field. At length the lines of vision of the City men and of the University men meet as the high fly drops into Mayo's hands. Full fifty yards he runs and then takes the ball almost at his feet. What a yell of triumph from the University men! Again it is a tie. Then came the struggle Titanic." And the University journal, even in its exuberance of spirits, did not much exaggerate. The inning to follow must be a test.

Then happened, for a longer time than is required for the ball games of to-day, what was excellent to see. The University nine was of the college athletic sort, which simply means clean, well-built young gentlemen who have practised vigorously a certain sport, and who, in a straight-away manner, came into a strange land, free as gladiators, to do their best.

It had been a tie in the ninth inning, a tie in the tenth inning, and in the eleventh all depended at the final stage, after none had been made by the City, upon what the captain of the University nine, who chanced to be then at the bat, did in the great emergency. It was worth while looking at him then. He was nervous, and his hands shook until they picked up the ashen thing, the bat, fit thing for a strong man's hands to clasp. Then he seemed to forget his nervousness. He became another man. He stood poised, keen-eyed, virile, tense, an expectancy of muscle with mind in it, as the ball, a flashing mist, came. He struck once and missed. He seemed dazed a little, but set his teeth. The shadow flitted again, and again he missed. Then his face whitened a little, and the muscles and veins stood out well where the bat was clapsed. The pitcher, steady of nerve and fine, sent another twisting, invisible sphere toward the man at the bat, and the man, this thing of muscle and thought, seemed to spring all apart as he struck with the home stroke.

There was a crack as when lightning has struck something. There was an upward-looking of all eyes. Upon a great green enclosed sward, men, outfielders, were running like "whiteheads"—whatever a "whitehead" may be. Between the bases other men were running. The audience of thousands was composed no longer of anything in particular. It was a bawl! And, when the roar slackened for a moment, high above everything could be heard the ear-piercing squall of Billy Barnes, and his cry: "This is a red-letter day to be marked with a white stone!" No effort of the experts could save the City. The University had won.

Health Food For Our Picnic.

From Miss Wilkins' "The Jamesons." (Doubleday & McClure Co.)

MRS. JAMESON did not attempt to gather up the jumbles; she just went on after that remark of hers, opening the rest of the things; there were only one or two more. Then she took the cracker-box which Harry had brought; he had stolen away to put up his horse, and it looked to me very much as if Harriet had stolen away with him, for I could not see her anywhere.

Mrs. Jameson lifted this cracker-box on to the table and opened it. It was quite full of thick, hard-looking biscuits, or crackers. She laid them in a pile beside the other things; then she took up the basket and opened that. There was another kind of a cracker in that, and two large papers of something. When everything was taken out she pointed at the piles of eatables on the table, and addressed us: "Ladies, attention!" rapping slightly with a spoon at the same time. Her voice was very sweet, with a curious kind of forced sweetness: "Ladies, attention! I wish you to carefully observe the food upon the table before us. I wish you to consider it from the standpoint of wives and mothers of families. There is the food which you have brought, unwholesome, indigestible; there is mine, approved of by the foremost physicians and men of science of the day. For ten years I have had serious trouble with the alimentary canal, and this food has kept me in strength and vigor. Had I attempted to live upon your fresh biscuits, your frosted cakes, your rich pastry, I should be in my grave. One of those biscuits which you see there before you is equal in nourishment to six of your indigestible pies, or every cake upon the table. The great cause of the insanity and dyspepsia so prevalent among the rural classes is rich pie and cake. I feel it my duty to warn you. I hope, ladies, that you will consider carefully what I have said."

With that, Mrs. Jameson withdrew herself a little way and sat down under a tree on a cushion which had been brought in the carryall. We looked at one another, but we did not say anything for a few minutes.

Finally, Mrs. White, who is very good-natured, remarked that she supposed that she meant well, and she had better put her pies back in the basket or they would dry up. We all began putting back the things which Mrs. Jameson had taken out, except the broken jumbles, and were very quiet. However, we could not help feeling astonished and aggrieved at what Mrs. Jameson had said about the insanity and dyspepsia in our village, since we could scarcely remember one case of insanity, and very few of us had to be in the least careful as to what we ate. Mrs. Peter Jones did say in a whisper that if Mrs. Jameson had had dyspepsia ten years on those hard biscuits it was more than any of us had had on our cake and pie. We left the biscuits, and the two paper packages which Mrs. Jameson had brought, in a heap on the table just where she had put them.

After we had replaced the baskets we all scattered about, trying to enjoy ourselves in the sweet pine woods, but it was hard work, we were so much disturbed by what had happened. We wondered uneasily, too, what Flora Clark would say about her jumbles.

The Maid Meets the Water Spirit.

From "The Sunken Bell." (Russell.)

SCENE: A fir-lad glade in the mountains.

RAUTENDELEIN.

Thou buzzing, golden wight—whence com'st thou here?
 Thou sipper of sweets, thou little wax-maker!
 Nay! Tease me not, thou sun-born good-for-naught!
 Dost hear? . . . Begone! . . . 'Tis time I combed my hair
 With Granny's golden comb. Should I delay,
 She'll scold me when she comes. Begone, I say!
 What? . . . Loit'ring still? . . . Away—away with thee!
 Am I a rose-bush? . . . Are my lips a rose?
 Off to the wood with thee, beyond the brook!
 There, there, my pretty bee, bloom cowslips fair,
 And crocuses, and violets—thou canst suck
 Thy fill of them. Dost think I jest? No, No.
 Quick! Get thee home. Thou'rt not in favor here.
 Thou knowest, Granny owes thee many a grudge
 For furnishing the Church with altar-lights.
 Come! Must I speak again? Go not too far!
 Hey! . . . Chimney! Puff some smoke across the glade,
 To drive away this naughty, wilful bee.
 Ho! Gander, hurry, hurry! . . . Scurry, scurry!
 Away! Away! [Bee flies off.] . . . At last! . . .

[RAUTENDELEIN combs her hair quietly for a moment or two. Then, leaning over the well, she calls down.]

Hey! Nickelmänn!

[Pause.]

He does not hear me. Well—I'll sing to myself.

Where do I come from? . . . Whither go?

Tell me—I long to know!

Did I grow as the birds of the woodland gay?

Am I a fay?

Who asks the sweet flower

That blooms in the dell,

And brightens the bower,

Its tale to tell?

Yet, oft, as I sit, by my well, alone,

I sigh for the mother I ne'er have known.

But my weird I must dree—

And I'm fair to see—

A golden-haired maid of the forest free! [Pause: She calls.]

Hey! Nickelmänn! Come up! 'Tis lonely here.

Granny's gone gathering fir-apples. I'm dull—

So dull. . . . Wilt keep me company and tell Me tales? Why then, to-night, perhaps . . . as a reward . . .

I'll creep in some farmer's yard and steal

A big, black, cock for thee! . . . Ah, here he comes!

The silver bubbles to the surface mount!

If he should bob up now, the glass he'd break,

That such bright answer to my nod doth make.

[Admiring her reflection in the well.]

Godden to thee, my sweet maid o' the well!

Thy name? . . . Rautendelein? . . . Indeed! I see—

Thou'rt jealous of my beauty. Look at me.

For I, not thou, Rautendelein should be.

What didst thou answer! Didst thou dare to point

Thy finger at thy soft twin-breasts. Nay, nay.

I'm fairer; fair as Freya. Not for naught

My hair was spun out of the sunbeams red,

To shine, in golden glory, even as the sun

Shines up at us, at noon, from out a lake.

Aha! Thou spread'st thy tresses, like a net,

All fiery-scarlet, set to catch the fishes!

Thou poor, vain, foolish trull. . . . There! Catch this stone.

[Throwing pebble down the well and disturbing

the reflection.]

Thy hour is ended. Now—I'm fair alone! [Calling.]

Ho! Nickelmänn! Come—help me pass the time!

[The Nickelmänn, a water-spirit, half emerges from the well, and flops over the edge. He is streaming with water. Weeds cling to his head. He snorts like a seal, and his eyes blink as if the daylight hurt them.]

He's here! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! How dreadfully plain

He is! . . . Didst thou not hear me call! Dear, dear—

It makes one's flesh creep but to know him near!

THE NICKELMANN [croaking].

Brekekekex!

RAUTENDELEIN [mocking].

Brekekekex! Ay, ay—

It smells of springtide. Well, is that so strange?

Why—every lizard, mole, and worm, and mouse—

The veriest water-rat—had scented that.

The quail, the hare, the trout, the fly, the weeds,

Had told thee Spring was here.

THE NICKELMANN [touchily].

Brekekekex!

Be not too nossey-wise. Dost understand?

Thou ape, thou midge, thou tomtit, irk me not!

I say, beware! . . . So, Quorax! Quack! Quack! Quack!

RAUTENDELEIN.

If Master Uncle's cross to-day,

I'll leave him all alone to play.

And I'll go dance a ring-around.

Partners a-plenty, I'll be bound,

For pretty maidens may be found.

"How Happy Could I Be With Either."

From Locke's "Idols." (Lane.)

THIS after-dinner scene was a familiar one. She had grown to regard it as an essential in her scheme of life, like sleep and food and raiment.

Of the two men, one was her husband, Gerard Merriam; the other, his life-long, intimate friend. They had chummed together at school, at the University; had joined the same Inn of Court, and had been called to the bar together; and in spite of wide divergence of taste and character, had remained in close relationship to the present day.

It was on the homeward voyage, after a Long Vacation trip to India, that they had met Irene, a lonely girl returning from the grave of a father whose death-bed she had gone out too late to witness. Both men fell in love with her. The rivalry becoming mutually obvious, each gave the other a fair field. The wooing continued in London till success fell upon Gerard. On his meeting with Irene after her marriage, the other, Hugh Colman, bowed low over her hand, kissed it and put a loyal friendship at her service. A proud bearing, emphasized by steel-blue eyes and a supercilious up-sweep of a heavy auburn moustache, gave distinction to the action. He had rather a courtly way of doing things. The tears started to her eyes. She had been greatly drawn to him before, and pitied him out of her girlish heart for having lost in his rivalry; but from that moment she loved him with a pure friendship, and made it a dear object of her life to intensify the brotherly affection between the two men. In fact she had raised her conception of this Orestes and Pylades relationship to a kind of cult, of which she herself was the devoted and impassioned priestess. During the six years of her married life Hugh had dined with them at least once a week. Lately he had taken a flat in their immediate neighborhood, and his visits had grown more frequent. Gerard, being a man of few words, had not said much to evince his gratification, but Irene had sounded the note of welcome loud enough for the two.

As she lay back in her chair watching them, a spice of admiration flavored her thoughts. Both were men of fine physique. Gerard was six feet two, of huge frame, with deep, sloping shoulders indicative of great strength. Hugh, of somewhat slighter build, better proportioned, holding his head erect on square shoulders; finer, too, of face than Gerard, who had heavy features, eyes of uncertain blue and a reddish moustache cut short at the ends. The one face gave the impression of a man proudly scornful, quick in quarrel, with a Celtic strain of sensitiveness; the other that of a man slow in method, determined of purpose, shy of demonstration—one suggesting rather than revealing strength—a dangerous face to trust. Of the two, Hugh was pre-eminently the man more likely, on first sight, to win a woman's heart in a joint contest. Even Gerard himself had wondered at his success. When he questioned his wife, she answered, lifting glorious eyes of faith, "Because you are you." And that was an end of the matter. But perhaps it was the suggestion of reserved strength in the man that had influenced her from the first in his favor, and an intuition, such as so many women have trusted like a divine revelation, that in a great crisis of life the one would be living rock and the other shifting sand.

The Art of Transplanting.

From Jekyll's "Wood and Garden." (Longmans, Green & Co.)

THE grand way to learn, in gardening as in all things else, is to wish to learn and to be determined to find out—not to think that any one person can wave a wand and give the power and knowledge. And there will be plenty of mistakes, and there must be, just as children must pass through the usual childish complaints. And some people make the mistake of trying to begin at the end, and of using recklessly what may want the utmost caution; such, for instance, as strong chemical manures.

Some ladies asked me why their plants had died. They had got it from the very best place, and they were sure they had done their very best for it, and—there it was, dead. I asked what it was, and how they had treated it. It was some ordinary border plant, whose identity I now forget; they had made a nice hole with their new trowel, and for its sole benefit they had bought a tin of Concentrated Fertilizer. This they had emptied in the hole, put in the plant, and covered it up and given it lots of water, and—it had died! And yet these were the best and kindest of women, who would never have dreamed of feeding a new born infant on beefsteaks and raw brandy. But they learned their lesson well, and at once saw the sense when I pointed out that a plant with naked roots just taken out of the ground or a pot, removed from one feeding-place and not yet at home in another, or still more, after a journey, with the roots only wrapped in a little damp moss and paper, had its feeding power suspended for a time, and was in the position of a helpless invalid. All that could be done for it then was a little bland nutriment of weak slops and careful nursing; if the planting took place in the summer it would want shading and only very gentle watering, until firm root-hold was secured and root-appetite became active, and that in rich and well-prepared garden ground such as theirs, strong, artificial manure was in any case superfluous.

When the earliest ignorances are overcome, it becomes much easier to help and advise, because there is more common ground to stand on. In my own case, from quite a small child, I had always seen gardening going on, though not of a very interesting kind. Nothing much was thought of but bedding plants, and there was a rather large space on each side of the house for these, one on gravel and one on turf. But I had my own little garden in a nook beyond the shrubbery, with a seat shaded by a Boursault elegans rose, which I thought then, and still think, one of the loveliest of its kind. But my first knowledge of hardy plants came through wild ones. Some one gave me that excellent book, the Rev. C. A. Johns' "Flowers of the Field." For many years I had no one to advise me (I was still quite small) how to use the book, or how to get to know (though it stared me in the face) how the plants were in large related families, and I had not the sense to do it for myself, nor to learn the introductory botanical part, which would have saved me much trouble afterwards; but when I brought home my flowers I would take them one by one and just turn over the pages till I came to the picture that looked something like. But in this way I got a knowledge of individuals, and afterwards the idea of broad classification and relationship of genera to species may have come all the easier. I always think of that book as the most precious gift I ever received.

Be Adventurous and You Will Be Happy.

From Grant Allen's "Miss Cayley's Adventures." (Putnam.)

AT table d'hôte my new maxim was amply justified. A young man of ample girth and most prosperous exterior happened to sit next us. He had a wife with him, so I judged it safe to launch in conversation. We soon found out that he was the millionaire editor of a great London daily with many more strings to his journalistic bow. I mentioned casually that we thought of going for the winter to Egypt. He pricked his ears up, but at the same time he said nothing. After dinner we adjourned to the cosy salon. I talked to him and his wife; and somehow that evening the devil entered into me. I am subject to devils. I hasten to add they are wild ones. I had one of my reckless moods just then, however, and I reeled off rattling stories of our various adventures. Mr. Elworthy believed in youth and audacity. I could see I interested him. The more he was amused the more reckless I became. "That's bright," he said at last, when I told him the tale of our amateur exploits in the Vale of Manitous. "That would make a good article."

"Yes," I answered with bravado, determined to strike while the iron was hot, "what the Daily Telephone lacks is just one enlivening touch of feminine brightness."

He smiled. "What is your forte?" he inquired.

"My forte," I answered, "is to go where I choose, and write what I like about it."

He smiled again. "And a very new departure in journalism, too! A roving commission! Have you ever tried your hand at writing?"

Had I ever tried! It was the ambition of my life to see myself in print; though, hitherto it had been ineffectual.

"I have written a few sketches," I answered, with becoming modesty. As a matter of fact our office bulged with my unpublished manuscripts. "Could you let me see them?" he asked.

I assented with inner joy, but outer reluctance. "If you wish it," I murmured, "but—you must be very lenient!"

Though I had not told Elsie, the truth of the matter was I had just then conceived an idea for a novel—my magnum opus—the setting of which compelled Egyptian color; and I was therefore dying to get to Egypt, if chance so willed it. I accordingly submitted a few of my picked manuscripts to Mr. Elworthy, in fear and trembling. He read them, cruel man, before my very eyes; I sat and waited, twiddling my thumbs; demure, but apprehensive. When he had finished, he laid them down.

"Racy!" he said. "Racy! I should like to print these three"—selecting them out—"at our usual rate of pay per thousand."

"Your are very kind"—but the room reeled with me.

Not at all. Will you undertake to let us have three descriptive articles a week on Cairo, the Nile, Syria and India, running to about two thousand words apiece, at three guineas a thousand?"

The very next day everything was arranged.

Palermo Illuminated for a Socialist !

From Lagerlöf's "The Miracles of Antichrist."
(Little, Brown & Co.)

Bosco walks across the deck, and asks the sailors if they do not see the golden cloud on the horizon.

"That is Palermo," say the seamen. "There is always a bright light floating over it at night."

It cannot be anything that concerns him. He tries to persuade himself that nothing is being done for him. He can hardly expect every one all at once to have become socialists.

But after a while he thinks: "Still there must be something unusual going on. All the sailors are gathering forward at the bow."

"Palermo is burning," say the seamen.

Yes, that is what it must be. It is because he has suffered so terribly that he expects something should be done for him.

Then the sailors see the fires on the mountains.

It cannot be a conflagration. It must be some saint's day. They ask one another what day it is.

He, too, tries to believe that it is some such thing. He asks his mother if it is a feast-day. They have so many of them.

They come nearer and nearer. The thundering sound of the festival in the great city meets them.

"All Palermo is singing and playing to-night," says one.

"A telegram must have come of a victory in Africa," says another.

Noone has a thought that it can be for his sake. He goes and places himself at the stern in order not to see anything. He will not deceive himself with false hopes. Would all Palermo be illuminated for a poor socialist?

Then his mother comes and fetches him. "Do not stand there! Come and see Palermo! It must be a king who is coming there to-day. Come and look at Palermo!"

He considers a moment. No, he does not think that any king is visiting Sicily just now. But he cannot dare to think, when no one else, not even his mother—

All at once every one on the steamer gives a loud cry. It sounds almost like a cry of distress. A big cutter has steered right down on them and now glides along by the steamer's side.

The cutter is all flowers and lights; over the railing hang red and white silken draperies, everybody on board is dressed in red and white. Bosco stands on the steamer and looks to see what that beautiful messenger brings. Then the sail turns, and on its white surface shines to meet him: "Long live Bosco!"

It is his name. Not a saint's, not a king's, not the victorious general's! The homage is for no other on the steamer. His name, his name!

The cutter sends up some rockets; a whole cloud of stars rain down, and then it is gone.

He enters the harbor, and there is jubilation and enthusiasm and cheering and adoration. People say: "We do not know how he will be able to live through it."

But as soon as he realizes the homage, he feels that he does not at all deserve it. He would like to fall on his knees before those hundred and fifty thousand people who pay him homage and pray to them for forgiveness that he is so powerless, that he has done nothing for them.

Each, 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

MADAME IZÀN. By Mrs. CAMPBELL-PRAED, author of "Nulma," "Mrs. Tregaskiss," "Outlaw and Lawmaker," etc.

This picturesque tale of love-making and travel in the Orient will be of special interest at the present time. The novelty of the chief situations imparts zest to a story which abounds in vivid glimpses of Oriental scenes and experiences, particularly in Japan. This fresh and charming book demonstrates the success of the popular author in a new field.

PURSUED BY THE LAW. By J. MACLAREN COBBAN, author of "The King of Andaman," "The Red Sultan," "The Angel of the Convent," etc.

This stirring and entertaining story shows the possibilities of modern life in the way of adventure. "This novel," says the London Spectator, "reminds us not a little of Charles Reade, with a dash of Stevensonian audacity. Mr. Cobban's hearty geniality and the real skill with which he keeps the reader in suspense disarm criticism."

PAUL CARAH, CORNISHMAN. By CHARLES LEE, author of "A Widow Woman," "A Foreigner in Pendennack," etc.

This charming story of a Cornish village, with its fresh and pungent atmosphere and poetic glimpses of Nature, will impress itself upon readers as the work of an author whose insight, force, and literary quality are distinctly exceptional. The story is told with singular vividness and concentrated interest.

PHAROS, THE EGYPTIAN. By GUY BOOTHBY, author of "Doctor Nikola," "The Lust of Hate," "A Bid for Fortune," etc.

BY BERWEN BANKS. By ALLEN RAINE, author of "Mifanwy, a Welsh Singer," "Torn Sails," etc.

These books are for sale by all booksellers; or they will be sent by mail, on receipt of price, by the publishers,

D. APPLETON & COMPANY, 72 Fifth Ave., New York.

SCRIBNER'S NEW BOOKS.

A NOTABLE BOOK.

THE ROUGH RIDERS.

By Governor THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Col. 1st Volunteer Cavalry, U. S. A.

With Forty Full-page Illustrations and Two Portraits
(One in Photogravure) of Governor Roosevelt.

Octavo, 298 pp., $2.00.

CONTENTS.—I. Raising the Regiment. II. To Cuba. III. General Young's Fight at Las Guasimas. IV. The Cavalry at Santiago. V. In the Trenches. VI. The Return Home. Appendices.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT'S account of the Rough Riders is naturally awaited with intense eagerness from one end of the country to the other. His book has already claimed everybody's attention as in all respects a national event. It has the distinction of being an authoritative narrative, personal and intensely vivid, of a unique fighting corps. The illustrations, from photographs by experts, are especially noteworthy.

HOW TO KNOW THE FERNS.

A Guide to the Names, Haunts, and Habits of Our Native Ferns.

By MRS. FRANCES T. PARSONS (formerly Mrs. Dana). With 144 illustrations. Crown 8vo, $1.50 net.

"This book follows the plan of 'How to Know the Wild Flowers' [now in its 43d thousand]. It is fully illustrated, and will be of great service to all who have not had the opportunity of early training in woodlore. 'How to Know the Ferns' not only identifies the ferns, but their family relations and neighbors. It will beyond doubt receive a general welcome."—The Outlook.

ON THE SOUTH AFRICAN FRONTIER.

The Adventures and Observations of an American in Rhodesia. By WILLIAM HARVEY BROWN. With 32 illustrations and 2 maps. 8vo, $3.00.

"Every word in Mr. Brown's 'On the South African Frontier' is the simple, straightforward word of a frontiersman who has a tale to tell, and tells it without too much varnish. As a mere narrative of stirring adventures, the book can be recommended to the general reader; but it is of especial value just now on account of the interesting side-light it throws upon the British method of governing savages."—Literature.

IN THE KLONDYKE.

By FREDERICK PALMER. Illustrated from photographs. 12mo, $1.50.

"The best description of the Klondyke mines and miners yet written. Except in his entertaining picture of a passage over the famous Chilkoot Pass, Mr. Palmer has permitted the country and its inhabitants to tell their own story, as it were. The result is a book of extraordinary interest."—Boston Journal.

A TEXAS RANGER.

By N. A. JENNINGS. 12mo, $1.25.

The true story of surprising adventures on the Mexican border by a young man who enlisted in the early eighties in a company of the famous Texas rangers. The book is as thrilling as a border romance, and in addition is a hitherto unpublished record of a body of troops who were the prototypes of the Rough Riders.

NEW YORK.

SCRIBNER'S NEW FICTION.

Strong Hearts.

By GEORGE W. CABLE.
12mo, $1.25.

"They must stand as among the most charming things he has written. Not even in 'Old Creole Days' is there found more delicate work, and yet underneath it there is felt the grasp of the master."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Greater Inclination.

By EDITH WHARTON.
12mo, $1.50.

"We are brought in the majority of her instances face to face with situations containing material for an Ibsen or a Maeterlinck, but the limitations of the field she has chosen are maintained with discreet and delicate art. . . . Eight admirably written stories."—New York Times.

The Stolen Story.

By JESSE LYNCH WILLIAMS.
12mo, $1.25.

"Mr. Williams has the advantage of knowing thoroughly what he is talking about and of making it interesting. 'The Stolen Story' is one of the best short stories that have been written in a long time."—New York Sun.

Across the Campus.

By CAROLINE FULLER.
12mo, $1.50.

Miss Fuller's book is a story of the college life of a group of girls, and reflects the atmosphere of the place with extraordinary fidelity, and with delightful humor, enthusiasm, and gayety of spirits.

The Amateur Cracksman.

By E. W. HORNING.
12mo, $1.25.

"It is difficult to imagine anything better in their way than the eight stories of crime here delineated. Short and to the point, each is suggested with admirable art, and each is finished to perfection."—London World.

The Confounding of Camelia.

By ANNE D. SEDGWICK.
12mo, $1.25.

"It is indeed good, and more than good; it is fresh, delicately original, and finely observed. Camelia is such a heroine as many novelists can dream of, but few can draw."—London Academy.

Windy Creek.

By HELEN S. THOMPSON.
12mo, $1.25.

A series of sketches which tell, in a straightforward and quite unconventional way, the story of a community of Colorado settlers who are new in literature. These people are characterized by Miss Thompson with an unerring instinct for what is most poignant and humorous in them.

A Notable Success.

Red Rock.

By THOMAS NELSON PAGE.
12mo, $1.50.

Now
45th Thousand.

"Red Rock" is having an unusual success in England, where it is being received with wide praise.

With illustrations by Clinedinst.

"One cannot read this novel without being deeply impressed with its sterling literary beauties and its human interest. It is tender, mellow and sweet, exhalting the flavor of all that is best and most admirable in American life."—London Daily Mail.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, 153-157 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK.

New Fiction.

Vassar Studies.

By JULIA A. SCHWARTZ, A.M. ('96).
With 11 illustrations. 12mo, $1.25.

Miss Schwartz's collection of studies has been planned to reproduce, by means of emphasizing in each paper a characteristic element or quality of student life, a faithful impression of the spirit and the personality of modern Vassar. The author has treated of character rather than incident; yet her stories are not lacking in action nor in the picturesque background of college pastime as well as that of college work.

Lone Pine.

The Story of a Lost Mine. By R. B. TOWN-SHEND. 12mo, $1.25.

"The book gives evidence of a vigorous capacity in narrative and is full of descriptive force. The writer's strength in dealing with scenes of violence and of bloodshed is certainly remarkable. The book is evidently the work of a clever writer."—The Athenæum.

Children of the Mist.

By EDEN PHILLPOTTS, author of "Down Dartmoor Way," etc. 8vo, $1.50.

Mr. R. D. Blackmore, the author of "Lorna Doone," writes of this book: "I was simply astonished at the beauty and power of this novel. A pleasure is in store for many, and literature is enriched with a wholesome and genial and noble tale."

Miss Cayley's Adventures.

By GRANT ALLEN, author of "Flowers and Their Pedigrees," etc. With 80 illustrations by Gordon Browne. 12mo, $1.50.

This is the obverse of the old story of the youth who starts forth with a sound heart and tuppence in his pocket to win his fortune. Mr. Allen's youth is a girl, a graduate of Girton, who is left penniless, and who is compelled to make her own way in life. Her varied experiences are told in Mr. Allen's old-time graceful manner, which won for him an international reputation.

Agatha Webb.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN, author of "The Leavenworth Case," "That Affair Next Door," etc. 16mo.

The Passing of Prince Rozan.

A Romance of the Sea. By JOHN BICKERDYKE. 12mo, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

Latest Additions in the HUDSON LIBRARY:

The Wheel of God.

By GEORGE EGERTON, author of "Keynotes," etc. 12mo, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"The author of 'Keynotes' has produced here what is so far her best work. The story presents a searching piece of analysis at once vigorous and delicate and full of pouting passages which refuse to be forgotten. . . . Certainly one of the most notable novels of the month."—Commercial Advertiser.

John Marmaduke.

A Romance of the English Invasion of Ireland in 1649. By SAMUEL HARDEN CHURCH. 7th edition. Illustrated. 8vo, $1.25; 16mo, paper, 50 cents.

"The author has produced a thoroughly interesting story, abounding in stirring scenes which force themselves on the attention of his readers, and peopled with a sufficiency of clear-drawn, vivid, life-like characters, the loveliest of whom, the heroine, Catharine Dillon, is an unforgettable woman."—Mail and Express.

Hannah Thurston.

A Story of American Life. By BAYARD TAYLOR. 12mo, $1.50; paper, 50 cents.

"A really original story, admirably told, crowded with life-like characters, full of delicate and subtle sympathies, with ideas the most opposite to his own, and lighted up throughout with that playful humor which suggests, always, wisdom rather than pure fun."—Spectator.

Yale Yarns.

By J. S. WOOD. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

College days are regarded by most educated men as the cream of their lives, sweet with excellent flavor. A volume filled with the pure cream of such existence, and many "a college joke to cure the dumps" is given. It is a bright, realistic picture of college life, told in an easy conversational or descriptive style.

Under the African Sun.

A Description of Native Races in Uganda, Sporting Adventures and Other Experiences.

By W. J. ANSORGE, M.A., Medical Officer to Her Majesty's Government in Uganda. With 134 illustrations from photographs by the author, and 2 colored plates. Large 8vo, gilt top, pp. xiv.-335, $5.00.

"... Is not only a mine of information at first hand concerning the native races of Uganda, but a well-written and entertaining narrative of uncommon adventures in what was, until very recently, an exceptionally dangerous locality. . . . There are, too, some interesting chapters on big-game hunting, and narrow escapes from elephants and man-eating lions; while the appendix contains some interesting data on new species of Central African birds and butterflies, accompanied by several colored plates."—Commercial Advertiser.

Myth, Ritual, and Religion.

By ANDREW LANG. New Edition, Revised and Reset for reissue in the Silver Library. 2 vols. Crown 8vo, $2.50.

* * * The original edition of "Myth, Ritual, and Religion," published in 1887, has long been out of print. In revising the book Mr. Lang has brought it into line with the ideas expressed in the second part of his "Making of Religion" (1898), and has excised certain passages which, as the book first appeared, were inconsistent with its main thesis. In some cases the original passages are retained in notes, to show the nature of the development of the author's opinions. A fragment or two of controversy have been deleted, and Chapters XI. and XII., on the religion of the lowest races, have been entirely rewritten on the strength of more recent or earlier information lately acquired.

THE LIFE OF THE EDITOR OF THE "GOLDEN TREASURY."

Francis Turner Palgrave:

His Journals and Memories of His Life. By GWENLLIAN F. PALGRAVE. With portrait and illustration. 8vo, 288 pages, $3.50.

"Miss Gwenllian F. Palgrave has performed her labor of love with excellent judgment and the supreme good taste which one would expect to find in the daughter of so cultured and restrained a critic. There is not a word too much. The bulk of the book is made up of the letters which the professor wrote to his friends, of their letters to him, and extracts from his journal. His biographer supplies the connecting links, and weaves the story into a complete and well-rounded whole. . . . The book is full of good things."—Daily Telegraph, London.

NEW FICTION for SUMMER READING

J. B. Lippincott Company,
PUBLISHERS.

THE TAMING OF THE JUNGLE.

By Dr. C. W. DOYLE. 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.00.

"'The Taming of the Jungle' is thoroughly delightful. It is, in form, one story—the story of the adventures of a man of the Terai, or Himalayan hill folk, named Ram Deen, who drove the mail-cart along one stage of its journey. In reality the book is made up of sixteen tales, connected only by their environment and the personalities of those who figure in them—each of these tales throwing light on the surroundings, life, thought, and religious belief of the jungle people. The tales are cleverly told and, though nearly every one holds a tragic incident, they are tinged with a philosophy that is wholly Indian in its patience and a humor that is equally Indian in its gravity. These tales are well worth the reading, and Mr. Kipling might well have been their author."—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The Daughters of Babylon.

A New Copyright Novel. By Wilson Barrett and Robert Hichens. With frontispiece by Elenore Plaisted Abbott. Uniform with "The Sign of the Cross," by Wilson Barrett. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"The scenes are laid in the old days when Babylon was in the heights of its power, and the pages are crowded with picturesque personages and moving and dramatic situations, giving us a historical novel of intense and fascinating interest."—New Orleans Daily Picayune.

Mr., Miss, and Mrs.

By Charles Bloomingdale, Jr. ("Karl"). Tall 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

"Some of the stories are full of the despair that follows when love is not reciprocated, others are full of the madness of love. The bitter irony of fate seems to enter into nearly all of them. Hardly any of the stories are more than telling outlines, but their brightness, and the effective way in which the colors are washed in, give life and interest to every movement."—Boston Herald.

• Newest and Best Novels. •

MR. DREXEL BIDDLE begs to announce that he has undertaken to arrange with The World's Leading Novelists for the publication of their new and forthcoming works. Under such an arrangement the following Copyrighted Novels are just published, and are the new novels of their respective authors:

600 Copies Sold in Advance of Publication.

By W. E. NORRIS,

GILES INGILBY. Containing many full-page pictures by the celebrated London Artist, F. S. SPENCE. Cloth and gold, 16mo, 400 pages, price $1.50.

The writing of this novel has been the hobby of Mr. Norris for several years. He devoted his leisure time, and hours when he felt freshest, to its authorship. Three certain famous literary men, who style Norris the Thackeray of our day, united recently in prophesying that "Giles Ingilby" would stand pre-eminently as its author's best work and the one upon which his fame would rest.

By OUIDA,

LA STREGA. This new work is a masterpiece, and is likely to be the sensation of the year. Cloth and gold, 350 pages, with a superb frontispiece by J. H. BETTS, price $1.50.

1100 Copies Sold in Advance of Publication.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL,

AN ATLANTIC TRAGEDY. With six full-page reproductions from oil paintings, done specially by C. W. SNYDER. Cloth and gold, 16mo, price $1.25.

"No one tells a tale half as well as Mr. Clark Russell."
—Manchester Guardian.

The present is perhaps the most absorbing novel that Mr. Russell has yet written; it teems with romance and marine adventure.

By GUY DE MAUPASSANT,

STRONG AS DEATH. "A powerful novel that will live." Translated by TEOFILO L. COMBA. Cloth and gold, illustrated, price $1.50.

The translator has been especially successful in transferring the story to the English form, the style of the writing being added to rather than impaired, as is so often the case.

By MRS. MOLESWORTH,

THE LAUREL WALK. With a frontispiece portrait of the author, and eight full-page reproductions from paintings by J. STEEPLE DAVIS. Cloth and gold, 16mo, 464 pages, price $1.50.

"In most cases it will be found that a healthy-minded girl will prefer a story like Mrs. Molesworth's 'Laurel Walk,' to the morbid and hysterical productions like 'The Yellow Aster,' 'Beth,' 'et hoc genus omne.' Hence, we extend a cordial welcome to the book selected for publication by the Philadelphia author and publisher, Mr. DREXEL BIDDLE. He seems to have a keen instinct for what is likely to be popular."—Montreal Star.

Mr. Drexel Biddle publishes a new novel by a standard author every three weeks. Circulars and catalogues mailed free, on application.

Books sent, express prepaid, on approval, to any store of repute in the United States.

SALESMEN WANTED TO CARRY SIDE-LINES.

WORD FOR WORD AND LETTER FOR LETTER. A Biographical Romance, with six full-page illustrations by EDWARD HOLLOWAY. Sixth English edition just published in London. Crown 8vo, cloth and gold, gold top, 208 pages, price 75 cents.

"It involves murder and robbery as well as love and adventure."—London Athenæum.

"Is told with a graphic power sufficient to absorb the fastidious admirers of Dr. Doyle, Stanley Weyman and Gilbert Parker."—Philadelphia North American.

1485 Copies Sold Recently in One Day. 1000 Copies Just Sold to a Single Bookstore.

By E. F. BENSON,

Author of "Dodo" and "The Capsina."

THE MONEY MARKET. Illustrated, cloth and gold, 264 pages, price $1.00.

"Better than 'Dodo.'"—New York World.

"The London rage." About to be dramatized.

"Much the best work its author has written."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Destined to be one of the notable books of the century."

By MRS. DAHLGREN,

Widow of the late Admiral Dahlgren, U. S. N.

THE WOODLEY LANE GHOST, and Other Stories. With a frontispiece portrait of the author. Cloth, ornamental, 12mo, 474 pages, price $1.50.

"The skillful handling of esoteric subjects indicates that the writer was a student of the deep mysteries of Oriental wisdom."—Boston Traveler.

By MRS. ORMEROD,

MADAM PARADOX. The plot has a style that is fascinating. Cloth, with a startling picture of an artist's studio, 12mo, price $1.25.

"Those persons who have seen the manuscript say it will be the sensation of the summer."—New York Times, May 13, 1899.

The Most Important Historical Novel of the New Year.

By SIMPSON NEWLAND,

Ex-Treasurer of South Australia,

PAVING THE WAY. An Historical Novel of Australia. Containing 25 full-page drawings by HERBERT COLE, the famous English artist. Crown 8vo, cloth and gold, printed on English laid paper, 376 pages, price $1.50.

"Mr. Newland has produced a work which does very much for South Australia what 'Lorna Doone' has achieved for Devonshire."—South Australian Advertiser.

An account of the colonization of Australasia, and of a number of remarkable discoveries that the distinguished author has made in the wilds of the Antipodean Continent.

Henry Holt & Co. 29 West 23d Street, NEW YORK, will publish early in June a remarkable book,

ROOK'S THE HOOLIGAN NIGHTS. 12mo.

This book appeals to the reader of fiction and, paradoxical as it may seem, to the music hall frequenter who delights in Chevalier's ballads, and to the student of Lombroso. The central figure is the veritable Alf. Hooligan, known as "The Hooligan," and leader of the notorious Hooligan gang of London. His remarkable, though actual experiences are set down by his quondam acquaintance, Mr. Clarence Rook, an English journalist. Alf. is a Cockney with a humor and vernacular worthy of Chevalier. His life might seem grimy and depressing, but he took it in a mirthful, philosophical way. He was burglar, thief, and counterfeiter. He tells of many thieves' devices. His reminiscences include interesting criminological information, told with the charm of fiction. This book does for the criminal quarters of London what Hugo's Notre Dame de Paris did for those of Paris.

They have recently published:

OXENHAM'S GOD'S PRISONER. 12mo, $1.25.

An extraordinary tale of adventures in England and the Southern Seas.

Book-Buyer: "It is not likely that any story bristles more with ingenious surprises."

New York Commercial Advertiser: "Many thrilling scenes and strong delineations of emotion."

Dial: "One of the most captivating works of fiction that it has been our good fortune to read."

Nation: "The sea voyages are well done, . . . and there is no denying to the story a vast and ingenious mechanism."

STACPOOLE'S THE RAPIN. 12mo, $1.25.

A sparkling tale of an artist, an editor, a poet, and other Parisians of to-day.

New York Tribune: "A captivating book, . . . freakish in tone, spasmodic in movement, but its very freakishness gives it charm."

GODFREY'S POOR HUMAN NATURE. 12mo, $1.50.

Bookman: "It is curiously convincing. . . . Each and every character stands out with vivid distinction, and is not soon to be forgotten. . . . The portrayal of local life [in a German city], particularly that appertaining to operative circles, is full of freshness and interest. . . . It is well written, it is nobly felt, it is altogether an admirable work."

IN CONSTANT DEMAND:

Her Ladyship's Elephant, $1.25.

The Gadfly, $1.25.

The Prisoner of Zenda, $1.50; and its sequel, Rupert of Hentzau, $1.50.

Sketches in Lavender, Blue, and Green, $1.25. The Hon. Peter Stirling, $1.50.

Edited by Professor EDWARD ARBER, F.S.A.,

FELLOW OF KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON, ETC.

THIS is the first adequate attempt that has ever been made towards an historical national Anthology at popular prices.

The Series will contain about 2500 entire Poems and Songs, written by Some Three Hundred Poets.

It will include the largest collection ever printed of the most exquisite Love Lyrics in our language, some serious Poems, many notable Ballads, some Political Verse, a few Prison Songs; also Naval and Military Songs, Drinking Songs, Mad Songs, Satires, &c.; together with Poems in praise of the Country Life and its various pleasures, Hunting, Hawking, Fishing, &c.

Most of this poetry will be quite new to the general Reader.

As each volume represents a definite period of our literary history, some Poets will, of necessity, appear in more than one volume.

Nearly every form of English Versification will be represented in the series.

Each volume will be complete in itself; and will contain a Glossary of such words, &c., in it, as have changed their meanings since its Poems were written.

"British Anthologies" will therefore contain those Poems and Songs with which every one ought to be acquainted; and its volumes will be found, by young and old alike, to be most charming and delightful companions.

GOOD FICTION

THE MARKET PLACE

By HAROLD FREDERIC,

Author of "The Damnation of Theron Ware," "March Hares," etc.

The last work of the greatest of American authors of this decade.

"The Market Place" was finished only a few weeks before Mr. Frederic's fatal illness. It deals with a phase of English life that has no counterpart in this country, and which was so fully exposed in the Hooley scandals. It was written before these exposures, but reads as if it were based on them.

12mo, cloth, with a unique cover after a design by F. Berkeley Smith, $1.50

HILDA

By SARA JEANETTE DUNCAN (Mrs. EVERARD COTES),

Author of "A Daughter of To-Day," "A Social Departure," etc.

A story of Calcutta, in which an actress and a Salvation Army girl are the leading characters. Interesting and brilliant pictures of social life in India by one who has been most successful in this field adorn a romance of a remarkable sort with a striking dénouement.

12mo, cloth, with ornate cover design by F. Berkeley Smith, $1.25

THE STRONG ARM

By ROBERT BARR,

Author of "In the Midst of Alarms," "The Woman Intervenes," etc.

A stirring romance, the scene of which is laid in the same country as that of "Tekla," the Moselle.

It is full of action, and the interest never flags.

"The Strong Arm" resembles "Tekla," the most successful of Mr. Barr's books, more than any other of his works.

12mo, cloth, $1.25

OUTSIDERS

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS,

Author of "The Ashes of Empire," "The Haunts of Men," etc.

A story of New York life, the first of a series. This deals with the Bohemian and artistic life of New York. Mr. Chambers, who is an artist as well as an author, is perfectly equipped for handling such a subject, and he has produced a book full of the greatest interest, and entirely fresh and original. Nothing has been published that approaches this work in these characteristics.

12mo, cloth, $1.25

LITITIA BERKELEY, A.M.

By JOSEPHINE B. STEFFENS.

A novel of New York life, and including also a description of the life of a medical student in Paris. It deals also with the sex problem, but in a way that attracts rather than repels.

12mo, cloth, $1.25

IN A STEAMER CHAIR

By ROBERT BARR,

Author of "Tekla," "The Mutable Many," "In the Midst of Alarms," "A Woman Intervenes," etc.

A new edition of this popular little book. Full of Mr. Barr's characteristic humor.

THE CENTURY CO.'S LATEST BOOKS

No. 5 JOHN STREET. By RICHARD WHITEING. "The book of the season" in England, and one of the successes of the new year in America. Founded upon fact—not as to its plot, but in its vivid presentation of striking social contrasts. "It stands amongst the average output of fiction like an oak in a hedgerow," says David Christie Murray; and a hundred other reviewers have said the same thing, though not in the same words. New edition, $1.50.

THE TWO STANDARDS. By Dr. WILLIAM BARRY. An "up-to-date" romance by a distinguished Catholic priest. Few books have received so much attention from the critics, many of whom praise it in the highest terms. All agree that it is a remarkable work, and written in a style of unusual brilliancy. To judge of its merits, one must read it for himself. $1.50.

CAPT. SIGSBEE'S "THE MAINE" is one of the books of permanent interest that owe their origin to the late war. The story of the terrible event that precipitated the outbreak of hostilities is related clearly and forcibly and in the best possible temper. Illustrated, $1.50.

LIEUT. HOBSON'S "SINKING OF THE MERRIMAC" is one of those rare books in which the doers of extraordinary deeds have shown their ability to write as brilliantly as they acted. Even as a fictitious story of adventure, this true narrative of a world-famous achievement would be heartily welcomed by the reading public. Illustrated, $1.50.

GEORGE KENNAN'S "CAMPAIGNING IN CUBA." A record of thrilling experiences by the famous author of "Siberia and the Exile System." Absolutely necessary to a clear comprehension of the campaign that ended at Santiago. $1.50.

CUBA AND PORTO RICO. By ROBERT T. HILL. A work describing all the islands of the West Indies, and presenting a larger amount and a later revision of facts relating thereto than any other single work in existence. The standard book for students, travellers, and business men. New edition, illustrated, $3.

A Wind Flower

BY Caroline Atwater
Mason.

Author of "A Quiet King," "A Minister of the World," "A Minister of Carthage," etc.

Beautifully decorated, cloth binding, uncut edges, gilt top, frontispiece, small 16mo, 290 pages.

Price, 75 cts. net; postpaid, 85 cts.

Mrs. Mason is one of the most popular of the writers for

"The Ladies' Home Journal."

A competent critic who has read this book says that it exceeds all Mrs. Mason's previous stories in power and interest.

"The author is too modest in giving to her latest story the title 'A Wind Flower'; she not only puts undue emphasis on her weakest character, but does an injustice to herself and her book. Few would surmise that under such a title lay a most subtle and thorough analysis of high church claims. . . . The book is worthy of a place among the year's best fiction."—Chicago Tribune.

A New Kipling Book

Messrs. ALEX. GROSSET & Co. have just published

The City of Dreadful Night,

By RUDYARD KIPLING,

which was suppressed in India immediately upon publication, and has never been circulated in this country. 12mo, cloth, with striking cover design, and two full-page illustrations and portrait of the author. Price, 75 cents.

Also, a vivid reproduction of Philip Burne-Jones' remarkable picture,

The Vampire.

Size, 8 x 10 inches, in portfolio of heavy, dark gray paper, with original cover design, and Kipling's verses printed on the flaps.

We believe this is the best reproduction yet made of this famous picture. It is beautifully done in Photogravure, and is especially suited for framing, or is a finished production as offered.

Price, 50 cents.

These two publications should be on the counters of every bookseller for the summer trade.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusives of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

THE HILPRECHT EDITION OF THE

Holman Pronouncing Teachers' Bible

contains a series of pictures illustrating the progress made in the Babylonian Excavation Work. These pictures are arranged and described by the eminent Assyriologist, Prof. H. V. HILPRECHT, of the University of Pennsylvania, who has probably accomplished more in the cause of Assyriology than any other specialist living.

"There are five expeditions just sent out, each of which is endeavoring to obtain the crown of Archæological research at the close of this century. Foremost among these is the expedition of the University of Pennsylvania."

Made in a variety of beautiful bindings and sold at extremely low prices.

The Best Key to Educational Books.

THE

American Educational Catalogue

For 1899,

whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its thirtieth year, and that claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school books.

Thousands of Copies are Sold Every Season,

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most complete order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue is made entirely new each year, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and all new books (ready or to be ready for the Fall) are added in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS:

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements:

*With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5.00 ;
per 1000, $40.00.*

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or for $1.00 if plate is sent.

Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

The regular Educational Number of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY" will be supplied at 50 cents per copy in leatherette.

The Man with the Hoe, and Other Poems.

By Edwin Markham.

THAS been many years since any poem has excited so much interest as has Mr. Markham's now famous voicing of the protest against life's inequalities which he saw in Millet's painting. In a few weeks after its appearance the author had received hundreds of letters from prominent literary people all over the world commending the work highly. Prof. William James, of Harvard, for instance, wrote: "The poem is magnificent and reeks with humanity and morality." This is Mr. Markham's first collection of poems, with a frontispiece reproduction of the painting which inspired his best effort.

Size, 5 x 7½ ; Pages, about 150 ; Frontispiece photogravure ; Type, 10-point ; Price, $1.00, net.

The Real Hawaii.

By Lucien Young, U. S. N.

THIS is an authoritative work upon our newly acquired possessions by an American Naval officer, who knows his subject thoroughly. It not only gives the inside history of the revolution which ended the Monarchy—Lieutenant Young was on the Boston at that time, and took an active part in the proceedings—but furnishes a reliable handbook to the condition and resources of the island. An appendix contains an elaborate array of statistical information about all sorts of matters, including the sugar, coffee, and other industries.

Size, 5 x 7½ ; Pages, about 325 ; Illustrations and maps ; Price, $1.50.

JOHN LANE'S NEW BOOKS

SOME MODERN CLASSICS.

THE COLLECTED POEMS OF WILLIAM WATSON. With Portrait. $2.50.

"I prefer the poet who sings of my immortal soul to the chap who sings of windlasses and steam-winchies." And so I prefer William Watson to Kipling."—Mr. VANCE THOMPSON in The Criterion.

THE LAST BALLAD, and Other Poems. By John Davidson. Fcap. 8vo, $1.50.

The London Times says: "Mr. John Davidson, when the fine frenzy of inspiration is upon him, writes verse that must appeal to all who have any poetical instinct. His imagination glows and his phrases strike home. He stands among the few writers of the day who really write poetry, and 'The Last Ballad, and Other Poems' is a volume in which his finer qualities are evident."

THE SILENCE OF LOVE. Poems. By Edmond Holmes. Post 4to, $1.50.

"Those lovers of what is lovely, who have long treasured Mrs. Browning's 'Sonnets from the Portuguese,' and Rossetti's 'House of Life,' will rejoice to find in this new volume a legitimate successor."—Boston Transcript.

THE ALHAMBRA, and Other Poems. By F. B. Money Coutts. Crown 8vo, $1.25.

The London Daily Chronicle says: "He is a strong poetic craftsman, and his work is always carefully and delicately finished. It is plain on every page that Mr. Coutts is a serious and strenuous craftsman, who places a fine and individual faculty at the service of a lofty ideal."

New Book by the author of "Forest Lovers."

PAN AND THE YOUNG SHEPHERD. By Maurice Hewlett. Crown 8vo, $1.25.

"Even more distinctively and richly imaginative than his 'Forest Lovers.' It is a bit of bold fantasy, veined with passion, lightened by the humors of rusticity."—The Outlook.

The Sequel to "Aylwin."

THE COMING OF LOVE: Rhona Boswell's Story and Other Poems. By Theodore Watts-Dunton, author of "Aylwin." Crown 8vo, $2.00.

Literature says: "In 'The Coming of Love' (which, though published earlier, is a sequel to 'Aylwin') he has given us an unforgettable, we cannot but believe an enduring portrait—one of the few immortal women of the imagination. Rhona Boswell comes again into 'Aylwin.'"

New Book by "Max."

MORE. By Max Beerbohm. A Volume of Essays. $1.25.

"In his hands the knack of graceful impertinence is raised by dint of sheer mastery to the dignity of a serious art; there are moments, indeed, when he brings it within measurable distance of the sublime."—Literature.

THE SPIRIT OF PLACE, and Other Essays. By Alice Meynell. Fcap. 8vo, $1.25.

The London Pall Mall Gazette says: "A rare book. One cannot believe that a writer whose perceptions are so fine but so human, whose reflections are so fine but so just, can write anything one would not wish to read."

New Poems by W. B. Yeats.

The Wind Among the Reeds. By W. B. Yeats. $1.25.

"The London Outlook says: "In truth Mr. Yeats' work, for which we have waited several years, is a beautiful gift."

The New "Golden Age."

DREAM DAYS: Being eight "Golden Age" Stories. By Kenneth Grahame. FOURTH EDITION. $1.25. Uniform with "Golden Age" and "Pagan Papers."

"In this province, the reconstruction of child life, Kenneth Grahame is masterly; in fact, we know of no one his equal."—New York Times.

CASSELL'S NATIONAL LIBRARY.

The change in the management of the American interests of the great English house of Cassell & Co. has already been noted in The Express. The house is now represented by a New York branch, at Nos. 7 and 9 West Eighteenth Street, bearing the parent company's name of Cassell & Co., Ltd. The imprint of the Cassells is found upon many books of combined value and cheapness, and the company deserves good wishes for prosperity under its new arrangement.

One of its first American enterprises is the beginning of a new series of Cassell's National Library. The first volume is "Hamlet," and other volumes will be published weekly. Cassell's National Library was edited by the late Henry Morley, a teacher of English literature who did untold good in bringing the English classics within the reach of those of slender purses. The volumes in the library are printed on good paper in clear readable type and in handy form and sell at 10 cents in paper, 20 cents in a neat cloth binding. A new design has been made for the wrappers, and in their new dress, these classic gems should prove a boon to students and to others anxious for the best books in their library, but whose purses are light.

IMPERIAL DEMOCRACY

By DAVID STARR JORDAN, Ph.D.,

President of Leland Stanford Junior University.

12mo, Cloth, $1.50.

Dr. Jordan's striking and timely book presents the various phases of a democracy's entrance upon imperialism in the light of history as well as recent facts and developments. He analyzes our relations to the Philippines and discusses various plans of conduct. He draws lessons from our management of Alaska. While the author is opposed to American control of subject races, his discussions are broad and fair, and his statements of the arguments on either side will prove of general interest and value at this time.

NOTES IN SEASON.

D. APPLETON & Co. have in press a new edition of Edward Bellamy's last book "Equality," which will contain a portrait of the author and a biographical sketch, together with several fragments of hitherto unpublished writings of Mr. Bellamy.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have in press a "History of America Before Columbus," by P. De Roo, in two volumes; a "Life of Bismarck," by Frank Preston Stearns; and "Lessons in Graphic Shorthand (Gabelsberger,)" prepared for the American public by C. R. Lippman.

DOUBLEDAY & McCLEURE Co. have just ready a volume of poems by Edwin Markham, which takes its title from that remarkably strong poem called "The Man With the Hoe," written after seeing Millet's painting; also, "The Real Hawaii: its history and present condition, including the true story of the revolution," by Lieutenant Lucien Young, U. S. N., being a new and revised issue of "The Boston at Hawaii."

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish shortly "A Short History of Free Thought," by John M. Robertson, whose "Modern Humanists," and "Buckle and His Critics," have given him a standing among the writers on economic subjects; "Outlines of the Principles of Differential Diagnosis, with Chemical Memoranda," by Dr. Frederick J. Smith, Senior Assistant Physician at the London Hospital; "The Development of the English Novel," by W. L. Cross, Assistant Professor of English at Yale; and a new novel by Miss Margaret Sherwood, entitled "Henry Worthington, Idealist."

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish on the 10th inst. "The Autobiography of Mrs. Margaret Oliphant, 1828-1897," which is already attracting much attention in London, and which cannot but prove of absorbing interest here to the lover of Mrs. Oliphant's work as well as to the literary profession. They will publish shortly a volume of Venetian stories, entitled "The Enchanted Isles," by Max Pemberton. They have just ready Max Pemberton's new story, "The Garden of Swords," and "Thoughts of and for the Inner Life," by Dr. Dwight, which commemorates his retirement from the Presidency of Yale University.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready "Nature Studies in Berkshire," a collection of nature studies intermingled with the reflections of a writer—John Coleman Adams—who is at once a philosopher and a poet, illustrated with reproductions from photographs and drawings by Arthur Scott; "Ornamental Shrubs" for garden, lawn, and park planting, by Lucius D. Davis, with 100 illustrations; also, "Our Insect Friends and Foes: how to collect, preserve, and study them," by Belle S. Cragin, with over 250 illustrations. They announce a book entitled "How to Swim," which will be of interest to experts as well as beginners, by Captain Davis Dalton, champion long-distance swimmer of the world and chief inspector of the U. S. Volunteer Life Saving Corps.

SMALL, MAYNARD & Co. will publish shortly a new novel by a new writer—"The Pedagogues," by Arthur Stanwood Pier. The story concerns itself with the contrasts and humors of that little-known department of Harvard University, the Harvard Summer School, and amusingly depicts the effect of the "minor culture" of a great university on the curiously miscellaneous body of young and old who gather in Cambridge each summer for so many different purposes of study. This house has just acquired the rights to the four books of verse by Bliss Carman formerly published by Lamson, Wolfe & Co.—"Low Tide on Grand-pré," "Behind the Arras," "Ballads of Lost Haven," and "By the Aurelian Wall." These four volumes comprise the whole of Mr. Carman's published work—so far as it has been issued in book form—excepting his part in "Songs from Vagabondia" and "More Songs from Vagabondia," in which he collaborated with Richard Hovey. "Low Tide on Grand-pré" and "Behind the Arras" are at present out of print, but new editions are in preparation for immediate publication.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; m. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fc. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Appleton, Amelia. That other woman. N. Y., F. Tennyson Neely, [1899.] 8-284 p. D. cl., $1. [1869]

Boston is the scene of the misunderstandings of two young people. The girl's father had married, believing his wife lost at sea. "That other woman" for years made him believe his second marriage illegal, and the young man's mother would not consent to his marriage with a girl under a cloud.

Banks, L. Albert, D.D. My young man: a series of addresses to young men. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1899. c. 8-123 p. D. cl., 60 c. [1672]

Addresses delivered in the Young Men's Christian Association Hall, Cleveland, Ohio. They are devoted to the consideration of the young man in his relationships as a son, a brother, a member of society, a lover, a husband, a citizen, to a young man and his money, and the young man as himself. The aim of these addresses, or character studies, is to arouse in young men a love and respect for things they are apt to regard lightly.

Barker, G. F., ed. Röntgen rays: memoirs by Röntgen, Stokes, and J. J. Thomson; tr. and ed. by G. F. Barker. N. Y., Harper, 1899. 7-76 p. 8", (Harper's scientific memoirs, no. 1, ed. by Jos. S. Ames.) cl., 60 c. [1673]

A new series of handbooks in science, embracing translations and reprints of various articles on physics, astronomy, chemistry, and other sciences, hitherto practically inaccessible to the general student.

Beresford, C. (Lord.) The break-up of China; with an account of its present commerce, currency, waterways, armies, railways, politics, and future prospects. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 22+491 p. por. maps, O. cl., $3. [1674]

Lord Beresford visited China in 1898, at the request of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Great Britain, to make a report of its trade conditions as related to Great Britain. His book is the result of that visit and a concise statement of the Chinese question. He decides in favor of the policy of the "open door," and against "spheres of influence" or the "break-up of China." The author devotes a chapter to each important city, and gives a detailed statement of its trade and commerce, the relations existing between the foreign powers in it, and statements by the viceroys, reports of chambers of commerce, and the interviews with Chinese officials, who bear witness to the necessity of the "open door." Chapters are also devoted to the discussion of waterways, railways, armies and navies, trade, treaties, tariffs and currency, closing with accounts of visits to Japan and to America.

Bible. New Testament. The general epistles of SS. James, Peter, John, and Jude; with notes, critical and practical, by Rev. M. F. Sadler. New cheaper ed. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 39+305 p. 12", cl., $1.50. [1675]

Carus, Paul. Buddhism and its Christian critics. Chic., The Open Court Pub. Co., 1899. c. '94, '97. 2-316 p. D. (Religion of science lib., no. 86.) cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

[1688]

"The present book purports to be a contribution to comparative religion, and it is one-sided because it is addressed mainly to Christians, viz., to those Christians who are anxious to acquire an insight into the significance of Buddhist thought as it is at its best. Buddhism and Christianity are in many respects so similar as to appear almost identical; in other respects they exhibit such contrasts as to represent two opposite poles; and it is on this account that a study of Buddhism is indispensable for a proper comprehension of Christianity."—Preface.

[1689]

The original plan of issuing this work in two volumes, made before the magnitude of the undertaking was realized, has now been changed, and it will appear in three volumes of corresponding size, the last of which will contain the four remaining divisions or groups of Lecture VI., "The contribution of Christian missions to social progress," which is continued in this volume from the previous one, and also extended statistical summaries giving a detailed survey of missionary operations throughout the world. Lecture V., "The dawn of a sociological era in missions," also in this volume, is followed by a bibliography (6 p.).

The president of the University of Illinois has written for young Americans an exhibit of the Spanish-American war of 1898 as one more step in the progress of the world towards universal liberty. It begins with a treatise on the historic misgovernment of Spain from the time she acquired land in the new hemisphere after the discoveries of Columbus. Describes all the events that led up to the war, the details of war, and the consequences of the expansion of territory circumstances have forced on the United States. A full description of the peace commission is included.

 The first attempt of a psychological study of woman by a woman. The writer deals with her subject from points of view and facts which are affected by the social position of women in the present and most recent past. She points out how wholly unsatisfactory for herself and for man her present condition is. Woman has educated her intellect at the expense of her heart and her emotions, and the only force by which she can ever achieve beneficial results—her womanliness—is being sacrificed more and more. The power of religion in the development of women is also studied, and the great differences of Protestant and Catholic conditions are pointed out. The true sphere of woman and its future is practically defined.

Locke, W. J.; (pseud.) Idols. N. Y., J. Lane, 1899. c. 5+366 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1725]

The author's former work proved him addicted to the study of men and women under abnormal conditions. This book goes a step ahead of "Derelicts" and "At the gate of Samaria." It is a study of two men who loved the same woman. Under almost impossible circumstances the same woman gives false testimony, thinking to please her husband by saving his friend.

Lützow, Francis (Count.) A history of Bohemian literature. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. 12+425 p. D. (Literatures of the world ser.) cl., $1.50. [1726]

Beginning with the "Question of the manuscripts," the author takes up the hymns, dating probably from the tenth century, which are the earliest uncontested Bohemian writings. In developing the theme of early Bohemian poetry several valuable translations are furnished as illustrations. A discussion of the early prose writers precedes an important portion of the book which treats of the epoch that witnessed the serious attempts to revive the vernacular in the place of Latin, and to institute linguistic as well as religious reforms, an epoch ending with the burning of John Hus and religious persecutions. Another large phase of the subject—the development of Bohemian prose in the sixteenth century—is fully treated, together with the various new impulses of the last hundred years. The author's treatment of the subject is happily reinforced by translations of characteristic examples of Bohemian literature. Bibliography (2 p.). Index.

This biography was undertaken at the special request of the late Burne-Jones. The author had unreserved access to all materials in the possession of the family of William Morris, architect, painter, poet, decorator, weaver, printer, craftsman in many arts, socialist and revolutionary. His crowded, brave, and useful life is put on record with excellent judgment of essentials and non-essentials. The artistic and literary life of England for two generations can be studied in this book.

McLaughlin, Andrew Cunningham. A history of the American nation. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 14+587 p. pors. maps, il. D. (Twentieth century ser.) cl., net, $1.40. [1728]

The purpose is to trace the main outlines of national development, to show how the American people came to be what they are. These outlines include the struggle of the nations of western Europe for possession of the New World; the foundation and growth of English colonies; the development of political ideas; the difficulties and disorders of the confederate period; the adoption of the Constitution of the United States; the effort to maintain national independence; and the subsequent struggles and events that finally brought all sections of the nation into a bond of perpetual union. These events have been so narrated that the reader will come to an appreciation of his political surroundings and of the political duties that devolve upon him. For this reason especial attention has been paid to political facts, to the rise of parties, to the issues involved in elections, to the development of governmental machinery, and, in general, to questions of government and administration. Short reference lists are appended to a number of chapters.

N. Y., The Shakespeare Press, 1899. c. 12+433 p. D. (Publications of the Shakespearean society of New York, no. 10.) bds. net, $8. [1734]

A work devoted to an examination of the question whether the "Venus and Adonis," credited to Shakespeare was really the work of the same man who wrote the plays of Shakespeare. The author argues that no Warwickshire man wrote the poem in question, and he furnishes a glossary showing Warwickshire methods, modes and habits. The book first appeared in 1885. Only two words in the entire poem can be traced to Warwickshire.

The name of the author stands for the righting of abuses and the championship of the weaker side. The pastor of the Bloomingdale Church, New York City, has written the history of the Jews since they participated in the discovery of America. He shows that the Jews have always been in the forefront in the arts, as poets, dramatists, actors, critics, musicians, painters, sculptors, architects; in the sciences, in literature, and statesmanship. He also aims to fix the responsibility of the Dreyfus affair. The book is a plea for justice for the Jew in America.

China and Japan are graphically and poetically described in telling the story of Madame Izán, who has just recovered from blindness. She had been married, but had never seen her husband, and is journeying to meet him when the various events of the novel take place.

Fritohard, Martin J. [pseud. for Mrs. A: Moore.] The passion of Rosamund Keith. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 5+477 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1748]

The author of "Without sin" lays her story first in the hunting country of England, describing specimens of the old and new women. Rosamund Keith, a wholly lovable girl, upon the death of her aunt, goes with her uncle, an artist, through many of the most romantic parts of southern Europe. Reaching Albania, in western Turkey, she is snowed into a monastery where she finds a long lost lover. The characteristics of the Greeks, the legends, wars, prejudices, cruelties, etc., of the Turks are worked into a highly sensational plot.

A new series in which emphasis is placed upon the concise, forcible, and realistic interpretation of the Bible. The books of the Bible are grouped according to a natural classification, their contents arranged in the order of appearance, and a scholarly yet popular paraphrase of their distinctive thought given in plain and expressive English. The purpose of the series is to enable any reader of the Bible to understand its meaning as a reverent scholar of to-day does, and in particular to receive the exact impression which the words as originally heard or read must have made upon those for whom they were delivered.

Sargeant, Kate R. One hundred mushroom receipts. Cleveland, O., C: Orr, 1899. c. 2-52+4 p. sq. S. bds., 50 c. [1752]

The compiler says: "Owing to the present popular interest in the subject of mushrooms, and to the fact that there is no cook-book devoted exclusively to them, it would seem that a collection of receipts like the one here offered would meet with favor." To her own receipts she has added those collected from friends and from the different books, English and American, on the subject. The publisher, Mr. C. Orr, is librarian of the Case Library, Cleveland, O.

Solitary summer (The), by the author of "Elizabeth and her German garden." N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 190 p. 12", cl., $1.50. [1764]

Spofford, Mrs. Harriet Eliz. Prescott. The maid he married. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 3+201 p. nar. S. (Blue cloth books.) cl., 75 c. [1765]

The story of a pretty country girl who comes to Boston to spend a winter with her mother's sister, who has made a second marriage to a very wealthy elderly man. The girl's head is almost turned by her social success and her many admirers, and for a time she seems to have forgotten her accepted lover left in her little country town. The story turns on a momentary temptation to marry for wealth.

Sterndale, Rob. Armitage. The Afghan knife. New ed. N. Y., Brentano's, 1899. 2+444 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1766]

Incidents of the Sepoy mutiny and the besieging of Delhi by the British in 1857 are interwoven. The principal characters are the Indian Prince Nawab Hyder Ali and Sir Paul and Lady Stanford. The Prince becomes involved in a political conspiracy, and he is also concerned in the abduction of a young girl.

Strange, Rev. Cresswell. Instructions on the Revelation of St. John the Divine: being an attempt to make this book more intelligible to the ordinary reader and so to encourage the study of it. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 19+331 p. D. cl., net, $2. [1767]

Thompson, Helen Stuart. Windy Creek. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1899. c. 5+356 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1768]

Windy Creek is supposed to be in Colorado in the vicinity of Denver. The inhabitants offer types of several kinds of originality. Men and women are susceptible to emotional religion, but lead about the same kind of lives even after they have alternately been stirred by prophets and preachers of the Baptist, Free Methodist, and Come-Outers creeds. The latter sect would seem to answer to the Christian scientists.

Van Bergen, R. Tales of our new possessions: the Philippines. San Francisco, Cal., The Whitaker & Ray Co., 1899. c. 160 p. il. sq. S. (Western ser. of readers, v. 5.) bds., 50 c. [1769]

A historical reader, or can be used as a supplementary reader in the fourth, fifth, or sixth grades. The reader is supposed to start on a voyage to the Philippines. He stops at Hawaii, Guam, Yokohama, Tokyo, Woo-Sung, Shanghai, Cavité, and Manila, long enough to learn much about the geography, history, and customs of each place.

Walford, Mrs. Lucy Bethia. A little legacy, and other stories. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 4+344 p. 1 il. nar. S. (Blue cloth books.) cl. 75 c. [1770]

Contents: The little legacy; A clerical exterior; Only Kittle; A terrible moment; Jennima; A metamorphosis; The Jubilee seat; Those sort of people.

Walker, S. Dry bread; or, the reign of selfishness: a novel for men. 2d ed. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham Co., 1899. c. '91, '99. 448 p. D. (Dillingham's metropolitan lib., no. 49.) pap., 50 c. [1771]

A story of the future, picturing the condition of the poor as all business gradually becomes concentrated in the hands of the few. The hero of the story is Leon Pelon, left by his father an estate of seven millions. Leon is robbed of all he possesses by his guardian, General Sinclair, through the latter's connection with a great trust. All the money of the country finally gets into the hands of the twenty-five hundred directors of "The United Supply Company." The company's rule becomes so oppressive and cruel that the people rebel and a limited capital law is passed, which restores the country to prosperity and happiness.

Walter, Rob., M.D. Vital science: based upon life's great law the analogue of gravitation; agnosticism refuted. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1899. c. 319 p. O. cl., $1.50. [1772]

The author believes that the living world is subject to fixed and fundamental laws that may be learned like those of chemistry and gravitation. His book embodies a new theory of creation, a new theory of the constitution of nature, of which John Tyndall only seems to have had knowledge, and new theories of the constitution and immortality of man and of vital forces. The systems of Tyndall, Spencer, Darwin, Drummond, and others are passed in review. He claims to offer convincing proof that the paradoxes of Scripture and the golden rule are scientific and practical truths. The author is a physician in active practice in Walter's Park, Pa.

Warren, J. Byrne Leicester, [Lord de Tabley.] The flora of Cheshire; ed. by Spencer Moore; with a biographical notice of the author by Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 104+399 p. por. D. cl., net, $3 50. [1773]

Bibliography (List of books, periodicals, and manuscripts referred to and consulted) 30 p.

Waterloo, Stanley. The launching of a man. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., [1899.] c. 285 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1774]

The man, Robert Sargent, is introduced as a sophomore at a western university. College life, from the amusing and serious side, is brought before the reader. After receiving his sheepskin, Robert is launched into life, and goes through the experiences of a practical American man, helping to engineer roads for modern commerce and civilization through the western country. The writer of "The story of Ab" excels in descriptions of nature and of healthy men and women. Ball games, foot races, and competitions in many studies and occupations are described.

Waterloo, Stanley. The wolf's long howl. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 3+288 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1775]

A collection of short stories. Contents: The wolf's long howl; An Ulm; The hair of the dog that bit him; The man who fell in love; A tragedy of the forest; Love and a triangle; Red Dog's show window; Love and a latch-key, etc., etc.

Watson, Rosamond Marriott. The art of the house. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 12+185 p. 8°, (Connoisseur ser.) cl., price changed to $2. [1776]

Weaver, Jonathan (Bp.) Heaven; or, that better country. Dayton, O., United Brethren Publishing House, 1899. c. 240 p. por. sq. D. cl., $1. [1777]

Contains a dedication and introduction by the author; a preface by Rev. Wm. M. Weekley; an introduction by Rev. Wm. McKee, D.D.; and twelve chapters under the following heads: Is there a better country? Immortality—the soul; Heaven—a local substantial place; Heaven—various theories; Heaven—a better country; Heaven—progress—employment; Heaven—society—recognition; Heaven—home; Heaven—rest; Heaven—sources of happiness; Heaven—negative descriptions; Heaven—preparations for.

Welch, L. Sheldon, and Camp, Walter. Yale: her campus, class-rooms, and athletics; with introd. by S. J. Elder. Bost., L. C. Page & Co., 1899. c. 25+628 p. por. il. O. cl., $2.50. [1778]

"The Yale campus" and "The Yale class-rooms," parts 1 and 2, are written by Lewis Sheldon Welch, and "Athletics at Yale," pt. 3, by Walter Camp. Pt. 1 has chapters on: As to making a Yale man; The initiation: The sense of membership; Living only in Yale; Living and working by classes; Yale journalism; The poor student's opportunities, etc. Pt. 2 describes the various class-rooms—the scientific, divinity, medical and law schools, etc. Pt. 3 has chapters on rowing at Yale, football, baseball, track athletics, etc. There are a number of appendices, containing chronologies, tables of gifts, etc., etc.

Wells, Webster. The essentials of geometry. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1899. c. '98, '99. 6+899 p. D. hf. leath., $1.25. [1779]

Suited to the needs of high schools and academies, as well as to the requirements of colleges and scientific schools. In some of its features the work is similar to the author's "Revised plane and solid geometry"; but important improvements have been introduced in line with the requirements of many progressive teachers.

Wheeler, W. H. Wheeler's graded studies in English: first lessons in grammar and composition. Chic., W. H. Wheeler & Co., [1899.] c. '98. 3-192 p. il. D. cl., 40 c. [1780]

In the preparation of "Graded studies in English," the author has attempted "to present theory and practice in just proportion and in their proper relation." The lessons begin with "a logical development of the relation of ideas as the foundation of all connected discourse." The sentence is considered a unit of language. The relations of words in sentences are shown to be based on the relations of ideas in thought. Beginning with sentences of two words, the development of the sentence is shown until its most complicated form has been reached.

Wilson, Epiphanius. Dante interpreted: a brief summary of the life, times, and character of Dante; with an analysis of the "Divine comedy" and original translations in the Spenserian stanza. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 4+201 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1781]

Intended as an introduction to the whole poem of the "Divine Comedy," the "Inferno," the "Purgatorio," and the "Paradiso"; accompanying are sketches of Dante's life, times, and character, and his style as a poet, his method and materials.

Wise, Barton H. The life of Henry A. Wise, of Virginia, 1806-1876, by his grandson. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 13+434 p. 8°, cl., $3. [1782]

Woodhull, J. F., and Van Arsdale, M. B. Chemical experiments. N. Y., H. Holt & Co., 1899. c. 136 p. il. D. cl., net, 60 c. [1783]

Wordsworth, J. (Bp.) The episcopate of Charles Wordsworth, Bishop of St. Andrews, Dunkeld, and Dunblane, 1853-1892: a memoir; with some materials for forming a judgment on the great questions in the discussion of which he was concerned. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 25+402 p. por. O. cl., $5. [1784]

The two great subjects to which Bishop Wordsworth directed his strength were the Eucharistic Controversy and the Reunion Movement. These topics are treated at length, his nephew showing fully his reasons for disagreeing with Bishop Wordsworth. There is a bibliography (List of the principal printed writings of Charles Wordsworth in chronological order) (23 p.).

Yarnall, Ellis. Wordsworth and the Cole-ridges; with other memories literary and political. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 9+331 p. 8°, cl., $3. [1785]

Young, Lucien. The real Hawaii; its history and present condition, including the true story of the revolution; a rev. and enl. ed. of "The Boston at Hawaii." N. Y., Doubleday & McClure Co., 1899. c. '98, '99. 9+371 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1786]

Lieutenant Young was on the U. S. S. Boston stationed at Honolulu in 1892 and 1893, before and after the overthrow of the Hawaiian monarchy. He claims to give the inside history of the revolution, his work being a defence of Minister Stevens and Captain Wiltse, the commander of the Boston. The present volume is brought up to date in every essential.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYFOLDT.

JUNE 3, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

SUMMER BOOKSELLING.

ALTHOUGH the dog days are not yet upon us, we are rushing towards them, and plans for summer and vacation pleasures are already under debate—indeed, a few of the "early birds" are already on the wing. In our endeavor to accommodate the WEEKLY to the changing opportunities of the bookseller throughout the year, we venture to offer at this time a few hints for making the most of the summer trade, which this season promises to be more prosperous than could be looked for last year, when the country was distracted by the war with Spain.

The trade in novels and similar light reading always takes the lead during the vacation season, and can therefore without hesitation be liberally provided for. Business in this direction has considerably improved, and has become far more profitable, owing quite as much to the fact that more good copyright books, both in paper and cloth covers, are made now than formerly, as to the fact that the mills which for years unceasingly ground out stuff to feed the counters of the book butchers have been obliged to shut down. The American public, too, it is pleasant to note, is becoming fastidious as to the exterior of its reading-matter, as well as to that of other necessities it packs into its summer trunks. The bookseller, therefore, has every year a wider range among a better public, and should prosper accordingly.

Then there are guide-books (of which the more important will be found in the list of "Books for Summer Travellers," printed in the WEEKLY during the summer months,) as well as books of home and foreign travel, always in demand by tourists. The range of these, which should presently be brought prominently forward on the counters, is limited only by the size of the world, and they offer a good opportunity for sales.

One of the most important aids in pushing business during this season is the preparation of a tempting catalogue of books suitable for shore and mountain reading. It should be prepared with the view of bringing to the special attention of summer visitors the classes of books previously alluded to and giving attractive foretastes of the delights stored in them. Such a catalogue should be found serviceable by two classes of the trade: first, city dealers with regular customers, whom it is desirable to follow "with the compliments of the season" into summer haunts, and who may retain trade by filling orders by mail for the multitudes who go far out of sight of any bookstore, but can be cultivated by the aid of Uncle Sam; second, booksellers at or near summer resorts, who desire to pleasantly acquaint summer visitors that there is a bookstore near at hand from which they can be supplied. With such an aid old customers may be retained, and with energy and foresight much new trade can be created.

Those who for the first time establish branch stores at summer resorts, will do well to remember, that the "summer boarder," unlike the eel, strenuously objects to being "skinned;" hence the dealer who is intent upon making a success of his summer venture must be guided by the same rules that govern his business policy at home. He must be as enterprising and alert to meet demands in his summer quarters, as he would be at home during the holiday season, if not more so, because that which a customer wants during his vacation time, he wants at once or as soon as possible, or not at all. Then if the alert bookseller will provide a cool, shady store, and cheerful and intelligent service his customers will not object if the prices are a trifle higher than they are at home.

As we have already noted, A. S. Capehart, the Director of the Liberal Arts division of the Paris Exposition, has expressed his intention to facilitate the collective exhibit of the book trade as planned by M. Em. Terquem. It will be necessary, however, for each exhibitor to make application individually for space, and then to place himself in communication with M. Terquem, whose address is No. 19 Rue Scribe, Paris. The firms who have thus far made arrangements to be represented are D. Appleton & Co., The Century Company, J. B. Lippincott Co., George Barrie & Sons, Rand, McNally & Co., Ginn & Co., Little, Brown & Co., Lothrop Publishing Co., Dana Estes & Co., Small, Maynard & Co., Herbert Stone & Co., D. Van Nostrand Co., W. R.

Jenkins, A. S. Barnes & Co., and W. E. Benjamin. Other firms who have expressed their intention to make application for space are Harper & Brothers, Charles Scribner's Sons, American Book Company, Dodd, Mead & Co., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and the Johns Hopkins Press. The Grolier Club and other book clubs are also making arrangements for elaborate display, so that the book exhibit from this country promises to be a fairly representative one. As the space is limited it is advisable that application should be made without delay. Blanks may be obtained from A. S. Capehart, Director Liberal Arts and Chemical Industries, Paris Exposition, Auditorium, Chicago, Ill.

SECRETARY OF STATE JOHN HAY ON INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

SECRETARY OF STATE JOHN HAY on May 28 wrote a letter to Alfred Austin in reply to his recent communication on the subject of international copyright, which we give below, omitting only the complimentary introduction:

"... I am, as you assume, greatly interested in the subject of international copyright. I sympathized and, to the extent of my ability, co-operated with the efforts of men more energetic and capable than myself to reform our objectionable copyright system and to have the present arrangement enacted into law. I think you do something less than justice to the law itself and to the Congress that enacted it. There were many interests opposed to it, and it required no little patience and care to bring together the different groups of opinion favorable to the principle involved. The law as passed was not what everybody wanted, but it was the only settlement within reach, and it was in itself, I venture to say, if not perfect in all its provisions, a most laudable and beneficent act. Its good effects have surpassed the expectations of its friends.

"From inquiries I have recently made I am led to believe that the operation of the law has not profited American publishers to anything like the extent they anticipated, and while it has certainly been an advantage to American authors they have not been its chief beneficiaries. English writers have profited largely by the protection afforded them, and English publishers have reaped great advantage by establishing branch offices in this country, which have enabled them to handle their English business at inconsiderable expense and to extend their profitable operations here.

"It is not in its application to pure literature alone that our law of copyright ought to be judged. In the department of art it affords absolutely perfect security to producers, all rights in paintings, etchings, drawings, sculpture and architectural plans being reserved by simple registry at a nominal fee. The same is true of musical works of all sorts. Recent legal decisions have taken the highest ground, following the purpose of the framers of the law, in affording to music the most liberal protection. Dramatic works also receive the most ample security. They are better protected, I am informed, than even in England.

"It is in the matter of the manufacture of books alone that the complaint of the English author is founded, and I cannot but think that the hardships which are alleged to proceed from this source are somewhat exaggerated. The operation of the law has been in the main of enormous value to English authors, both in their financial returns and the spread of their fame and influence. In many cases the prices of literary work under the action of the law have more than doubled. The world of English letters was never so prosperous as now. The hardship of compelling the manufacture of English books in America has greatly decreased with the constantly diminishing cost of the work, and where a book impresses a publisher as worthy his attention the question of the outlay for printing is hardly regarded. Where such a book has not seemed of sufficient value to be reprinted here, the author has, of course, been free to import a foreign edition, but I am told there has not been an instance in which this has operated disadvantageously to a later edition of the work or to the author's next book.

"The growth of respect for literary property has always been proportionate to the familiarity with literary exchange, and since the passage of our law the security conferred upon many people formerly indifferent to the subject has created for the copyright law a body of new supporters. It is a great advantage to feel that no backward step will be taken, and the almost unanimous voice of American men of letters, including the entire league of American authors and not a few of our most prominent publishers, is in cordial sympathy with your own lofty and generous aspiration for the absolute freedom of literary exchange throughout the world."

KIPLING'S GRIEVANCE AGAINST G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS.

THE counsel for G. P. Putnam's Sons received a copy of the long expected complaint from Rudyard Kipling's attorneys on the afternoon of May 19, in which the author sets forth his grievances against various publishers for having, as he claims, reproduced his books without proper authority.

In the outset of his complaint Kipling declares that action is brought against G. P. Putnam's Sons, George Haven Putnam and Irving Putnam, also D. Appleton & Co., the Doubleday & McClure Co., Charles Scribner and Arthur H. Scribner, trading as Charles Scribner's Sons, and the Century Company.

In the body of the complaint Kipling alleges, in the first place, that he is temporarily an inhabitant of the State of Vermont, and is an alien and a subject of her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain. The complaint goes on to state that the plaintiff is an author, and carried on the business of writing books, "comprising tales, sketches, ballads, verses, and other literary compositions," and has been engaged in such business for fifteen years, during which time he has carefully schooled himself in the requirements of his business, and in acquiring and developing a style of composition and presentation which, in his opinion, is peculiar to himself.

The ground of complaint against the defendants, according to the formal complaint, is that at various times the accused publishers have gathered together under a common name series of volumes of Kipling's works, numbered in sequence, and all forming an edition. Kipling sets forth in his complaint that he has only authorized one edition of his collected works in this country, that one having been published by Scribners and known as the Outward Bound edition.

In support of the complaint, Kipling cites incidentally the fact that in collecting the various short stories, ballads, and verses which he has written from time to time for newspapers and periodicals, he has devised and appropriated in advance of all others, for the purpose of identifying his own writings, a name in the nature of a trade-mark; that among the names so devised and first appropriated are the following: "Plain Tales from the Hills," "Soldiers Three," etc.

Limited rights for publication as individual volumes were extended to various firms, but none of them, with the exception of Charles Scribner's Sons, was authorized to publish a complete set of the author's works under one name.

COPELAND & DAY RETIRE FROM THE PUBLISHING BUSINESS.

COPELAND & DAY announce officially that as soon as necessary arrangements can be made they will withdraw from the publishing business. We agree with the Boston Transcript that no firm in the country has preserved a higher standard of integrity in craftsmanship and in commercial standing, as well as in the character of literature issued, than the young firm that is now withdrawing from the field.

The history of Copeland & Day begins with the publication of the "Poems" of Francis Thompson, in connection with a London house, and closes with the publication of a novel, a book of essays, and a book of verse, namely, "How Hindsight Met Provincialitis," by L. C. Whitelock, "Literary Likings," by Richard Burton, and "Impressions," by Lilla Cabot Perry. Lovers of fine books all over the country will learn with regret that no more new books are to come from the quaint little place in Cornhill, bearing the imprint of the "lily among thorns." To be sure this regret will be tempered to collectors who possess certain of the rare and beautiful books which Copeland & Day have made during the past five and a half years, and the reflection will be a soothing one that their value, which has steadily increased, will now increase the more.

The list of original work by Copeland & Day comprises a number of books which have taken their place in the first rank of those produced by authors of these closing years of the century. Among the publications of this house are the poems of Lionel Johnson, Francis Thompson, and the "Matins" of Francis Sherman; "The Road to Castaly," by Alice Brown; the "Poems" of John Tabb; "Patris," by Louise Imogen Guiney; "Harvard Episodes," by C. M. Flandrau; "The Arabella and Araminta Stories," by Gertrude Smith; "Songs from Vagabondia," by Bliss Carman and Richard Hovey; "The Listener in the Town" and "The Listener in the Country," by J. E. Chamberlin; "The Black Riders," by Stephen Crane; "Lyrics of Earth," by Archibald Lampman; "Free to Serve," by E. Rayner; "In Titian's Garden," by Harriet Prescott Spofford; "In Childhood's Country," by Louise Chandler Moulton; the volumes of the Oaten Stop Series of poetry, wherein many minor poets found expression in beautiful form—Madison Cawein, Hannah Parker Kimball, Evelyn Stein, Zitella Cocke among them; the charming and only complete translation of the famous "Aucassin and Nicolette," by E. W. Thompson; the translations of "Our Lady's Tumbler," by Isabel Butler; the Zola translations by William Apthorp, and his two volumes of Essays "By the Way," "About Music," and "About Musicians."

These are but a few among the four-score books that have been issued during the short history of the house. Of these, several were privately printed, notably the memorial book of Robert Louis Stevenson, by Alice Brown and Louise Imogen Guiney, of which several copies have recently found their way to collectors through auction rooms, and have brought sums in large advance on the original price. Among the few privately printed books of Copeland & Day is "The Decadent," the first book to bear their imprint.

The individual members of the firm are Herbert Copeland and F. Holland Day. They have had about them a pleasant set of latter-day literati, and some of the breakfasts given by the firm to their authors will long be remembered in contemporary annals, notably the one given on the day of the publication of "Vivette," by Gelett Burgess, "Middleway," by Kate Whiting Patch, and "Victory," by Hannah Parker Kimball.

COPYRIGHT NOTES.

SUIT OF GILMORE vs. EARLE AND THAYER DECIDED IN FAVOR OF PLAINTIFF.

JUDGE LOWELL in the United States Circuit Court of Boston, on May 18, sent down a final decree in the case of Laura E. Gilmore against James H. Earle and William M. Thayer, awarding the plaintiff $11,181. The action has been pending for twelve years, and was brought for an alleged violation of the copyright law on the part of the defendants, the plaintiff claiming that a portion of a life of James A. Garfield, written by Mr. Thayer and published by Mr. Earle, was made up from the life of Garfield written by James R. Gilmore, the plaintiff's husband.

CASELL & CO. SUSTAIN THEIR RIGHTS IN THEIR DICTIONARIES.

AN interesting decision upon the subject of trade rights or good will in books has just been rendered by Judge Kirkpatrick in the Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey. As is well known, Cassell & Company, Limited, of London and New York, have for a number of years, published a series of school dictionaries, including French-English and English-French, German-English and English-German. In the latter part of 1898 there appeared upon the market books that resembled these dictionaries; a close inspection, however, showed them to be imitations made by photographically reproducing the pages upon a somewhat reduced scale, and then dressing up the books so as closely to resemble the genuine article. An action was brought; and the decree signed, among other things, enjoins the defendants and all in privity with them, "from directly or indirectly advertising, printing, manufacturing, selling, offering for sale, or otherwise disposing of, any dictionaries whatever with a back of a red or reddish color having stamped thereon a title in letters of a size and character and arranged similarly to the title stamped upon the complainant's dictionaries; or any French-English and English-French dictionary containing title-pages arranged like or substantially like the title-pages in complainant's French-English and English-French dictionary, or containing the matter and heading 'Preface to the 116th Thousand' or the matter entitled 'Preface' which appear therein; or any German-English and English-German dictionary containing the matter entitled 'Preface' which appears in complainant's said dictionary; and also from using with any dictionaries whatever the name 'Cassell's'; or a red or reddish back and green or greenish sides, or any form of binding, lettering or statement which shall by reason of the collocation of size, shape, or color, or statement, present the general appearance of complainant's dictionaries or of any of them."

A CURIOUS DECISION AS TO MECHANICAL REPRODUCTION OF COPYRIGHT MUSIC.

JUSTICE STERLING on May 20 rendered a curious decision regarding a mooted point in musical copyright. The decision was given in the Chancery division of the English High Court of Justice. It was in favor of the Eolian Co., against whose agents, Boosey & Co., action had been brought to restrain them from issuing paper rolls so perforated as to reproduce the airs of songs copyrighted by them. The Justice's decision was that the paper rolls are part of the instrument, consequently their sale involves no breach of copyright.

He held that, as the perforated sheets are unintelligible to all except the initiated, they were outside the copyright act. This act provides that the word "copyright" means "the sole and exclusive liberty of printing or otherwise multiplying copies of any subject." As it is impossible to read these rolls of music when not used in connection with the "Eolian," for which they were made, no infringement was allowed.

A curious feature of the decision was the finding that the defendants had no right to take from sheet music published by the plaintiffs the words "andante," "adagio," or other such terms regulating the expression. The Justice issued an injunction restraining the defendants from doing this.

It would be an interesting test of this decision if perforated music sheets were to be made on which translations into English of the recognized marks of musical expression appeared instead of the Italian words.

OBITUARY NOTES.

MISS HARRIET A. FARRAND, author of "The Moravian Indian Boy," and several books on religious subjects, died at Chicago May 30. For thirty years she was associate editor of The Advance.

REV. BEVERLY BETTS died May 21 at Jamaica, L. I. He was born in New York August 3, 1827. He was librarian of Columbia College for fifteen years, and was a well-known writer on genealogy and heraldry.

JOHN W. OVERALL, author of "A Catechism of the United States Constitution," "The Negro as He Was and Will Be," etc., died in New York May 20. He was born in 1823 in the Shenandoah Valley, Va., where his ancestors had settled in 1700.

WILLIAM WARE, of the school-book publishing firm of William Ware & Co., Boston, died at Milton, Mass., May 16, aged fifty. His firm is the successor to the firm of Hickling Swan & Brewer, afterwards Brewer, Tileston & Co., and then since 1877 William Ware & Co.

ROSALIE, more generally known as Rosa, Bonheur, the famous animal painter, died at Fontainebleau, May 26. She was born at Bordeaux, France, March 22, 1822, and studied under her father Raymond Bonheur. She is perhaps known best in this country by her "Horse Fair," which is now the property of the Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York.

BENJAMIN VINCENT, the editor of "Haydn's Dictionary of Dates," died recently at the advanced age of eighty-seven. When failing health some half a century ago forced Joseph Haydn to retire from his task, Mr. Vincent took his place, and ever since 1856 the work has been edited by him. Mr. Vincent until the last labored at the dictionary, preparing, adding, and arranging its text.

DR. JOHN MOIR, late president of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, died in Edinburgh, Scotland, May 14, aged ninety-two.

He was born in Verdun, France, his father, a surgeon in the British navy, having been taken prisoner during the Napoleonic wars. Dr. Moir was a prominent writer, not only on medical matters, but on religious subjects, being the author of the popular pamphlets on "Systematic Giving," widely read in this country. He was the brother of James Moir, well known as a merchant in New York City up to his retirement in the seventies, and uncle of the Rev. W. W. Moir, of the Church of the Holy Communion, in West Twentieth Street, New York.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MRS. FLORA ANNIE STEEL has written a new novel of life in India—one which is expected to rival "On the Face of the Waters." It is mentioned as a powerful story, and it is to be published as a serial in the Pall Mall Magazine.

MAURICE HEWLETT, author of the "The Forest Lovers," etc., begins a new romance in the current number of The Fortnightly Review, entitled "The Judgment of Boris." Most of the action takes place in Venice in the middle of the fifteenth century.

THE announcement that Richard Henry Stoddard is preparing to publish his reminiscences reminds us that the genial poet is actually nearing his seventy-sixth year, and has been known to the public as a writer for over half a century. He may be considered the last of that circle of writers of which Poe, Longfellow, Lowell, and Bryant formed a part. Stoddard came into close contact with many of the more famous of his contemporaries, and his notes, therefore, promise to have a personal as well as a literary interest.

PROFESSOR ARTHUR TWINING HADLEY, author of a work on "Railroad Transportation," and "The Relations Between Private Property and Public Welfare," etc., was elected on May 25 President of Yale University. Professor Hadley was born in New Haven April 23, 1856, and is the only child of James B. Hadley, professor of Greek at Yale. He entered Yale in 1872 and was graduated in 1876. He was the next two years at the University of Berlin, and upon his return was made tutor at Yale, giving instructions in various branches for four years. From 1883 to 1886 he was university lecturer on railroad administration. Since 1886 he has been professor of political science in the graduate department. For two years—1887 to 1889—he was associate editor of The Railroad Gazette of New York. From 1885 to 1887 he was Commissioner of Labor Statistics of Connecticut, and in this capacity he published two reports which attracted great attention. In 1883 he contributed a series of articles on "Transportation" to "Lalor's Cyclopædia of Political Science," and in 1886 he was employed to prepare part of the article on railways in the "Encyclopædia Britannica." He is the author of the chapter on the railway in its business relations in Scribner's "American Railways," 1888. He wrote the labor report of the State of Connecticut for 1885-'86, and that of 1886-'87, while he was Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Camera Obscura is the title of a new international monthly magazine to be printed in four languages. It is to be edited by J. R. A. Schouten.

A "NEW Lippincott," begins with the July issue of Lippincott's Magazine. With the forthcoming issue the readers are promised practically a new magazine. A posthumous story by the author of "David Harum" will be presented; it is called "The Teller." The novel of the number is "The Fox-Woman," by John Luther Long. The fiction is further strengthened by "Marta's Inheritance," in which Mrs. Crowninshield gives the intimate flavor of Cuban life. Anne Hollingsworth Wharton will contribute the first of two articles on "The Salon in Old Philadelphia." The poetry of the number will include a song by James Whitcomb Riley.

IN celebration of its twentieth anniversary The Art Amateur has issued an exceedingly handsome number. It begins with a retrospect of the magazine at a time when the art movement was in its beginnings. The Art Amateur, it will be remembered, was founded by Montague Marks, of whom an interesting account is given as well as of his successor, John W. Van Oost, who is a descendant of the famous Flemish artist of the same name. Among the contributors to this number are Montague Marks, W. A. Rogers, Ernest Knauff, Rhoda Holmes Nicholls, David Malcolm, E. C. Dierbold, Cecilia Bennett, E. C. Darby, and Fannie Rowell Priestman.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—Lee & Shepard have removed to far more convenient and attractive quarters at 202 Devonshire Street, which are more in keeping with the new life that has been infused into their business under the management of W. F. Gregory.

CARTHAGE, N. Y.—Bennett & Stafford, book-sellers, have been succeeded by Holbrook & Son.

CLEVELAND, O.—Fred L. Becker, bookseller, has sold out.

CLINTON, MASS.—George E. Martin, bookseller and newsdealer, has made arrangements for the use of the entire store where he is now located as soon as the post office is removed.

GALESBURG, ILL.—P. J. Andrews, of the firm of Dellquest & Andrews, of El Paso, Tex., has, together with his brother, S. J. Andrews, opened an Eclectic Book Store here. Andrews Bros. is the style of the new firm, and the business will be under the management of S. J. Andrews.

EL PASO, TEX.—A. W. Dellquest, of the firm of Dellquest & Andrews, has leased his half interest in the Eclectic Book Store here to his partner, P. J. Andrews. Mr. Dellquest left El Paso on May 24 for New England, where he intends to start another Eclectic Book Store.

GRIFFIN, GA.—J. F. Huff, bookseller, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

HAMPTON, VA.—Ellison & Keator have opened a book and stationery store here.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—H. W. Beecher and J. Leo Kymer have purchased the interest of G.

Raynor in the business formerly run as Raynor & Co., and will conduct it under the firm-name of Beecher & Kymer. They assume all liabilities and will collect all outstanding bills.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The real estate, uncollected accounts and stock of books, stationery, etc., of Luzzell H. Fielding will shortly be sold at private sale.

MAYWOOD, ILL.—Mary T. Erwin, bookseller, has discontinued business.

PALESTINE, TEX.—W. E. Swift & Co. have been succeeded by W. E. Swift.

PEORIA, ILL.—John B. Drake, bookseller, seeks relief in bankruptcy.

ROCHESTER, MINN.—Earl Cook, bookseller, has been succeeded by Eugene Johnson.

SAN MARCOS, TEX.—Smith & Co., book-sellers, have been succeeded by Mrs. Frederica Lewis Smith.

SCRANTON, PA.—William Connell has disposed of the book and stationery stock formerly owned by "Beidleman, the Bookman" to Jonas Long's Sons, dealers in dry goods, etc., for a cash consideration. The stock is valued at $4500.

TACOMA, WASH.—G. Wolff & Co., booksellers, have been succeeded by J. Warren Martenis.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, LTD., have just ready "Mulhall's Dictionary of Statistics," thoroughly revised to November, 1898.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have in preparation for the English Classics Series Cooper's "Last of the Mohicans," edited by John G. Wright, principal of the Girls' High School, New York City.

THE OPEN COURT PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, will publish a new edition of De Morgan's "Elementary Illustrations of the Differential and Integral Calculus."

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish in the fall "The Life and Letters of Dr. John Donne, Dean of St. Paul's, 1573-1631," by Edmund Gosse; also "Imperial India," by G. W. Steevens, author of "With Kitchener to Khartoum."

M. F. MANSFIELD & A. WESSELS will publish shortly "'Black Canyon,' [by Samuel Osbourne,] 'Not I,' [by Robert Louis Stevenson,] and other Stevensoniana," reprinted in facsimile of the original editions, 250 copies on Enfield and 100 on Japan paper.

A. M. ROBERTSON, of San Francisco, Cal., has just published in an attractive pamphlet, "The Man with the Hoe," the poem written by Edwin Markham after seeing Millet's famous painting, and published originally in The San Francisco Examiner, January 15, 1899.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY, Philadelphia, have purchased from the New Amsterdam Book Company the plates and all of the sheet and bound stock of "Uncrowning a King," by Edward S. Ellis, and will add the book to their series of books for young people.

R. H. RUSSELL has just published two of Hauptmann's plays, translated by Mary Morison—"Lonely Lives" and "The Weavers." Hauptmann's poetic masterpiece, "The Sunken Bell," translated by Charles Henry Meltzer, will be published at once. These plays are issued uniform in style with Russell's edition of "Cyrano."

GINN & Co. have in preparation "Irving's Sketch-Book," edited, with introduction and notes, by Mary E. Litchfield. The notes give such information as is necessary to an intelligent study of the work. The introductory chapter makes clear the conditions under which Irving wrote, and defines his place in American and English literature.

BRENTANO's will shortly publish, under the title of "Queer Luck" a collection of stories of interest to every lover of the game of draw poker, by David A. Curtis, that attracted attention all over the country when they appeared, first at irregular intervals, in the Sunday edition of the New York Sun. They will publish at the same time a volume of short stories, entitled "A Silent Singer," by Clara Morris, the well-known actress.

THOMAS B. MOSHER, Portland, Maine, has just published an exquisite vest pocket edition of the Rubāiyāt in Fitzgerald's final revised translation, with his notes printed without abbreviation, and a preface by Nathan Haskell Dole, who has also contributed a pronouncing vocabulary of all Persian names in the translation. The matter is printed on Van Gelder's hand-made paper, and decorated with Chiswick head-bands and tail-pieces.

ARTHUR MACDONALD, specialist in the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., will shortly publish in a separate volume his "Experimental Study of Children, including anthropometrical and psycho-physical measurements of [1074] Washington school children, and a bibliography." This matter has already been published in chapters xxi. and xxv. of the Report of the Commissioner of Education for 1897-1898, U. S. Bureau of Education, whole number 248.

A CLEVER swindle is being worked with great success throughout Adams County, Pennsylvania. A woman book agent goes from house to house leaving books for examination, which are collected by a man the next day. Later the woman again appears, and upon being told that the man had taken away the sample books weeps copiously, says the villain has been collecting her books all over town, pleads poverty and accepts the compensation, which is generally offered.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish in the fall Winston Spencer Churchill's book, "The River War—an account of the recovery of the Soudan." The author will describe in exact military detail Lord Kitchener's campaigns from 1896 to 1898. Sixty drawings will be contributed by Lieutenant McNeil of the Seaforth Highlanders. The work will be edited by Col. F. Rhodes. The last two chapters will deal with the military lessons of the campaign and with the Imperial aspect of the recovery of the Soudan.

H. W. BRYANT, Portland, Me., has just published the famous oration pronounced by Victor Hugo on Voltaire on the one hundredth anniversary of the death of the philosopher. The translator is James Parton, author of the "Life of Voltaire." In a brief introduction it is stated that among the Americans present on that memorable May 30, 1878, when the oration was delivered, was the historian Thomas Wentworth Higginson, who has left an account of his impressions on the occasion in his "Cheerful Yesterdays."

CASSELL & COMPANY, Limited, have just ready an entirely new edition of Lewis Wright's "Practical Poultry Keeper." The first edition was published in 1867, its object being to give practical details with such clearness and simplicity that it might be "put into the hands of a person totally ignorant of poultry keeping, with the reasonable certainty that its instructions, if followed, would command success." The constant demand for rapidly succeeding editions would seem to prove that the work has fulfilled its intended purpose.

"THE TWO KINGDOMS," a work dealing with social questions of the day, has been lately written and brought out by the Rev. Thomas McGrady, of Bellevue, Ky. After publication the book met with the disapproval of Father McGrady's bishop, who ordered it suppressed, and the copies already printed to be expurgated by cutting out pages 127-140, and obliterating with ink twenty-four passages in the remaining text. A very small part of this expurgated edition is in circulation. A few copies are now in the hands of The Robert Clarke Company, and are selling rapidly as literary curiosities, at $1 each.

RAND, McNALLY & Co. will publish on the 15th inst. "The Romance of Graylock Manor," a story by Louise F. P. Hamilton. This work carries with it a pathetic interest, from the fact that the author, who was the wife of Major-General Schuyler Hamilton, U. S. V., died shortly after completing the manuscript, and was unable to experience the pleasure of seeing her first literary effort in print. They have just ready Stanley Waterloo's new novel, entitled "The Launching of a Man." This story describes university life in a vivid and fascinating manner, and possesses an atmosphere of the campus and schoolroom that will be appreciated by every "U" man in the country. The hero, Robert Sargent, passes successfully through college, and is then "launched" upon the ocean of American business life, where he battles long and arduously for supremacy. The book contains much humor, some pathos, and is interspersed with plenty of healthy sentiment.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish this month the first volume of the series of Oxford Commentaries. The series is under the general editorship of Walter Lock, D.D., Warden of Keble College, and Ireland Professor of the Exegesis of Holy Scripture. The first volume is that on Job with introduction and notes by Edgar C. S. Gibson, D.D., Vicar of Leeds. The object of each commentary is primarily exegetical. The editors will deal only subordinately with questions of textual criticism or philology, but taking the English text in the revised version as their basis, they will "try to combine a hearty acceptance of critical principles with loyalty to the Catholic Faith." In this way it is expected that the series may be of use both to the theological student and to the clergy, and also to the growing number of laymen and lay-women who wish to read the Bible intelligently and reverently. Other books of the series will be: Samuel I. and II., by L. J. Bebb; Ezekiel, H. A. Redpath; Wisdom, E. L. Delahey; St. Matthew, J. H. Bernard; St. Luke, W. K. Burroughs; St. John, H. Scott Holland; The Acts, R. B. Rackham; Romans, A. Robertson; Corinthians I., H. L. Goudge; Colossians, H. J. Riddelsdell; Ephesians, Walter Lock; Hebrews, E. C. Wickham; and St. James, R. J. Knowling.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. publish to-day "The Prometheus Bound of Æschylus," translated by Paul E. More, who has both the scholarship to insure accuracy and adequateness in his rendering, and the literary skill to give it an English form worthy of its classic original; "Every-Day Butterflies," a work for popular reading (with 8 full-page illustrations), by Dr. Samuel H. Scudder, well and widely known as an authority on butterflies; also, "A First Book of Birds," by Olive Thorne Miller, who describes birds' nests, the young birds—their growth and how they are fed, how they get their feathers, and are taught to fly and to do various other things—who, in short, provides for the layman a small encyclopædia of birds, full of information and exceedingly interesting, illustrated with many pictures of birds. They have just added to their Riverside Literature Series Schurz's "Abraham Lincoln," Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," and "Selections from the writings of Eleven English authors." They will publish shortly a volume entitled "A Dividend to Labor," by Professor Nicholas Paine Gilman, who conceives the dividend to labor (aside from wages, which he does not discuss) as direct or indirect. The indirect dividend will be the subject of the larger part of the volume, the closing portions of the book being devoted to the subject of profit sharing.

THE fifteen-volume edition of Kipling's works is not to be published by the Doubleday & McClure Company, as has been reported, nor, for that matter, by any one publishing house. It is an edition arranged for by the author and issued jointly by his authorized publishers—D. Appleton & Co., The Century Company, and the Doubleday & McClure Company. It will be marketed, as already announced by us, by the Book Department of the H. B. Claffin Co. The edition will comprise the following volumes: (1) "The Seven Seas"; (2) "Many Inventions"; (3) "The Jungle Book"; (4) "The Second Jungle Book"; (5) "Captains Courageous"; (6) "The Day's Work"; (7, 8) "From Sea to Sea," two volumes; (9) "Barrack-Room Ballads," "Departmental Ditties," and other verses; (10) "Plain Tales from the Hills"; (11) "The Naulahka"; (12) "Soldiers Three," "Story of the Gadsbys," and "In Black and White"; (13) "Life's Handicap," and "Stories of Mine Own People"; (14) "Under the Deodars," "The Phantom Rickshaw," and "Wee Willie Winkie"; and (15) "The Light that Failed." The set will also contain a biographical sketch by Professor Charles Eliot Norton, and will have a photogravure portrait of Kipling. The edition will be sold only in sets, and for the present the output is limited to 20,000 sets, which will retail at $15 a set.

L. C. PAGE & Co., Boston, have in preparation The Court Memoir Series, which will include the memoirs of Marguerite de Valois, written by herself; those of Henry IV. by the court historian of Louis XIV.; those of the Cardinal de Retz, and of Mme. de Montespan and the secret memoirs of the courts of the last three Louis who really reigned, written by the Duchess of Orleans, Mme. du Haussett, and the Princess Lamballe. These volumes will be illustrated with etchings, photogravures, and mezzotints. They also announce an edition of "The Imitation of Christ," with illustrations by Lawrence Housman, engraved by Miss Clemence Housman; "Saints in Art," by Mrs. Clara Erskine Clement, a new volume in the Art Lovers' Series; "Our National Music and Its Sources," by Louis C. Elson, and "Famous Violinists of To-day," by Henry C. Lahee, two new volumes in the Music Lovers' Series; "Great Actors" and "Famous Actresses," two volumes in a new series—The Stage Lovers—by Norman Hapgood; and "Poetry of American Wit and Humor," by Frederick Laurence Knowles, an addition to the Cap and Gown Series. There is to be a new Omar Khayyâm volume by Heron Allen, a companion to that published last fall, and comparing Fitzgerald's translation with the original Persian. Fitzgerald's "Salâmân and Absâl," an allegory from the Persian of Jami, will appear in a style uniform with the new Omar volume and will be edited by Nathan Haskell Dole.

HARPER & BROTHERS have in press a comprehensive history of "The War with Spain," by Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, which will be profusely illustrated; "Japan in Transition," by J. Stafford Ransome, whose work is a review of the progress, policy, and methods of the Japanese since the war with China, and is somewhat similar in character to Colquhoun's "China in Transformation," that attracted great attention last year; "That Fortune," a new novel by Charles Dudley Warner, which is said to be "a vivid and powerful portrayal of the life and character of the modern millionaire heiress;" "Puerto Rico: its Conditions and Possibilities," by William Dinwiddie, who was special correspondent for Harpers' Weekly in that island, and who gives much practical information to those who may contemplate settling, or investing capital, in this new possession of ours; "The Sixth Sense," a collection of nine short stories, by Margaret Sutton Briscoe; "Mrs. Millo Bush and other worthies—their recollections," a collection of humorous and whimsical stories, by Hayden Carruth, with illustrations by A. B. Frost and Marshall Wilder; "Lady Louisa Stuart—selections from her manuscripts," edited by A. J. Home, a book that is certain to appeal to lovers of biography and history, as Lady Stuart (who died in 1857 at the age of ninety-four) brings the reader into contact with court life at the close of the eighteenth century, as well as with the noted literary men and women of her day; "The Santiago Campaign," by an eye-witness—Captain John Bigelow, the brother of Poultney Bigelow; also "Cromwell's Own," a stirring story of the English Civil War, by Arthur Paterson.

FOREIGN NOTES.

DR. GARNETT's successor as keeper of the printed book department of the British Museum is Mr. G. K. Fortescue, son of the Dean of Perth. He has long been an official of the Museum, and is the author of more than one valuable index.

GREENING & Co., London, will publish shortly a volume entitled "Rudyard Kipling, the Man and His Work, being an attempt at an 'appreciation,'" by G. F. Monkshood. The volume will include a chapter on "the last and early works of Kipling."

ELLIS & ELVY, London, announce another volume of the Siddal edition of D. G. Rossetti's poems, to be issued early this month. The new volume will be entitled "Ballads," and will contain the three poems: "Rose Mary," "The White Ship," and "The King's Tragedy."

ELLIOT STOCK, London, has in preparation a volume that will be of great service to all who have occasion to look up the literature of any particular subject. It is entitled "A Contents Subject Index to General and Periodical Literature," and is compiled by Mr. A. Cotgreave, the chief librarian of the West Ham Public Libraries, assisted by several other gentlemen. It will include a supplement, an extensive list of useful works arranged under the subjects they treat of, and other matter of interest and service to authors, librarians, students, and indeed to every class of reader, and also to all who may require information on particular subjects.

PICK-UPS.

A CUSTOMER recently called for "When Chivalry Was in Bloom," and felt satisfied when he got "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

THE following, from a pioneer in West Africa, recently brought a ray of sunshine to the office of a New York publisher: "Dear sir I hope this may meet you in a good and happy state and a bright and happy new year likewise. Sir I beg most respectfully to let you send me per book post of your Ready Reckoner with another sweet story book of yours— I shall be very much glad indeed. I hope you are quite well you must do me that oblige for my Christmas and new year. — — — Trusting to hear from soon by the very boat I am yours humble servant — —, Fort Stuart Old Calabar Jan. 8. 1899."

MIXED METAPHORS.—One does not often find so many mixed metaphors thrown together in verse as in the following poem in Longman's, by Frank Ritchie:

The good wine needs no bush, yet I sow
My wild oats under the rose;
And I pluck sour grapes from a thorn in the flesh,
Where the crumpled rose-leaf grows.
I show the white feather that flocks together,
I pick the crow as it flies;
There's a flash in the pan of my Parthian dart,
And the green-eyed monster dies.
I eat the leek with a grain of salt,
Though my salad days are o'er;
I give the last straw to the golden calf,
To keep the wolf from the door.
I mounted my hobby to go to the dogs,
And I won my spurs as I passed;
For I scotched the earliest worm as it turned Down the long lane at last.
I have crossed the Rubicon, burned my boats,
As I fled from chimeras dire;
And the oil on the waters smelt of the lamp,
When I set the Thames on fire.
My geese are all swans, and their golden eggs
In a mare's nest mostly are laid;
And I fear I have let the cat out of the bag,
Though I meant to have belied her instead.

AUCTION SALES.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, estimates of addresses (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word (Cash).

✍ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

The Best Key to Educational Books.

THE American Educational Catalogue
For 1899,

whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its thirtieth year, and that

Thousands of Copies are Sold Every Season,
 claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school books.

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most complete order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue is made entirely new each year, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and all new books (ready or to be ready for the Fall) are added in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS:

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements:

*With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5.00 ;
 per 1000, $40.00.*

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page ; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or for $1.00 if plate is sent.

Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

The regular Educational Number of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY" will be supplied at 50 cents per copy in leatherette.

THE PUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL

For 1899 (Twenty-Seventh Year.)

Large 8vo. With Duplex Index.

"The Publishers' Trade List Annual" for 1899 will contain:

The latest CATALOGUES OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm-names and smaller lists at the end of the volume.

These Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase or sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction, we are now applying it to all copies of the "Annual." Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut.

Only those subscribing and forwarding amount now are entitled to subscription rate of $1.50; after publication day, and on orders for which we have to collect after that date, the regular price will be $2.00 net.

Remittances should be made by Check, Money Order on New York, or Registered Letter, as we cannot be responsible for any losses. Receipt for remittance will be sent by return mail.

 Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be despatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for $1.20 per copy extra.

"One of the most time-saving and profitable instrumentalities used by the trade."

—AMERICAN NEWS CO.

We have also the agency in this country for "WHITAKER'S REFERENCE LIST." A few copies are left. The price for the present is $5.00 net, in two volumes. Those desiring this useful work of reference are advised to order at once, as it will shortly be out of print.

HOLBEIN

used it with perfect independence. As is pointed out in the volume on HOLBEIN, in Knackfuss's admirable MONOGRAPHS ON ARTISTS, Holbein was the only one among the painters of his day who reached a perfectly free and grand style, freed himself from the petty tastelessness of those around him, and conceived the human figure in its perfect truth and beauty. He was one of the first masters of religious historical painting, and his beautiful and distinct coloring has not been attained by any other Northern painter. This side of Holbein's character is especially emphasized by Prof. H. Knackfuss, whose text is based upon recent authorities, and illustrated with care and discrimination.

THE KISS AND ITS HISTORY.

By CHRISTOPHER NYROP, PH.D.,

Professor of the Roman Languages and Literature at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, Officer of Public Instruction of France; also Honored by the Gold Medal for Merits of Roumania.

This pretty volume has been, without a single exception, most favorably received by the leading newspapers of the United States, from which we quote only a few extracts:

"Prof. Nyrop writes of the kiss with the fervor of a poet, the judgment of an epicure, and the learning of a pundit."—The Chicago Times-Herald.

"It is so replete in its historical facts, admirable in its analysis of objects and motives . . . as to be a delightful study for any reader."—The Inter-Ocean.

"It is a pretty little volume . . . and gives a great deal of curious information. Prof. Nyrop writes pleasantly, and knows how to border along delicate themes without offence."—The Chicago Chronicle.

" . . . Interesting and not nauseating."—The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"If Prof. Nyrop has overlooked any kiss that ever happened, it will be detected by some one who knows more about the subject than I do."—The Louisville Courier-Journal.

"It is now possible for young and romantic people to learn all that is known about kissing, and in book form."—The Boston Globe.

NOTES IN SEASON.

BRENTANO's have acquired control of the two excellent collections entitled "In Friendship's Name" and "What Makes a Friend," collected and compiled from various sources by Volney Streamer. Each volume is tastefully bound in Japanese vellum. A thoroughly revised edition of both books is preparing.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready Justin McCarthy's "Reminiscences," in two volumes, with portrait; "When the Sleeper Wakes," by H. G. Wells, who takes his readers into the twenty-first century, and describes, in the most realistic manner, the customs of the people, their manner of living, and the queer machines in general use; "The Dreamers: a Club," by John Kendrick Bangs; also, "Cromwell's Own," a tale of war and adventure in the early days of Cromwell's career, by Arthur Pater-son.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish on the 16th inst. "A Cosmopolitan Comedy," a novel, by Anna Robeson Brown, dealing with the Spanish "secret service" in the late war, and the comic yet seriously performed duties of a Spanish spy in securing a map of New York harbor after the Spanish fleets had been destroyed. They will publish shortly three Spanish books—"Cervantes' El Cautiro," an episode from "Don Quixote," the text of which is based on the edition of the Royal Spanish Academy, and is edited, with an Introduction and notes, by Professor Eduardo Tolrá y Fornes, of the University of Barcelona; "El Si de Las Ninas," a comedy, by Leandro Fernandez Moratin, also edited by Professor Tolrá; and "The De Tornos Method of Learning the Castilian Language," by Professor Alberto de Tornos, of New York City, who has had a broad experience in the teaching of his native language, both to Spaniards and to foreigners.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish to-day a work entitled "What Shall We Think of Christianity?" by Professor W. N. Clark, of Colgate University; "Authority and Archaeology, Sacred and Profane," a volume prepared by various experts, such as Dr. Driver and Messrs. Griffith, Haverfield, and Headlam, designed to summarize the contributions made to archaeology in this century, edited by David G. Hogarth; "The United States and Foreign Powers," a popular narrative, brought down to the present, by William E. Curtis; also, a new edition of James W. Alexander's interesting volume, "Princeton—Old and New." They have just imported "The Cathedral Builders—the Story of a Great Guild," by Leader Scott, and "Old Clocks and Watches and Their Makers," an historical and descriptive account of the different styles of clocks and watches of the past in England and abroad, by F. J. Britten. Both volumes are adequately illustrated.

DODD, MEAD & Co. announce that they will shortly publish the only authorized edition of the early novels of Henry Seton Merriman, author of "The Sowers," "In Kedar's Tents," "Roden's Corner," etc. It will include "The Phantom Future," "Young Mistle," "Prisoners and Captives," and "Suspense." The volumes will be printed and bound alike, making a uniform edition. They have been revised, condensed, and in part rewritten by Mr. Merriman, and are to be brought out by his direction and with his authorization. As some of these books were written years ago, and are now considered by Mr. Merriman immature and below the level of his more recent work, it has been his desire that they should not be further circulated, and at some trouble and expense to himself he arranged but a short while ago to have them withdrawn entirely in England. As, however, two of them have been recently reprinted here, Mr. Merriman feels compelled, in justice to himself, to have issued a revised and authorized edition, hoping that the many readers who have shown evidences of their appreciation of his later work will clearly understand that these books were the product of his years of immaturity. Dodd, Mead & Co. will publish in this country Mr. Merriman's forthcoming novels, one of which, entitled "The Isle of Unrest," is announced for issue in 1900. It is the only story written by him since "Roden's Corner."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.). D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Th. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ps. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

- Adams, J. Coleman. Nature studies in Berkshire; with il. in photogravure from original photographs by Arthur Scott. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 8+225 p. O. cl., $4.50. [1787]
A collection of prose pictures of skies and woods and fields, intermingled with the reflections of a writer who is at once a philosopher and a poet—one who enjoys profoundly the beauties of the Berkshire hills. Illustrated with sixteen full-page photogravures.
- Addison, Jos., and Steele, R. Sir Roger de Coverley, and The Spectator's Club. N. Y., Cassell & Co., Ltd., 1899. 3-192 p. T. (Cassell's national lib., new ser., v. 6, no. 305.) pap., 10 c. [1788]
- Æschylus. The Prometheus bound of Æschylus; tr., with introd. and notes, by Paul Elmer More. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 3-107 p. D. cl., $1. [1789]
The subjects of the introduction are: "Origin of Greek tragedy," "Moral aspects of Greek tragedy," "Life of Æschylus," "Production of the play," and "Significance of the play."
- *Aldrich, Julia Carter, ["Pitresia Peters," pseud.] Hazel Bloom: [poems.] Buffalo, N. Y., C: Wells Moulton, 1899. c. 213 p. 16°, cl., $1. [1790]
- Allen, Grant. Miss Cayley's adventures; il. by Gordon Browne. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. 7+344 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1791]
Miss Cayley is a Gorton graduate, who by her stepfather's death is left almost penniless—two-pence being her whole capital. She is a clever, spirited, and unconventional girl, who makes up her mind to go round the world. She first hires herself as companion to a "cantankerous old lady," going with her to Germany. From the beginning she has numerous adventures, that are often very amusing.
- Baird, S. W. Graded work in arithmetic. In 5 books. Bk. 5, Grammar grades. N. Y., American Book Co., [1899.] c. 356 p. D. cl., 65 c. [1792] Completes a well-graded and progressive series of arithmetics, and furnishes to grammar school pupils a text-book carefully planned to strengthen their power of mathematical reasoning, presenting a range of topics sufficiently comprehensive to familiarize the students at the same time with the important practical applications of the science of numbers.
- Barnes, Annie Maria. Tatong, the little slave: a story of Korea. Richmond, Va., The Presb. Committee of Pub., [1899.] c. 2-252 p. il. D. cl., $1. [1793]
- Barzilla, Jacob. She beats the devil. Los Angeles, Cal., C: W. Palm Co., 1898. c. 12+330 p. il. S. cl., 50 c.; pap., 25 c. [1794]
Emma Riley is the heroine of a series of sensational incidents, said to be founded on facts. The most remarkable episode is her saving a man from the scaffold, because of this intervention and on account of her ministry to her blind sister, supposed to be possessed with evil spirits, it was said of her "She beats the devil." Questions of heredity are dealt with.
- *Becker, G. J. Ornamental penmanship, analytical and finished alphabets and draughtsman's letter book. Phil., J: Jos. McVey, 1899. c. 40 p. obl. 4°, cl., $2. [1795]
- *Bell, Ridley Husted. Ada Deene, and other poems. Buffalo, N. Y., C: Wells Moulton, 1899. c. 132 p. 16°, cl., $1. [1796]
- *Blake, W. William Blake: seventeen designs to Thornton's "Virgil"; reproduced from the original woodcuts, 1821; with vignettes by Selwyn Image, taken from The Century Guild Hobby Horse, 1884-1892. Portland, Me., T: B. Mosher, 1899. 60 p. 8°, bds., Van Gelder pap., 450 copies, net, $2; 25 copies on Japan vellum, net, $7.50. [1797]
- Boardman, G. Nye. A history of New England theology. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1899. c. 2+814 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1798]
The term New England theology designates a system of theology developed in America between the years 1730 and 1830. The initial purpose was resistance to influences which it was feared were leading orthodox believers away from the truths of the Gospel. The present work had its origin in a series of lectures prepared for an elective course in Chicago Theological Seminary, in which institution the author is a professor. The aim is to trace the development of the "New Divinity," formerly so called, through the century 1730-1830.
- Booth, Mrs. Eliza M. J. Gollan, ["Rita," pseud.] Good Mrs. Hypocrite: a study in self-righteousness. N. Y., F. M. Buckles & Co., 1899. c. 2-284 p. D. cl., $1. [1799]
The central figure is a middle-aged Scotch woman, unbeautiful of face and ungainly of form, whose life has been devoted to so-called Christian work. She is hard, selfish, and cruel, seeking only her own comfort and self-aggrandizement. She becomes housekeeper for her invalid brother, and makes his life miserable. Her hypocrisy and innate wickedness are ruthlessly laid bare by the narrative.
- Brockelmann, C. Syrische grammatik, mit litteratur-chrestomathie und glossar. N. Y., Lemcke & Buechner, 1899. 13+190 p. D. pap., $2.35; cl., $2.70. [1800]
- Burton, J. Bloundelle. Fortune's my foe: a romance. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. '98, '99. 3+245 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no 265.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c. [1801]
The heroine is born on board a British man-of-war, of which her father is captain, during the siege of Cartagena off the Spanish West Indies, in the year 1739. Her father meets his death from a stray shot, and her mother dies shortly afterward. Ariadne, named after her father's ship, grows up a beauty and a great heiress. An attempt by a nobleman, ruined in purse and name, to marry her for her money has long and disastrous consequences. Life on a British man-of-war during a war with France adds many adventurous episodes to the story.
- Butler, H: Montagu, D. D. Public school sermons. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1899. 4-271 p. D. cl., $2. [1802]
Sermons preached at Marlborough College, Harrow School, Eton, Radley, and many other celebrated institutions. Some of the subjects are: Christian greatness; The rich and the poor; Bluster and faith; Easter Day; Public school esprit de corps; Son of the Highest; and The attraction of the cross.
- Cavanagh, Rev. W: H. The word Protestant in literature, history, and legislation, and its introduction into the American church. Phil., G: W. Jacobs & Co., 1899. c. 9+188 p. D. cl., net, $1. [1808]

"The object of the following pages is to trace the evolution and development of an idea, or set of ideas, which have been generally denominated by the title Protestant, and which, in the light of present knowledge, must be regarded as one of the curiosities of history."—Preface.

Christian, J. T., D.D. Baptist history vindicated. Louisville, Ky., Baptist Book Concern, 1899. c. 20+223 p. D. cl., $1. [1804]

Offers many new facts bearing on the history of the English Baptists in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, culled by Dr. Christian from material in the British Museum, from civil and ecclesiastical court records, old churches, libraries, etc.

Churchill, Winston. Richard Carvel; il. by Carlton T. Chapman and Malcolm Fraser. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. c. 9+588 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1805]

The author sets his scene between the years 1785 and 1789—in colonial Maryland, on the high seas, in London, and again in Maryland. The novel is a love story first of all, and is related by Richard Carvel in his old age to his grandchildren. Carvel was first a gallant lieutenant under John Paul Jones, and in love with Dorothy Manners, the famous Annapolis beauty of Washington's day. The famous men of colonial times are introduced, and on the other side of the ocean, in brilliant society scenes, Fox, Walpole, Garrick, Lord Baltimore, and others figure.

"The substance of the present work was written towards the close of the year 1875 for the new edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.' Having been abridged and mutilated contrary to the author's wishes before its publication there, he resolved to print it entire. With that in view it has undergone repeated revision, with enlargement in different parts, and been made as complete as the limits of an essay appeared to allow."—Preface.

Griffis, W: Elliot. America in the east: a glance at our history, prospects, problems, and duties in the Pacific Ocean. N. Y., A. S. Barnes & Co., 1899. c. 8+236 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1818]

Dr. Griffis is well known as a writer upon Oriental themes. In this volume, besides chapters showing our naval history and exploits in Asiatic waters up to the day of Dewey, and others on our new fellow-citizens in Hawaii, he gives in epitome the history of China, Japan, and Korea—revealing the true condition of the Far East in its social and political relations. He then shows what American heaven has already done to transform the mass and to bring in the new era. Copious information about the countries bordering on the Pacific will be found here presented in trustworthy form.

Gwynn, Stephen. The repentance of a private secretary. N. Y., J. Lane, 1899. 5+194 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1820]

An episode from modern English life, rather cynically narrated. Gerald North's repentance is not of the kind that carries a moral with it. In his capacity of private secretary to a prospective M.P. he falls in love with his employer's wife, his love being returned. The events leading up to this point, and the final action of the chief characters, is the story.

The author, Rabbi Samson Raphael Hirsch, was for many years the most prominent representative of the Jewish clergy in Frankfurt-on-the-Main. His work is a complete treatise on the philosophy of Judaism, its doctrines in regard to God, the world, the mission of mankind, and of Israel, the aims and purposes of the Mosaic legislation, and the religious and social problems which affect the Jewish people in the modern age. It is in the form of a correspondence of nineteen letters between a young Israelite of inquiring disposition, rather inclined to scepticism, and his friend, a learned and zealous rabbi named Naphtali (Ben Uziel).

The purpose of the lectures is to strengthen moral convictions and to promote legal interests. The titles are: Teleology, or moral causation; Essence, concrete existence, and attributes of natural law; Human acts and animal motions. Freedom of the will; Utilitarianism; Justice; The individual; The family; The state; Property; On taxation; Conflict of rights; Combinations of capital and labor organizations; Legal ethics. Contains also rules for guidance of a lawyer.

Hourst, —. French enterprise in Africa: the personal narrative of Lieut. Hourst of his exploration of the Niger; tr. by Mrs. Arthur Bell, (N. D'Anvers.) N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1899. 16+520 p. por. il. map. O. cl., $6. [1824]

A record of an adventurous voyage down the Niger, from Timbuctu to the sea, such as has never before been accomplished. It adds largely to the knowledge of the Niger itself, its basin, and the various tribes occupying the riverside districts. It is remarkable that, in spite of much opposition, Lieutenant Hourst managed to keep the peace with the natives from the first start from Timbuctu to the arrival at Bussa. He brought his party through without the loss of a single life. The expedition started on October 10, 1896, from Kayes, and got back to France on December 12, 1896.

James, C. C. Practical agriculture. American ed.; ed. by J. Craig. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 7+208 p. il. D. cl., 80 c. [1828]

The purpose is to aid the reader and student in acquiring a knowledge of the science of agriculture as distinct from the art of agriculture; that is, of the knowledge of the why, rather than a knowledge of the how. The science of agriculture may be said to consist of a mingling of chemistry, geology, botany, entomology, physiology, bacteriology, and other sciences, in as far as they have a bearing upon agriculture. The aim has been to include the first principles of these various sciences, and to show their application to the art of agriculture.

A romantic story of Prussia, with its scene laid in recent years. The young hero is half English by birth and a lieutenant in the Prussian navy. Having drunk too freely on the imperial yacht, he insults the future emperor. As the prince cannot meet him in a duel, the lieutenant is advised to end his life in some way. It is given out that he has died of a fever. After his funeral he disguises himself and becomes an actor under a new name. For five years he lives a life of adventure, when he is carried back to Prussia in mistake for another man and is forced into a fight for a throne. A beautiful woman is mixed up in this intrigue, and the hero has innumerable stirring adventures.

- An elementary nature study intended for children. It describes birds' nests, the young birds, their growth and how they are fed, how they get their feathers, and are taught to fly and to do various other things. It tells of the language of birds, their food, their migrations, their mental and moral development, their structure, their economic value to mankind. It instructs how to attract them to visit about our houses and how to study their ways.
- Milne, W: J. Plane and solid geometry. N. Y., American Book Co., [1899.] c. 384 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1840]
- Effort is made to introduce the student to geometry by means of intentional steps; but the somewhat fragmentary and unsatisfactory result of such teaching is supplemented by demonstrations, in consecutive order, of the fundamental propositions of the science. Every theorem has been introduced by questions designed to lead the student to discover the geometrical concept clearly and fully before a demonstration is attempted.

- Vascovia, a mythical kingdom of eastern Europe, is the point towards which the events of this story concentrates. Three members of the reigning house, whose gypsy strain of blood led them to be wanderers, are first introduced as travellers in South America. They go through a wonderful series of adventures with unknown tribes, etc. The second part of the book is taken up with the attempt of the Princess of Vascovy to regain the throne for her son. This is the reason for a second series of exciting and novel incidents. By the author of "God's prisoner."

- Aims to give a description of Cuba as it appeared to the author when, as Special Commissioner of the United States, he was sent by President McKinley to report on its industrial, commercial, and financial condition, soon after the signing of the protocol of peace, August 12, 1898. The political future of Cuba is discussed, and the various views entertained by those capable of judging are carefully considered. In the important work of municipal reconstruction and sanitary reform the author had the benefit of Colonel Waring's report, and also of reports by E. Sherman Gould and Ricardo Narganes, and others. The chapters on banks and currency, the Cuban debt, revenue and expenditures, and the amended tariff and internal taxation, may be regarded as official. In addition, presents the latest statistics concerning transportation and navigation, and also concerning the industries of Cuba, such as sugar, tobacco, mines and mining, agriculture and stock, timber and fruit.

- Dr. Scudder is well and widely known as an authority on butterflies. The present book is not written for the scientific student, but for popular reading. It includes familiar accounts of sixty or more of the commonest butterflies taken in the order of the season. The stories of the butterflies are written in a pleasing manner, and the descriptions of them and of their habits have the clearness that comes from the fullest knowledge. The popular names are given, also the scientific.

- The volumes of "American citizens series" are intended to serve as political and social handbooks. The plan is to give a systematic outline of subjects, in which general divisions and relations shall be made clear, problems shall be studied, and the criteria for solving them shall be pointed out. The first issue is founded on over twenty-five years of personal investigation, reports of state bureaus, and is in a measure drawn from lectures delivered in the Catholic University of America, and from articles in The Forum, North American, etc. Each chapter is headed by a bibliography leading to additional material, both secondary and primary, for future study. Professor Wright is United States Commissioner of Labor and author of "Industrial evolution of the United States," etc.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 10, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications. All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

HARPER & BROTHERS AND S. S. MCCLURE COMPANY FORM AN ALLIANCE.

ONE of the surprises of the week in the book world was the announcement of an alliance between Harper & Brothers and the S. S. McClure Company. Though the negotiations leading to the arrangement entered into by the two houses have been in progress for some time, no one excepting the members of the firms concerned were aware of the contemplated movement until late on Saturday afternoon, the 3d inst., when the formal legal preparations necessary to be made could no longer be kept secret. And even now, as we go to press, very little more than the fact that such an alliance has been made is known. It is tacitly admitted that John W. Harper will be elected a second vice-president of the S. S. McClure Company, and that J. Henry Harper and H. Sleeper Harper will also become officers of the S. S. McClure Company. S. S. McClure, on the other hand, is to become a vice-president of Harper & Brothers, and his associates, John S. Phillips, Frank N. Doubleday, and Albert B. Brady will hold minor offices in the firm of Harper & Brothers. The management and principal offices of both firms will remain unchanged.

The following statement of John W. Harper is printed by authority:

"We have some plans looking toward developments in the magazine world in a field in which Mr. McClure has been very successful. Mr. McClure believes, too, that our facilities would enable us to carry out together certain important publishing plans of his since we have one of the largest plants in the country and issue more periodicals than any other house. So, finding a number of points of common interest, we decided to work together. To that end several of our people have become interested in the S. S. McClure Company, and Mr. McClure, with his associates, has become interested in Harper & Brothers. We regard Mr. McClure and his associates, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Brady, and Mr. Doubleday, among the most successful men in the publishing world, and, although we had the very highest opinion of their abilities before we entered on this matter, an investigation of their business showed that they had done a great deal more than even we had imagined. We therefore welcome Mr. McClure and his associates, and while we do not contemplate any marked changes and will manage the business in the same conservative manner that has characterized the house, yet the new developments which this will bring us will no doubt inure very much to our benefit."

Mr. McClure sailed for Europe on the 3d inst. In his absence his principal associate and partner for years, Mr. Phillips, has made a statement to the effect that "the arrangement is an alliance rather than a consolidation. We have had certain publishing plans that it seemed could be better carried on by a coalition of this sort. It is impossible to say more than that the alliance is made with a view of realizing certain specific publishing plans. We cannot at this time speak definitely about these plans. Announcements will be made as occasion arises." This is substantially all that can be learned concerning the matter. In fact, we understand that the details of the alliance have not yet been completed, and no announcement of plans will be made public until they have been matured.

INTERNATIONAL PUBLISHERS' CONGRESS.

THE third International Publishers' Congress was formally opened at Stationers' Hall, London, on the 7th inst. All of the prominent British, Continental, and American publishers were present. Among the leading American delegates were representatives of Harper & Brothers, D. Appleton & Co., D. C. Heath & Co., G. P. Putnam's Sons, and A. S. Barnes. John Murray, president of the Publishers' Association, presided. In his address he said that one object above all others was earnestly wished, namely, the drawing within the fellowship of the Berne convention of the nations, which still hold aloof. If, for example, he said, they could do anything to persuade their good friends and cousins of the United States, who are yearly becoming a more prominent part of the readers and writers in the world of letters, to adhere to the convention they would by this act alone have earned a high place in the history of this successful congress. In making this statement he was assured of the sympathy and assent of the American representatives, and he was happy to see present a large body of the enlightened and educated men they represent.

BLIND MAN'S LAW FOR BOOK AGENTS IN MAINE.

WM. J. RYAN, a blind man of Portland, Me., who gains his living by peddling an almanac about the State, found his business being forestalled by some enterprising book agents. Ryan, according to the Bookseller, Newsdealer and Stationer, "was enterprising himself. He had a law drafted excluding book agents from the list of those who might peddle without a license, and including in the list disabled veterans and blind men. On his next business trip he took with him a petition asking the legislature to pass this law, and obtained, it is said, 22,000 signatures to it. On the strength of this the law went through. So now book agents, subscription agents, students, teachers, and ambitious scholars have to pay a tax of from $3 in towns of less than 1000 inhabitants, to a maximum of $20 for larger cities to sell books. The law works a great hardship to students and scholars who have long looked to this business as a means of raising the wind to carry them through college and seminary, and an outcry is beginning to be heard from all quarters, especially as there is a Supreme Court decision making a tax on drummers selling goods from samples as agents of firms located in other States an interference with interstate commerce, and therefore unconstitutional. So this 'blind man's' law simply penalizes citizens and publishers of the State of Maine, and is a recorded testimony to Mr. Ryan's astuteness and enterprise."

THE GROWTH OF THE FIRM OF D. C. HEATH & CO.

Few more striking instances of continuous growth can be found than that shown by the publishing house of D. C. Heath & Co. This growth is remarkable also for its extent. The house began with a list of thirteen books and eleven pamphlets. To-day there are more than eight hundred titles in their catalogues each one of which has an influence and character of its own. For nearly fourteen years the house has published an average of more than one new book a week. One year eighty-five new books were issued. Judged by the amount of the annual sales, the house, we are informed, has for some years ranked third among the great school-book publishers.

The home offices of the house in Boston have been outgrown four times. The house has just taken possession of the complete floor of one of the largest office buildings in Boston, overlooking the Common and adjoining the old public library building. This building faces on three streets and provides space for the offices and part of the shipping department of the business. Every modern facility has been provided for the speedy and prompt transaction of the large and growing sales of the house.

On entering from Roylston Street the visitor finds himself in the spacious show-room where the publications of the firm are displayed. From the cushioned seats in the bay windows he may enjoy an unrivalled view of the State House, Boston Common, and of the suburban cities and towns. Comfortable chairs and tables scattered about invite him to read and inspect the books. A well-appointed reception-room, where teachers can write letters, talk to the principals or agents, and meet their friends at their ease, is an attractive feature of the vast floor. Facilities are also provided for the editorial rooms, the bookkeepers' rooms, record rooms, stenographers' rooms, the private offices of the partners, and the offices of the shipping department.

One of the characteristic features of the decoration of Mr. Heath's private office is the covering of the walls with a beautiful green bookbinder's cloth with dado of blue. The desk and chairs and the whole of the furniture of Mr. Heath's office are of mahogany, all the rest of the establishment being furnished with oak. On the walls are hung portraits of many of the authors who publish with the house, some of them being the originals of those which adorn their books.

In this building there are over fifteen hundred running feet of bins, besides two large double aisles of stacks to provide for the smaller shipments to customers. The bulk of the large shipments, often amounting to ten or fifteen carloads, is necessarily sent direct from the bindery to its destination.

A BOOKSELLER STRIKES WHISKEY!

WHEN one finds in every bookstore from Portland, Maine, to San Diego, California, books with the imprint of Rand, McNally & Co., he would naturally think that to keep all these irons in the fire the entire devotion of a corps of workers, from the stoker in the engine room to the grand master whose word decides the fate of a trembling author as he presents his manuscript, would be required. But out here in Altadena, California, we find one of the finest fruit ranches in that region, a beautiful home, and not far away at Miranda several hundred thousand dollars invested in fruit culture by Andrew McNally. The lemon, orange, grape fruit, and olive add yearly a generous sum to his bank account. Then Mr. McNally strikes a minor key in his profession, and, while a purveyor of literature for the brain, seeks a sound body for his constituents. Hence he has invented the grape bitters to cure gripe, drive away malarial diseases, and tone up the system, thus making the reading of his books far more enjoyable, by adding to the physical welfare of their readers.

But "what we were about to say" is that in sinking a well at La Miranda, about 600 feet from the surface, he struck a stream of whiskey. The miners drank thereof, were refreshed, and a regular war-medicine buffalo dance celebrated the wonderful discovery. They all drank and were filled. Fearing his illustrious firm of sober and honest men, remembering that he belonged to a noble fraternity, that East and West he was recognized, or should be, as a temperance man by his peers, he ordered his men to dig deeper. They obeyed and came to a vein of pure, sparkling water, and there has never been a whiskey dance since on his premises.

In a journey across the continent and from Coronado Beach to Portland, we find "David Harum" in every bookstore, and young and old, business and professional men, asking the same question, Have you read "David Harum"? It is as popular here in the extreme West as in the East.

BOOK STEALING.

CONTINUING the article on "Book Stealing," the first part of which was printed in the issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for May 6, Albert Sim says: Robberies of books perpetrated at the warehouses of publishers, binders, booksellers, and dealers may be classed under two heads: thefts committed by the staff of the publisher, binder, or bookseller, or by the assistant of houses doing business with this staff; and thefts perpetrated by the public, habitual or casual customers.

A publisher notices that books are disappearing in quantities from his warehouse, without being able to trace either in his correspondence or in his books the reason for their absence. He scents out a systematic swindle. The guilty person must necessarily have accomplices in order to pass on his goods. Who, then, are these receivers? How can they be discovered? One method that I saw used not very long ago consists of marking in secret, very faintly in pencil (in the same manner as they stamp the books of a library on a given page,) in one and the same place, the volumes that are likely to be taken. As booksellers or dealers who buy and stock books in large quantities are not relatively very numerous, and as they have for the most part a specialty, a certain class of books that they usually deal in, conjecture is soon circumscribed within narrow limits, and the receiver, with the marked volumes in his possession, cannot deny his complicity.

About twenty years ago a dozen assistants of the chief music publishers conceived a device as simple as it was ingenious for defrauding their principals. They carried on a barter among themselves, and by this means did without, or nearly suppressed, that compromising intermediary, the receiver; in other words according to the dictum at their trial, they acted as receivers for each other.

To enumerate all the methods employed by unscrupulous customers or professional thieves to defraud booksellers and dealers in old books would be endless. Let us confine ourselves to the most ordinary.

A lady who at last acquired a legendary reputation among the dealers on the Quay—"The lady with the umbrella," as they called her—contrived to let fall into her umbrella, which was propped against her person, closed but neither rolled nor fastened, the book which she selected; and her choice—"cruelle enigme!"—fell almost exclusively upon the novels of Paul Bourget.

Another type not less notorious is the amateur of first editions, a little lame individual who never went about without the help of a stick, a beautiful rattan-cane with chased silver knob, and was never seen without a heavy morocco portfolio. He used to go from one bookseller to another where he knew he should find first editions of the best modern novels, and as soon as the volumes he called for—fifteen or so at least—were piled up on the counter, and as he was on the point of looking at them, he let fall his stick. The shopman out of politeness towards a customer, and out of consideration for an invalid, immediately stooped to pick it up, and this half-second sufficed for the little man to hide away two or three copies in the portfolio upon the counter beside him.

In one of the sonnets which he has published under the title of "Légendes du Livre," François Fertault, a fastidious scholar and ardent bibliophile, has celebrated the misdeeds of a certain Dr. R. in the shops of Lyons. In order to obtain cheaply choice works published in several volumes, Dr. R. used to purloin one of the volumes, and then, eight or ten days later, he would return and haggle over the work—"which, as you see, is not complete!"

"Alors à prix bas, il têche qu'on le cède, Pour un dépareillé, bonne affaire. On accède."

And so the trick succeeded, and the work was complete once more.

It is notorious that people who steal books are found in every grade of society. There are street-boys trained to steal books, and these do their work under the supervision of a chief. One of these was lately arrested in the neighborhood of the Odéon; he used to lie in wait regularly in the garden of the Luxembourg, beside the railing that runs along the Rue de Médicis, and from this place he watched over his pupils, who used to prowl about under the galleries and bring him their plunder as they got it. He knew books with a reputation, was careful to acquaint himself with new books and those that made a hit, and he pointed these out to "his men." All that they carried off sold well.

Amongst thefts of books that have made a sensation in the last year or two we must not omit to mention those of the Abbé B., who held the post of professor at an important educational establishment in Paris. There is hardly a bookseller or old dealer on the left bank of the Seine who has not received frequent visits from this ecclesiastic. Shopmen who at last succeeded in spying out his manoeuvres and giving their principals information were within an ace of being suspected themselves and dismissed. Unfortunately for him the Abbé B.—who, by the by, belonged to the category of thieves noticed at the beginning of this article, "who keep and do not sell again"—had a mania for geology; he was caught in the act of stealing specimens of minerals from the École des Mines; his dwelling was searched, and everything discovered. Shortly after, the Abbé B., who left Paris and took refuge in Normandy, was said to have been found dead at the foot of a cliff.

According to many booksellers, it is towards the end of the month, that is to say, when purses are empty or getting low, that these thefts are of most frequent occurrence. What are termed "library books," books of current reference, encyclopædic works, are those which thieves lay hands upon by preference. Larousse's large dictionary is notably an object of cupidity. The weight of a book is not always an obstacle to its abstraction: witness "The man with the Inverness cloak," as he was called, whose memory is still green at Hachette's establishment. This particular individual, who always came dressed in a voluminous cloak with a cape, and who had already aroused suspicions, probably well-founded, succeeded one fine day in slipping into the lining of his cloak twelve volumes of Reclus' "Géographie," which represents the respectable weight of eighty pounds or more, and does credit to the tailor who supplied such stout, well-sewn material.

But the neatest trick was that practised some years ago upon a bookseller in the Rue Soufflot. A passer-by sees one morning amongst the books exposed outside this shop a copy of Littré's Dictionary, five bound volumes, in perfect condition, marked eighty francs. There is no shopman on duty, nobody looking after the place, the pavement is deserted. Quickly he seizes the five books, slips them under his arm, thrusts the compromising ticket with the price into his pocket, and enters the shop of the very man to whom the Littré belongs—belonged, rather—and proposes to him that he should buy them. "A Littré?" the tradesman interrupts; "I can't do with that; I have one on show there, and two others yonder." However, scenting an exceptionally good bargain, he changes his mind. To drag these enormous and heavy quartos about the streets, thinks he, this poor devil must be hard up. Moreover, with a Littré there is no risk, it will always sell. "I cannot give you more than thirty francs," says he; "I have already three Littrés. It is solely to oblige you that I offer that." "Say thirty-five?" "No; thirty; no more." The vendor is in great need of money; he accepts; pockets the sum—and disappears! The "Littré dodge" is not yet forgotten in the trade and the book world generally.

In spite of its frequency, and save in some quite exceptional cases, book stealing is without doubt the least lucrative of all thieving. Leaving out of question those large and important works called "library books" just referred to; omitting some novelties and especially rare volumes, certain illustrated books, some first editions, the treasures of bibliophiles—stolen books sell at a ridiculous price. The reduction of sixty per cent. to which a large book dealer owned, is generally a great deal exceeded in wholesale and second-hand sales such as follow upon embezzlement and theft. It was at a reduction of ninety per cent. that one of our noted publishing houses cleared off, some years ago, a quantity of copies de luxe; and it was upon almost the same terms that the splendid stock of M. Jouast, one of the last printers of the old school, was parted with. As to the book at 3 fr. 50 c., the discount, except in the case of a novelty, is still more considerable. At sales of publishers' stock effected of late, the price of volumes marked 3 fr. 50 c., except for authors with a high reputation, fluctuated between 0 fr. 05 c. and 0 fr. 30 c., that is to say, they underwent a loss of from ninety-one to ninety-eight per cent.

A PHENOMENALLY SUCCESSFUL BOOK.

ACCORDING to the latest reports over three million copies of "In His Steps," by Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, have been sold in this country and Great Britain. Mr. Sheldon is a New Yorker, having been born at Wellsville in 1857. He was educated at Phillips Academy, Andover and Brown Universities, and was graduated from Andover Theological Seminary in 1886. After a summer in Europe he entered the ministry and began preaching at Waterbury, Vt. In 1888 he accepted a call from the newly established Central Congregational Church in Topeka. His congregation in a short time grew from 60 to 300 members. Dissatisfied with the apparent good his sermons were doing his congregation, and wanting to preach an every-day Christianity in an attractive form, he became convinced that a novel would more nearly accomplish his object than a series of abstract sermons, and "In His Steps" was the result. It was written, a chapter each week, and as each chapter was completed it was read the succeeding Sunday. The story was completed in the spring of 1897, and during the following summer was published as a serial in a Chicago publication. In November of the same year it was first published in book form by the Fleming H. Revell Company.

The immense sale of "In His Steps" in England is doubtless due largely to the fact that twenty English firms were pushing the book at one time. An English publication says that "in four months its circulation has far surpassed the total circulation of all of Mrs. Henry Wood's novels in forty years. 'East Lynne,' which has had a larger circulation than any other English copyright novel, has only reached 480,000 copies, and it is said that the total number sold of William Black's novels is not more than 300,000. 'Three Men in a Boat,' a remarkably popular book, reached 160,000; 'Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush,' 90,000; 'A Prisoner of Zenda,' 70,000, and 'The Christian,' the most popular book of 1897, sold to the extent of 123,000 in that year. But 'In His Steps' has reached a sale of 3,000,000 copies." Three of Mr. Sheldon's books, published in England at a penny, ran through an aggregate edition of 900,000 in three weeks.

TENNESSEE TEXT-BOOK LAW.

THE City Attorney of Chattanooga, Tenn., on the 5th inst. rendered an opinion to the effect that Chattanooga is not included in the uniform text-book law of Tennessee. The city attorneys in Memphis, Knoxville, and Nashville have rendered similar opinions. This is the outcome of a fierce fight now in progress between the American Book Company and Governor Benton McMillin. The Governor caused the Legislature to pass a law excluding the publications of the American Book Company from all public schools in the State. The company will test the law in the courts. If it is declared unconstitutional, Governor McMillin will call a special session of the Legislature to pass a new act along the same line.

THE SIX BEST-SELLING BOOKS IN MAY.

ACCORDING to the Bookman the six books which have sold best in the order of demand during the month of May are:

1. "David Harum." Westcott. D. Appleton & Co.
2. "When Knighthood was in Flower." Cas-koden. Bowen-Merrill Co.
3. "Mr. Dooley." Dunne. Small, Maynard & Co.
4. "Red Rock." Page. Charles Scribner's Sons.
5. { "The Day's Work." Kipling. Doubleday & McClure Co.
"Cruise of the Cachalot." Bullen. D. Appleton & Co.
6. "Aylwin." Watts-Dunton. Dodd, Mead & Co.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JOHANN STRAUSS, "the waltz-king," who wrote "The Beautiful Danube," and hundreds of other captivating waltzes, died on the 8th inst., at Vienna, where he was born February 12, 1825.

MISS LOIS KNIGHT, one of the best-known plate engravers in the United States, died at the New York Hospital on the 1st inst. She was born at Utica, Mich., in 1867. After graduating from the high school of her native town she came to New York and took a course of art study at the Cooper Union, after which she entered the service of a large engraving establishment in Providence, R. I., as its only woman apprentice. Her last work was a book-cover design for an edition of Rudyard Kipling's novel, "The Light That Failed."

EDWARD W. NASH, the well-known bookseller, died at his residence, 1356 Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., on the 2d inst. He was born in New York City in 1838, and when quite a young man entered the employ of William Gowans. He served in the war with the Seventh Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y. On his return he again associated himself with Gowans, whose confidential and trusted clerk he remained until Gowans died, when Nash became the executor of his estate. After he had liquidated the estate he went into business on his own account. Mr. Nash was a quiet, unassuming man, faithful in the smallest as well as the most important affairs of life, and a staunch friend. Though a sufferer for years from the distressing disease that finally carried him away, he was always cheerful and patient.

ELISE POLKO, the well-known German writer, died at Munich, Bavaria, May 15. She was born at Leipzig, March 31, 1832. Her early inclinations were for the stage, and, after a thorough musical training in Berlin and Paris, she made her debut in grand opera at Frankfurt-on-the-Main. After her marriage to Polko she retired from the stage and devoted herself to literature, in which field she won for herself international renown. Her first book, a volume of "Musical Fables," was published in 1852. Translations of her "Musical Sketches" and her "Reminiscences of Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy" were among the first of Frederick Leypoldt's publishing ventures. Her published writings form upwards of fifty volumes, one of which, "From Garden and Field," was written in English. She was a sister of the famous African explorer Eduard Vogel.

REUBEN ALDRIDGE GUILD, for nearly fifty years librarian of Brown University, died at Providence, R. I., May 14. Dr. Guild was born at West Dedham, Mass., May 4, 1822, and graduated from Brown University in 1847. In the following year he was made librarian of Brown University, succeeding Prof. Charles C. Jewett. He held this position until July, 1893, when he was made librarian emeritus. He was the author of a "History of Brown University," "Chaplain Smith and the Baptists," "Footprints of Roger Williams," "Life of James Manning," "Account of the Writings of Roger Williams," and "Librarian's Manual." He was a frequent contributor to Norton's Literary Gazette and Publishers' Circular, and assisted Norton in compiling his literary almanacs, if he did not actually perform all the work on them. He also edited several of the publications issued by the Narragansett Club.

SISTER MARY FRANCIS CUSACK, known as the "Nun of Kenmare," died on the 7th inst., at Leamington, Eng. "Sister Mary Francis Clare" and "The Nun of Kenmare" were two of the appellations applied to Miss Mary Francis Cusack by the Roman Catholics. She was born in 1830 near Dublin, Ireland. When young she entered an Anglican sisterhood, but became a Roman Catholic and joined a Franciscan community known as the Irish Poor Clares. In 1861 she founded a convent of Sisters of Peace at Kenmare, where she devoted her labors toward relieving the peasantry of that district, one of the poorest in Ireland. In 1885, while visiting the United States, she established a similar house in Jersey City. She raised large sums of money for the relief of the poor in Ireland during the famine in the eighties. She wrote a number of books, the first of which, "An Illustrated History of Ireland from the Earliest Period," appeared in 1868. Among other works from her pen were "Advice to Irish Girls in America," "A History of the City and County of Cork," and "From Killarney to New York." In 1888 her autobiography, "The Nun of Kenmare," was published.

CHARLES HENRY LAMPOR, of the Boorum & Pease Company, died at his home, 42 W. Ninety-third Street, New York, May 25. He was born in Canandaigua, N. Y., in 1833, and was the son of W. H. Lampor, who, in the fifties, represented Ontario County, N. Y., in Congress. Mr. Lampor entered the book business of Nafis & Cornish in New York. In 1852 he became a member of the firm of Cornish, Lampor & Co., which succeeded the firm of Nafis & Cornish, and shortly after he was the senior member of the firm of Lampor, Blakeman & Law. In 1854 his firm sold out its business and he became a member of the firm of Sheldon, Lampor & Blakeman, the predecessors of the present firm of Sheldon & Company. In 1856 Mr. Lampor became one of the partners of the firm of J. Q. Preble & Co., manufacturers of stationery. Then he became treasurer of the J. G. Shaw Company, blank-book manufacturers, which position he retained when the company was succeeded by the National Blank-Book Company. He remained with the last-named company until about 1884, when he joined the Boorum & Pease Company, blank-book manufacturers, New York, where he remained until he died, and where, as superintendent of the New York salesroom of the company, his work was exceedingly valuable because of his practical knowledge of the business and his wide acquaintance with the trade throughout the United States.

AUGUSTIN DALY, the famous theatrical manager and playwright, died suddenly at Paris on the 7th inst. Mr. Daly was born at Plymouth, N. C., July 20, 1838. In 1854 he came to New York, and during the following four years wrote a number of dramatic compositions, at least four of which were produced by W. E. Burton, Mrs. Wood, and Laura Keane. In 1859 he began to write for the New York Sunday Courier, under the pseudonym of "Le Pelerin." Later he succeeded James Otis as dramatic critic of The Evening Express. He also contributed to The Weekly Citizen, Beach's Sun and the New York Times, and wrote stories for The Chimney Corner. He first came into prominence through his "Leah, the Forsaken," which he adapted from the German for Kate Bateman. His first original drama, "Under the Gaslight," was produced in 1866. Its companion, "A Flash of Lightning," was produced a year or so later. He became manager of the Fifth Avenue Theatre in 1869, since which time he was always prominently before the public. In 1893 he opened Daly's Theatre in Leicester Square, London. Mr. Daly also wrote a life of Peg Woffington, and published the prompt-books of all the famous old plays revived at his theatre, with historical and critical introductions by William Winter. As contributions to theatrical history Mr. Daly published, in limited editions, with rich illustrations, "A Portfolio of Players," written by Brander Matthews, Laurence Hutton, H. C. Bunner, William Winter, and E. A. Dithmar; "A Daughter of Comedy," by William Winter; and "Memories of Daly's Theatres," by E. A. Dithmar. His private library, formed since 1878, when his first collection of books was sold, includes many "grangerized" books, chiefly theatrical. It also contains good copies of all four of the Shakespeare folios, some of the original Ireland forgeries, a copy of the first edition of "Paradise Lost," and many other treasures.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

ON the Queen's birthday Henry M. Stanley was made a Knight Grand Cross of the Bath.

THE authorship of the charming love-letters issued last spring in book form in Paris with the title "Amitié Amoureuse," and brought out in translation as "Love in Friendship," has just been revealed. The Countess de Nohy acknowledges the fact that they were collected from the papers left by the late Guy de Maupassant. New editions of the work in Paris as well as the English edition, brought out here by Meyer Brothers' Company, will in the future bear the name of the author of "Pierre et Jean" on the title-page.

SOME efforts, good-natured or otherwise, having been made to identify "Fiona Macleod," the lady takes this hunting up of her own personality in high dudgeon. She has written to her publishers, Archibald Constable & Co., London, that she is very much annoyed and that no one has so far identified her, and she concludes "that her name is her own and that all she asks is the courtesy of good breeding and common sense—a courtesy which is the right of all, and surely imperative of a woman acting by and for herself."

MARK TWAIN is intending to return to America at the end of this year and settle in Florida. He will be in London for a short time in the summer and then stay in Scotland for a while. He has lately been at work on a book which is, he says, a portrait gallery of the remarkable people whom he has met from his childhood upwards, including, like "Chambers's Biographical Dictionary," monarchs and desperadoes, poets and lawyers. But this new book is not to see the light of day for one hundred years, because, to use his own words, "a book that is not to be published for a century gives the writer a freedom which he could secure in no other way."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

BEGINNING with June, the International Publishing Company, of New York, will publish the Jewish Scientific Library, a quarterly magazine devoted to popular science. The initial number is an exposition of the discovery of the law of gravitation, by Sir Isaac Newton, beautifully printed in Hebrew, the work of a learned and competent pen.

The Anglo-Saxon, Lady Randolph Churchill's gilt-edged quarterly magazine, will very likely be published in this country by John Lane some time during this month. There is a report that a Boston firm has copyrighted the title The Anglo-Saxon for a cheaper publication in that city, but it is not expected that the sale of Lady Randolph Churchill's magazine in this country will be interfered with on that account. As already noted the subscription price will be $24 a year, single numbers costing $6. Each number is to contain 250 pages and will be profusely illustrated.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

EDOUARD ROUYEYRE, 76 Rue de Seine, Paris, has just issued the second volume of the new enlarged edition of his "Connaissances Nécessaires à un Bibliophile." The volume treats of the format of books, miniature books, very large books, books printed or written in microscopic characters, collating, abbreviations used by bibliographers to indicate the condition of a book, signs and abbreviations used in ancient books, and imprints and dates. The volume is illustrated with many full-page plates, some of them in colors, and cuts in the text. (Pt. 2, 8+220 p. 8°, pap., 6 francs.)

A BIBLIOGRAPHIC club has been formed at Chicago, whose object it is to prepare and publish special bibliographies. One of the first of these will be a "Chicago Bibliography," or a list of works indicating the bibliographical riches of the libraries of Chicago. The active members of the club are A. G. S. Josephson, of the Crerar Library, who is chairman pro tem.; C. Hastings, of the University of Chicago, who is temporary secretary; C. W. Andrews, librarian of John Crerar Library; A. H. Hopkins, assistant librarian of John Crerar Library; Professor Karl Pietsch, of the University of Chicago; J. Dieserud, librarian of the Field Columbian Museum; F. H. Hild and C. B. Roden, of the Chicago Public Library.

"A LIST of the Book-Plates Engraved on Copper by Mr. Edwin Davis French" is the title of a catalogue of great value to collectors of ex-libris, prepared by Paul Lemperly, of Cleveland, O., and published by him in a limited edition for subscribers. Mr. French is easily first in the rank of book-plate engravers, and the list shows 133 exquisite specimens of his art. The volume also contains a portrait of Mr. French, a view of his studio at Saranac Lake, and four book-plates printed directly from the original coppers. The volume, furthermore, is a charming specimen of the work of the Marion Press, at Jamaica, L. I.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE FREDERICK A. STOKES CO. will publish next week Robert Barr's new story, "The Strong Arm."

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish at once William Edward Tirebuck's new romance, "The White Woman."

D. VAN NOSTRAND COMPANY have just ready a revised and enlarged edition of Gould's "Primer of the Calculus," the first edition of which was exhausted in a short time.

THE HOME PUBLISHING COMPANY will publish on the 15th inst. Gunter's new story, "M. S. Bradford, Special," said to be a dramatic story of the copper trust.

W. W. DENSLOW is engaged in illustrating a book for young people by Frederick Haum, author of "Mother Goose in Prose," which is to be ready for the Christmas trade.

A. N. MARQUIS & Co., Chicago, have just ready "Whose Who in America, a dictionary of living men and women in the United States who have gained more than local distinction."

THE Book Department of the H. B. Claflin Co. has bought from Charles Scribner's Sons an edition of 100,000 copies, bound in paper covers, of Richard Harding Davis's "Soldiers of Fortune."

THE AMERICAN UNION LEAGUE SOCIETY has published a volume entitled "Facing the Twentieth Century," by Rev. Dr. James M. King, General Secretary National League for the Protection of American Institutions.

C. F. PAGE, for several years secretary of L. C. Page & Company, of Boston, and for the last year their New York representative, has resigned his position with the company. F. T. J. Nunan will hereafter represent the house in New York.

UNITED STATES CONSUL JOHNSTON writes from Utiilla, Honduras, that he has persuaded the school board on the island to adopt American school-books. The English language, not Spanish, is taught in the schools, and heretofore the books used were published in England.

L. C. PAGE & Co. have bought from the trustees of Lamson, Wolfe & Co. "Cyrano de Bergerac," translated by Howard Thayer Kingsbury; "Mademoiselle de Berny," by Pauline Bradford Mackie, and "Le Lyttle Salem Maide," by Pauline Bradford Mackie.

JEAN BOUSSOD, MANZI, JOYANT & Co. have just published the first part of the "Figaro-Salon, 1899," with text (in French) by Arsène Alexandre. The double-page supplement is a reproduction in colors of J. Benoit-Levy's powerful painting, "Le Matin du 14 juillet, 1789."

DODD, MEAD & Co. have in preparation a volume entitled "Reminiscences of the Life of Edward P. Roe," to which are added sketches and other papers of an autobiographical nature. The text is edited by his sister, Mary A. Roe. They will publish shortly a volume of essays by David S. Meldrum.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish at once Brassey's Naval Annual for 1899. The important features of this year's volume are "The United States Navy," by W. H. Beehler, U. S. N.; "The Spanish-American War," by G. S. Clarke; and "Operations of the Gunboats During the Nile Expedition."

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish shortly "Thoughts on the Collects for the Trinity Season," by E. Romanes; also, "The Correspondence of M. Tullius Cicero," presented in chronological order and with numerous notes, together with critical essays, by Robert Yelverton Tyrrell and Louis Claude Purser, both of Trinity College, Dublin University.

THE History Committee of the Grand Camp, Confederate Veterans of Virginia, passed a resolution on the 5th inst. condemning the use of Flske's history in the schools of the South on the ground that the book is unfair to the South and Confederate soldiers in the Civil War; the literary excellence of the book, however, was admitted to be above reproach.

GINN & Co. will publish in July "An Introduction to Rhetoric," by William B. Cairns, of the University of Wisconsin. The author has laid the main stress on style; but he has given considerable space to invention, believing that students should be taught to choose and arrange what they have to say on a subject, at the same time that they are learning to write effective sentences.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish early in the fall an important work under the title of "Famous Homes of Old England and Their Stories." It will be edited by A. H. Malan, and will comprise descriptions of twelve notable homes, namely: Alnwick, Blenheim, Charlecote, Penshurst, Hardwick, Chatsworth, Lyme, Cawdor Castle, Belvoir Castle, Battle Abbey, Holland House, and Warwick Castle. Among the writers are the Duke of Marlborough, Lady Dudley, Lady Newton, Lady Warwick, Hugh Campbell, and A. H. Malan. There will be nearly 200 illustrations, for the most part full-page.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH COMPANY have just published "A History of New England's Theology," by George Nye Boardman, Professor Emeritus of Systematic Theology in Chicago Theological Seminary. The author traces the "New Divinity," formerly so called, in its development through the century between 1730 and 1830, through its Berkshire and Hopkintian eras to its final form as New England Theology.

THE first move towards making permanent the history of the Cup Races in book form is made by R. H. Russell, who will bring out shortly a history in pictures, by L. A. Shafer, of the winning and defence of the America's Cup. The pictures, reproduced from large wash drawings, show the most interesting point of each of the races. There is no type, save a concise note of explanation of the different challenges with dates and results, accompanying each of the pictures.

THE personal library of the late William F. Poole, LL.D., the noted librarian and author of Poole's "Index to Periodical Literature," is to be sold en bloc. Dr. Poole's literary tastes ran in the line of Americana, and it is in this particular that his library of about 3000 volumes and a large number of periodicals excels. The collection would be a valuable addition to some new library desiring to strengthen its department of Americana. Information and lists may be obtained of William F. Poole, Jr., 500 The Temple, Chicago.

CASELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, will publish on the 13th inst. "Dainty Breakfasts—what to Order and how to Cook it," by Phyllis Browne; also, "A History of England, from the Landing of Julius Cæsar to the Present Day," by H. O. Arnold-Foster, M.P. They will publish shortly the "Royal Academy Pictures" for 1899, and a new issue of "Drawing in Charcoal and Crayon for the Use of Students and Schools," by Frank Fowler, with an introduction by Charles De Kay, the well-known art critic, and secretary of the National Arts Club.

G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY announces "The Naked Truth," by Albert Ross; "The Slave of the Lamp," by Henry Seton Merriman; "The Sacrifice of Silence," by Edouard Rod; "A Princess of Vascovy," by John Oxenham, author of "God's Prisoner;" "Hats Off," by Arthur Henry Veysey, and "The Man Who Dared," a historical romance of the time of Robespierre. The second edition of "Waters That Pass Away" is sold out, and a third edition is in press. "Gettysburg, Then and Now," with 125 full-page half-tone illustrations, is just off the press, and offered to the subscription trade.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & CO., Philadelphia, will publish shortly Dr. Henry C. McCook's new book, "The Martial Graves of Our Fallen Heroes in Santiago de Cuba." The initial purpose of the book is to give an exact picture of the condition of the battlefields of Santiago de Cuba after the conflict. In connection with this, the book gives graphic and accurate descriptions of the various battlefields. This is done not only by the verbal descriptions of a personal observer, but by numerous photographs, drawings, maps, and charts. Moreover, a concise account is given of the various battles in which the fallen heroes lost their lives.

MEYER BROTHERS & Co. will publish shortly a limited edition, printed from special type, of de Bury's "Philobiblon," with introduction and notes by Charles Orr, librarian of the Case Library of Cleveland. They will also bring out a new story of Balzac, so far unpublished, translated by Edgar Saltus, and illustrated in colors, reproduced from the water colors of one of the best known French artists. The edition will be limited to 400 copies. The copies nos. 1 to 25, on Japan paper, have already been subscribed for. An extra set of the plates printed on China paper will add to the value of the book manufactured and printed in America.

THE S. S. WHITE DENTAL MFG. CO., Chestnut Street, corner Twelfth, Philadelphia, will soon issue "Interstitial Gingivitis, or so-called Pyorrhœa Alveolaris," by Eugene S. Talbot, M.D., D.D.S. This is an extended analysis of all the dental and pathologic problems involved in so-called pyorrhœa alveolaris from the preliminary to the closing stages of the disease with exfoliation of the teeth. The work is based on original research, conducted during the past four years in seven different chemic and pathologic laboratories, by different observers of admitted skill in pathology, bacteriology, and chemistry. The experiments have been conducted on sheep, dogs, and man. The results are excellently shown by clear micro-photographs, (5 x 6½), which form an important feature of the book.

HENRY HOLT & Co. will publish shortly "The Hooligan Nights," the central figure of which is the veritable Alf. Hooligan, known as "The Hooligan," and leader of the notorious Hooligan gang of London. His remarkable though actual experiences are set down by his quondam acquaintance, Clarence Rook, an English journalist. Alf. is a Cockney with a humor and vernacular worthy of Chevalier. His life might seem grimy and depressing, but he took it in a mirthful, philosophical way. He was burglar, thief, and counterfeiter. He tells of many thieves' devices. His reminiscences include interesting criminological information, told with the charm of fiction, and the book, it is said, does for the criminal quarters of London what Hugo's "Notre Dame de Paris" did for those of Paris. They have in preparation an important historico-geographic work entitled "Russia in Asia," by Alexis Krausse.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY has just published a work by Professor A. H. Keene, of the Anthropological Institute, in London, entitled "Man, Past and Present." In his preface to "Ethnology," which formed the first volume of the Cambridge Geographical Series, of which the present work is also a part, a promise was held out that it might be followed by another dealing more systematically with the primary divisions of mankind. The present volume appears in part fulfilment of that promise. In the "Ethnology" were discussed those more fundamental questions which concern the human family as a whole. In the present work these divisions are treated more in detail, with the primary view of establishing their independent specialization in their several geographical zones, and at the same time elucidating the difficult questions associated with the origins and inter-relations of the chief sub-groups, and thus bridging over the breaks of continuity between "man, past and present." They will publish immediately "Landmarks in English Industrial History," by George Townsend Warner, who in this work brings out the salient features of England's industrial and commercial progress in the past; also, a "Source Book of American History," in which the editor, Professor Albert Bushnell Hart, of Harvard, presents 139 extracts from writers contemporary with the events which they describe, with introductions on the uses of sources, materials for source study, and subjects for topical study from sources.

FOREIGN NOTES.

A NEW volume of poems by Pope Leo XIII. will be published in the fall.

M. H. SPIELMANN, the historian of Punch, in criticising the series of papers now appearing in The Critic, which profess to identify and describe Thackeray's unknown contributions to Punch, cites no fewer than seven contributions which are wrongly attributed to Thackeray, and adds the names of the real authors.

GRANT RICHARDS, London, will publish at once "Francesco Crispi: Insurgent, Exile, Revolutionist, and Statesman," a story of the great Italian politician and patriot, by W. J. Stillman. The book will be a character study and a history of the times in which Crispi lived. In an appendix will be given an important item of correspondence between Crispi and Mazzini, and the volume will include two portraits.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusives of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 times a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

[In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.]

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard their columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

THE KISS AND ITS HISTORY.

By CHRISTOPHER NYROP, PH.D.,

Professor of the Roman Languages and Literature at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, Officer of Public Instruction of France; also Honored by the Gold Medal for Merits of Roumania.

This pretty volume has been, without a single exception, most favorably received by the leading newspapers of the United States, from which we quote only a few extracts:

"Prof. Nyrop writes of the kiss with the fervor of a poet, the judgment of an epicure, and the learning of a pundit."—The Chicago Times-Herald.

"It is so replete in its historical facts, admirable in its analysis of objects and motives . . . as to be a delightful study for any reader."—The Inter-Ocean.

"It is a pretty little volume . . . and gives a great deal of curious information. Prof. Nyrop writes pleasantly, and knows how to border along delicate themes without offence."—The Chicago Chronicle.

"Interesting and not nauseating."—The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"If Prof. Nyrop has overlooked any kiss that ever happened, it will be detected by some one who knows more about the subject than I do."—The Louisville Courier-Journal.

"It is now possible for young and romantic people to learn all that is known about kissing, and in book form."—The Boston Globe.

Bound in cloth with gilt top on fine paper, price, $1.00; bound in paper cover, price, 95 cents. Liberal discount to the trade. Address

THE PUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL

For 1899 (Twenty-Seventh Year.)

Large 8vo. With Duplex Index.

"The Publishers' Trade List Annual" for 1899 will contain:

The latest CATALOGUES OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm-names and smaller lists at the end of the volume.

These Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase or sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction, we are now applying it to all copies of the "Annual." Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut.

Only those subscribing and forwarding amount now are entitled to subscription rate of $1.50; after publication day, and on orders for which we have to collect after that date, the regular price will be $2.00 net.

Remittances should be made by Check, Money Order on New York, or Registered Letter, as we cannot be responsible for any losses. Receipt for remittance will be sent by return mail.

 Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be despatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for $1.20 per copy extra.

"One of the most time-saving and profitable instrumentalities used by the trade."

—AMERICAN NEWS CO.

We have also the agency in this country for "WHITAKER'S REFERENCE LIST." A few copies are left. The price for the present is $5.00 net, in two volumes. Those desiring this useful work of reference are advised to order at once, as it will shortly be out of print.

"THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY,"

59 DUANE STREET,

P. O. BOX 943, NEW YORK.

Prisoners and Captives

has reached its ninth thousand since it was first published in this country six weeks ago. It is in all respects worthy of the author's masterpiece, "The Sowers," and was issued by Mr. Merriman's English publishers at twenty-one shillings. Our price, $1.25.

The Measure of a Man can be recommended to all women and about fifty per cent. of mankind. The hero is strongly but consistently drawn, and his veneration and worship of his lady love and the sacrifices he makes in her behalf are sure to recommend him to the friendly consideration of the gentler sex. E. LIVINGSTON PRESCOTT is the author. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

Martyrs of Empire is a novel dealing in an intelligent, interesting, and convincing manner with the "open air" life of the ranchmen of Australia. To the reader whose experience has been partly in out-of-the-way places "Martyrs of Empire" will make a particularly strong appeal. It is a stirring story and at the same time good literature. HERBERT C. MCILWAIN. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

The Angel of the Covenant

By J. MACLAREN COBBAN, is a work of rare distinction. It is a great historical picture, in which fact and fancy are welded together in a fine realization of the spirit of the time of which it treats, the 17th Century. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.
